PUBLISHERS FOREWORD

This eighteenth annual survey and report on the private schools has increased importance at this time because of the many schools that have been eliminated and the many changes in those that continue. This, the second year of the depression for the private schools, is the hardest and bitterest year they have known.

AN UP TO DATE GUIDE NEEDED

The economic situation of the past year has resulted in more changes in the private schools, naturally enough, than during any other previous similar period. Decreased tuitions, increased need for scholarships, work allowances and concessions have brought their income to its lowest ebb. Trustees in retrenching have made more changes in the personnel of the faculty and some schools have been obliged to modify their programs.

So it becomes the function of this guide for parents not merely to report the changes that have occurred, but so far as may be to interpret them and the tendencies that are likely to produce further changes.

WHO USES THIS HANDBOOK?

It is for parents that this guide book is published. School masters appreciation is incidental. For we have long emphasized that we are interested in the schools only insofar as they meet the needs of the parents and their boys and girls. And from parents the frequent and spontaneous expressions of appreciation are heart-warming if not purse-filling. Characteristic are such letters as the following:

"I formed a very high opinion of the book from the casual references I had opportunity to make to it during the time that it had been lent to me by a friend. Please send me the SUMMER CAMP Handbook and the new PRIVATE SCHOOL Handbook. I shall wish to consult you concerning camps and schools." F. W. W., New York. . . . "For some time I have had an old directory of PRIVATE SCHOOLS which I found most useful and instructive. Will you let me know where I could procure a new copy? I am interested because I have a son, 17, who ought to go away to school." E. B. C., New York. . . . "I have been using your Handbook until it is practically worn out, in my search for schools for my wards. It is necessary to get a new copy. I enclose my check for $6.00." A. O. S., Massachusetts. . . . "Having heard much about your work and your world wide reputation I would like your advice in placing a friend of mine in an American school. This friend is Chinese, about sixteen years old, and has a very fair knowledge of English " J. S. C , Peking, China. . . . "At the American Consulate in Rome I saw your Handbook of PRIVATE SCHOOLS I would be very much obliged if you will send me a copy of this book Enclosed please find check." Mrs. F. M. G., Perugia, Italy.

A REFERENCE BOOK

It is now twenty years since we first began to collect material for the first edition of this Handbook In the course of its eighteen editions it has become a useful compendium for reference for educational executives and others interested in education in a broad way. All those who advise parents in regard to their children's education use it as a reference book, whether they are connected with our public schools or with the information bureaus of social welfare organizations, advertising mediums, hotels, department stores, libraries, Ask Mr. Foster offices, Travelaide, or the offices of college and university deans of admission. In almost every private school office a copy of this Handbook will be found on the desk, and a long file of the red books on the reference shelves.

HOW TO USE THE BOOK

The Table of Contents shows the layout. The Index of Schools refers to all schools described and listed in the book

In the Supplementary Lists, pages 621-708, are schools of lesser importance, or of which little is known or from which no recent information has been received The Classified Lists, pages 709-786, are not indexed. Including the more representative schools under each classification, but without claim to being exhaustive, they are intended to be helpful in finding the type of school desired.

The arrangement throughout is geographical beginning with the northeastern states and proceeding southeast and west. Cities and towns are arranged alphabetically under each state. Schools in each community are likewise alphabetical.

But parents in deciding on a school for a son or daughter generally wish to make comparison of similar schools that would meet their needs in a restricted region. The grouping of such schools together with pictorial representation in the School Announcement Section, pages 801-930, has been found so generally useful that parents turn first to this section in making preliminary choice.

EDITORIAL PREFACE

This year, as for several years past, the Handbook has been reset in new type. The changes are so numerous that it is impossible to use plates and unprofitable to save any portion of the old type.

INTRODUCTORY CHAPTERS

Each year in the first hundred pages an attempt is made to put school patrons in touch with the advance in educational thought. Notable this year has been the increased freedom in bringing to light defects and pointing ways to better methods in the teaching of civics, history, economics and all that has to do with national and social welfare. Fortunately there are educational leaders in the private as well as the public schools who, in speeches and books, are proving constructive. In orienting ourselves to current educational thought we have endeavored to distinguish between the main current and the eddies.

What is the future of private initiative in education? Is the socialization of our school system to go further? What would education lose by becoming completely socialized? Are there any experiments of the past that indicate some of the dangers that lie in the complete socialization of the race? Are there possibilities that cannot be achieved along that route?

What knowledge is of most worth in these 1930's? Does the same coin pass at par today as in Huxley's or Plato's time? If there is anything new worth getting, are there new tools to be used in getting it?

As yet there is no tariff on ideas. May we not get some from other countries? May we not benefit from the high tuition costs others have paid? Why is it education lags so far behind? How shall the masses be prepared to make best use of their new leisure? Are there radically new objectives and wholly new fields open to education? All these and many other questions which are in the minds of foremost educators today we have attempted to survey and to review in the books of greatest educational import of the past year.

WRITING UP THE SCHOOLS

In writing up the schools for the descriptive text, we have always attempted to interpret them discriminately to their patrons. But school people still jockey with us to change the phrasing, to reword their notices. The headmistress of a fashionable New York girls school of excellence, which we characterize in colorful terms, "character and poise are the key notes . . . It is more difficult for the nouveau riche to enter than to pass through the eye of a needle",—urges that we substitute something that would be equally true of any other two score,— "the aim of the school comprehends high academic standards and the physical health of each girl . . . the traditions of the school are continued with certain modifications "

Here is the ecclesiastical head of a leading boys school, as good a publicist as Peter the Hermit who started the tourist business to Palestine. We recognize these good qualities with the phrase "he has a genius for publicity". His right hand man modestly asks that we substitute "he has a genius for public virtue and welfare". And we are asked to testify to his devoutness, an attribute of his private life into which we could scarcely delve. It is the outward manifestations as they reveal the inner man that we are concerned with in writing for the advisement of parents.

REPORTING STATISTICALLY

The statistical data in this book is as reported by the schools for 1933-34. Conditions seemed to necessitate special effort on our part, noted on pages 98 and 620, to present to parents only up-to-date statistics.

The inaccuracies of the figures given in some cases, and the honesty of other school heads in reporting actual statistics have caused some feeling between the schools which we hope will be a means of leading to greater accuracy in the future. College Entrance Board examinations candidates are supplied by the secretary of that Board

FOREIGN SCHOOLS

The list of foreign schools interested in enrolling American boys and girls is shorter this year because many of the schools that appealed particularly to Americans have dropped out of sight since the value of the dollar has made them relatively expensive.

NEW SCHOOLS

New schools, though not so numerous as in the past, show an increase over those planned and opened in 1933, and some with good backing and shrewd management are continuing. This is particularly true in new centers of population or interest. The new ranch schools are getting on their feet, pushing down their roots. The better of them are here to stay.

SELECTING THE SCHOOL

It was to help fathers and mothers in perhaps their most important choice that this guide book for parents was conceived. The haphazard way in which schools had been selected, without reliable, comparative knowledge, without consideration of adjusting the personality of the boy or girl to the right environment, seemed wasteful of human potentialities.

DIFFICULTIES IN CHOOSING

Just because a man graduated from a certain school thirty years ago is no reason why his son should attend the same school. The father doesn't necessarily know what the school is today. Just because your neighbor's son or the son of the president of your bank attends a certain school is no indication that the school will prove a good one for your son.

While school catalogs are more reliable in their statements than they were a decade ago, it is still difficult to arrive at the truth from a comparative study of them. Some understate and others over-rate the school they represent. And how is the parent to know? It takes intimate knowledge over a long period of years and extensive comparative study to judge fairly.

GUIDANCE NEEDED

Both parents and school people, especially in the last decade, have come to realize that in the placing of children in schools expert guidance is needed. Competent advice can come only from those who are free and unprejudiced, who not only know the schools intimately, their characteristics and atmosphere, but the personality of those who control them.

Competent advisers should be interested in boys and girls and have intimate knowledge of their needs not only through personal experience and contacts, but from the findings and developments of modern adolescent psychology.

Such knowledge of schools can be arrived at only by comparative methods,— the intimate experience of many who pool their knowledge. Such a group cooperating and working harmoniously may neutralize each others prejudices. Even then, year after year, attitudes, opinions arrived at, must be constantly tested and revised in the light of new information. And this requires an organization with adequate contacts and competent reporting. Representatives should visit schools, and school people should visit the advisers office.

HELPING THE PARENT

Something like twelve hundred families annually over a period of years have appealed for assistance and advice in finding educational institutions to meet the requirements of their children. This necessitates permanent organization and staff.

Information in regard to any private school or class of schools is gladly supplied. Where inquiries come by mail on properly filled out blanks which are sent on request, it is possible to give advice gratis. The form to be filled out requires that parents sort out their ideas as to what's wrong and what's to be done, and struggle with their conscience and their purse strings as to how much they wish to spend and what they want to get for it. For consultation or extended correspondence a suitable professional fee is charged, depending upon the amount of office time consumed. Parents can therefore reduce the charge to the minimum by preliminary correspondence presenting the situation clearly.

Parents who call at this office find catalogs of all the schools and a vast amount of material accumulated and filed, and on the walls seasonal exhibits of photographs, illustrating buildings, grounds and activities of schools and camps. A few minutes in conference with the victim to be sacrificed on the altar of education, and a few more in another room with those who brought him into the world and into the office, usually narrows down the choice to one or two schools and makes the final decision easy.

PRESENT STATUS OF THE PRIVATE SCHOOLS

Public school education has suffered in this country more than in any other during this world wide depression. Reports issued by Dr. George F. Zook, U. S. Commissioner of Education, shows increased enrollments, decreased salaries, two hundred thousand jobless teachers and two and a half million children of school age without public school facilities because schools in twenty-four states have closed for lack of money.

Editor I L Kandel of the Educational Year Books of the International Institute, writes in School and Society, November, 1933: "In none of the foreign countries, conservative, reactionary or class-ridden, can there be found a parallel to our ruthless treatment of children, schools, and teachers . . . and in none of them is a pupil of ability deprived of his rightful claim to continued education "

PRIVATE SCHOOLS HIT

Not until the fall of 1932 were the private schools affected by the depression. For two years they thought themselves depression proof. This year private school enrollment has increased over the previous year though income has still further diminished. Never before have they had so little money to spend. Salaries have been rigidly cut, expenses pared down. Many a good school has been obliged to close its doors, in some cases permanently. For some of these there was not sufficient reason for their continuance. They were not doing enough for their children or their community.

But in spite of this, increased optimism prevails among private school people this year. Characteristically a head master writes: "It has been a struggle just to keep living this year, but I am now beginning to see light ahead." So most private school people, putting up a good front, are carrying on with less money but with more courage and increased faith.

FEWER PATRONS

In the fat times of the last bull market, the rising social and economic status brought many new families into the private school ranks. The subsequent change in their fortunes and in the fortunes of many others long accustomed to stable incomes and with well established private school traditions, has taken them out of this class.

The federal income tax returns are published each January for the second year preceding. From these figures we learn that individuals reporting incomes of $5000 or more, diminished from 1,032,071 in 1929 to 556,120 in 1932, a reduction of about one half. Individuals reporting incomes of $10,000 or more, showed a much greater diminution, from 374,032 in 1929 to 102,134 in 1932.

Only half these individuals were heads of families, we know from these reports, and some of these families were childless. From this it appears that families with children of school age and incomes of $10,000 or more, diminished from 28,000 in 1931 to 17,000 in 1932. If these families each sent either a boy or a girl to private school then there were only about 8,000 families to which a private school, charging $1000 or more, for either a boy or a girl could successfully appeal.

A NEW ECONOMIC LEVEL

Price cutting among the private schools has finally become an obsolete term. New price levels have been established, adapted to the incomes of patrons and the economic conditions of the time.

Fees paid by students in boarding schools this year are, one may safely say, thirty percent below last year. The average payment has been reduced to meet individual requirements. Such tuition charges will of course in future years be raised as incomes increase. But it will be many a year before a girls finishing school or a boys tutoring school will collect many $1800 to $2000 tuitions with extras, as they did in 1929-30.

FUTURE OF THE PRIVATE SCHOOL

While there is every reason for confidence and optimism as to the future of the private schools, one must remember that this is only their second year of the depression. Increased enrollments will follow, rather than precede, the upturn in general business.

Some former patrons of private schools, now that they have sent their children to public schools, have dropped out of the private school class, will probably remain out. As one head mistress writes: "Many who would have sent their children to private schools were obliged, for financial reasons, to send them to public schools, and in a vast majority of cases they will never come back to the private school even though times improve sufficiently to justify it."

Endowments, traditions and loyal alumni, in the case of the older established private schools, are a bulwark against changing conditions. But today with even trust funds dissolving and disappearing in this time of social change, we have less confidence in the permanence of such things. These great institutions must take the lead in private initiative at this time as have Hill and Andover to justify their continued prosperity.

PRIVATE INITIATIVE THREATENED

From the Pacific around to the Pacific, the world is under dictators except in bureaucratic France which needs, but lacks one, and in England where the old Tory autocracy has bought out even the former Labor leaders. Democracy has had its chance, and is in eclipse. The successes today are being made by those who hold dictatorial power. Democracy has made the world safe for dictators.

ABUSES OF PRIVATE INITIATIVE

Rugged individualists and 'Old Dealers' have crippled private initiative in our country. The abuses which have come to light have justified the curb put on private initiative.

Those who have been granted liberty have taken license. They have misused and abused their opportunities, they have run wild. So private initiative is being limited in one way or the other by communist or fascist tendencies. Betwixt dictators and the proletariat, the great middle intellectual leavening class may be pinched out.

LIMITATION AND REGULATION

No longer may the bone setter ply his trade. Required training in state chartered institutions and state laws guard the gullible against unlicensed medical healers that haven't yet gone to jail. Nor can we tell on the label of our medical prescription of its marvelous cures. We must hire space in the magazines and newspapers, and employ advertising agents to protect and lobby for us.

We have learned that railroads and public utilities have to be both bitted and spurred. It takes Co-ordinator Eastman on a salary of a few thousand dollars a year, to tell the score of presidents, at salaries of a hundred thousand, what rates to charge, when to buy rails, and to lend them the money. Then he cuts their salaries to sixty thousand dollars a year, six times his own.

Our utility pyramiders once bought their regulators and used the schools to make dividends on watered stock secure. Now with the threat of Insullation before them they are held in leash. Our banker gods are dethroned. Never again will we let giants of finance like Mitchell and internationally-minded Wiggin gamble with our savings. At least that is what we now think. Private initiative will not have full swing as in the past.

BUNKUM IN PRIVATE SCHOOLS

There are abuses in the private school where initiative is free, as there are in the selling of patent medicines, and the method is similar. Through exploiting one's self in magazines to the millions, there develops a community of interest between the advertising medium and the school,—a vested interest which is dangerous to expose

The private school patron needs the protection of wider horizons, better understanding and comparative knowledge. The gullible school master and the susceptible school mistress often, in the honesty of ignorance, offer spurious things as pure gold. There are schools that sell to socially ambitious patrons the social prestige they have sedulously sought. There are schools that, through snobbery, angle for the social climber. There are school masters who seek to attract through an odor of sanctity, and school mistresses who weave a web of mystic spirituality.

Some private schools are on the fringe of charlatanry. Some have gambled with other people's money. Some have indulged in cut-throat competition. Some have spent on ballyhoo in cheap magazines the money that should have been put into teachers salaries, and into nutritious pabulum for the bodies and minds of their pupils.

GOODBY TO LAISSEZ FAIRE

The private school must mend its ways. It must show reason for existence. It must show initiative in worthy ways. It must evidence social mindedness. It must adjust itself to our times and our needs. The time has passed for schools of snobbishness, unyielding in their traditions, unadjustable to the present.

In most countries schools are either under government control or government supervision. In England where schools wholly supported by taxation are not general, there has long been government inspection of the private school. Many of these inspectors have been illustrious men, Matthew Arnold perhaps the greatest.

In this country with ninety percent of our pupils in socialized schools, eight percent in Catholic schools and two percent in private schools maintained for all other dissenters, religious or educational, such inspection offers difficulties even were we convinced of the soundness of the political system from which such inspectors would come.

The hope of the private school is private initiative, that is individuals with clear vision, aware of present day tendencies, feeling their social responsibility, alert to the possibilities of the disasters that face them, who have the courage to stand for something constructive.

In the future as in the past, the hope of the race lies in the initiative of individuals with vision and courage.

TREND TOWARD CENTRALIZATION

Schools and sewers are the most socialized institutions of our country, even more completely socialized than our hospitals or water systems. The private cesspool proved a nuisance and was long since abolished. Communal sewers are more economical. But the same reason does not apply to schools.

WE ARE WASTERS

Millions of human lives are still sacrificed indiscriminately to war, malnutrition, disease and disaster. Our social organization is wasteful. Few have any comprehension of how wasteful is our social economy. We are in the red because of waste.

In 1931 we wasted eighty-nine billions. Our income that year was only sixty-two billions so we went into the red twenty-seven billions. These figures are incomprehensible until you see them tabulated on a page in Fortune as they were worked out by a broker. No, it wasn't fire,—that cost only one billion; nor insects, the great enemy of man, which destroyed only two billions; and criminals cost less than four billions. The waste was due to our bankers, financiers and economists. Shrinkage of securities for one year were twenty-two billions, loss of wages eighteen billions, and unscientific pricing of labor, products, and services fifteen billions.

Roger W. Babson, in a recent article in the Boston Transcript, tells us that half our current income of fifty billions is being totally wasted. And he specifies just how.

WASTES IN EDUCATION

Two and a half billions of our current income are wasted in the worship of our educational fetishes, in which greed and gullibility are equally culpable, according to Babson's estimate.

Most of it is lost in lubricating the bearings of our great socialized public school machine, in contacts between politically controlled boards of education, their superintendents and purchasing agents, and the contractors and purveyors who pander to them. But some of it comes home to private initiative.

Private schools have developed all kinds of waste in education and unnecessary excrescences,—finishing schools with flashy lures; military schools with tinselly fronts, schools that spend their income on sticky-fly paper advertising to new crop of victims each year from the homes of the ignorant and gullible.

THE SOCIALIZATION OF OUR SCHOOLS

Already ninety percent of the pupils enrolled in schools are under centralized bureaucratic control. In the newer sections of our country, from the first the public schools have been fostered by land grants from a benevolent government, and huge bond issues floated ostensibly for school houses, to promote land values and real estate developments.

The demand for the complete socialization of our school system and the restriction or suppression of the private school comes from those who have been educated, and are now supported, at public expense.

In all the states settled within the last hundred years, there is no tradition of privately supported schools as in the older eastern communities. But the greater number of professors of pedagogy come from the western state-supported universities where socialized education has always prevailed. They and their fellows have been educated at public expense. They apparently do not know that all that is good in the public school was first worked out under private initiative and its value demonstrated.

COLLECTIVISM ON THE MARCH

The private school must watch its step. Collectivism is on the march. From Columbia under the banner of Briggs marches an army of state socialists, fascists, ready to suppress the private school. They would use the schools to support the state which supports them. From Columbia, too, issues another army under the banner of Counts, educational communists. They would use the schools to indoctrinate youth.

Eduard C Lindeman of the New York School of Social Work and author of "Social Discovery" and "Socialized Education" in an address, February 17, 1934, told the Twentieth Century Club in Boston: "Unless we make up our minds where we want to go and how we want to get there, we will drift toward fascism. We have a choice of fascism, communism, or some third course. If we don't decide, fascism may come overnight. The mechanisms for it are all ready. If fascism gets started here it will be worse than anywhere else. If it happens here it will happen on a scale that will make Germany and Italy look like mild revolts."

SOCIALIZED EDUCATION KILLS DEMOCRACY

Franklin Roosevelt tells us that democracy has not been in action in recent years and we are beginning to believe it. After half a century of our compulsory socialized educational system, at an annual cost of billions, E. A. Filene told the National Education Association what we now all agree to,— "business men and educators are jointly to blame for the conditions which led to the depression" and he added that but for Roosevelt there would have been revolution.

Clyde Miller of Teachers College told the Association that the "country's schools and colleges have been 'playing the rich man's game,' for two percent of the people in the nation control eighty-five percent of the wealth".

Superintendent Campbell of New York City ascribed the depression to the schools. He said, "The Gods of business and finance had a queer code of ethics and very little knowledge of economic laws or social problems. Yet most of them were the products of our system of education."

OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM HAS FAILED

If our democracy is killed, if it is succeeded by fascism or communism, it will be the fault of our compulsory socialized educational system, to which private initiative in education has not, these past decades, offered sufficiently strong and inspiring counteractives. Dr Lindeman said "Our intellectual system has been a great disappointment. Our educational system has not produced an adequate form of citizenship. Our public education system has not solved the problems of crime and delinquency, crime has increased in almost direct parallel to the growth of public education. Our educational system has not shown us how to mitigate the spirit of acquisitiveness and competitiveness, it has accelerated it, for most people today have a selfish aim in going to school."

BETTER TIMES — BETTER SCHOOLS

Production has so advanced that the modern forward looking economist tells us we may all have plenty if we make use of what science has brought us, and further that there will be need for only short hours of work on the part of each. Stuart Chase in his "Economy of Abundance" just published, attempts to explain why, with an abundance of materials, people are obliged to go without, and of the time of plenty ahead.

There is a great and glorious future for the socialized public school. In the fourteenth edition of this Handbook we forecast a time when all city schools would be in the country, at the end of bus or trolley lines with ample space for all kinds of activity and opportunity to develop initiative and individuality for each pupil.

Progress is being made along these lines in continental countries, notably in the Savoia School in Milan. In this they are following the lead of the country day school, an innovation of American private citizens of the past quarter century.

But even if our public tax supported compulsory school system has attained that stage of development where it has incorporated all the best features that have been initiated in private schools under progressive auspices, there will still be ample opportunity for private initiative to find other new and better ways.

WHY PRIVATE INITIATIVE

Perhaps Mussolini is right. At least he has been successful. Perhaps liberty is a tawdry old crone that we should turn our backs on. Certainly there are times when we have to sacrifice liberty to survive. Complete liberty is an impossible ideal. But a vision of freedom and liberty has led us on and upward, a pillar of flame through the darkest night. The essential thing about this craving for liberty, the drive that has kept us moving upward has been our simian curiosity,— the urge to discover, to experiment and do it on one's own.

WHAT IS THIS PRIVATE INITIATIVE

Private initiative is the opportunity for the individual to make his own dream come true. Everything that was once new, the better tool, the better method, the new attitude, germinated as an idea in a single brain. Without private initiative there can be no improvement, no invention, no new art. He who reveals to his tribe something never before seen, the lines of the charging mammoth, beauty in the commonplace, the majesty of the mountains, we call an artist.

Private initiative is the divine spark which makes the individual a king and inspires him to work for better things for himself, and so, the betterment of his fellows, the enriching of their lives as well as his own.

Private initiative was the lamp of Victorian liberalism which brought us through the murk of the industrial revolution to a higher standard of living.

NEEDED IN OUR SCHOOLS

All the methods in education that were once new, private initiative found and developed. It must find still more and better methods yet unknown. Now that our moral bankruptcy is confessed, no longer can we boast about passing on the wisdom of the past.

If our educational aims have been wrong, as most believe today, it stands to reason they can't all be right now. They must be still further modified, perhaps improved. Once education aimed to mold the young, to discipline, suppress and make for conformity. Our training in citizenship tended to dull awareness to existent evils and make complacent robots. Our dull stupid teaching of history, the neglect of recent events, our failure to interpret to children honestly the things they see about them,— for this we now admit our culpability.

The outstanding characteristic of the American, according to Stephen Leacock, Canadian economist and well known humorist, is that he "doesn't give a damn" At the disclosure of dishonesty mobs rise in French cities Here even greater graft is daily disclosed but we are complacent, still hoping for a slice or a crumb

In our education we have ignored existent evils We have presented to our children a system supposedly perfect. Our educators and citizens have lacked the courage to stand up against the opposition of those who would profit from suppression of essential facts For years we have seen the finest flower of our youth, graduates of our schools, universities and law courses, seduced and prostituted to the purposes of greed in the service of great corporations and financial institutions Robots and hypocrites resulted. More private initiative was needed.

INITIATIVE IN ETHICS

The ethics that we teach, our ideas of right and wrong, came to us from some Moses who long ago heard the voice of God without, or from some individual who heard the wee small voice within But new revelations have come to us through seeing and knowing God's world about us. To some individuals have come new conceptions of right and justice.

Social consciousness and social justice are modern conceptions They were no more revealed by God to man in the past than was the glory of the sunset or the majesty of the mountains. Those things have been reserved for this later time Our ethical teaching, parental and pedagogical, has made us what we are, evasive hypocrites.

"Fathers are Liars" as one of them elegantly explains in the March 1934 Scribners, and teachers are cowards as was made obvious by John Dewey in his address before the National Education Association in February 1932 and also by the chapter "Educators Challenged" in the last edition of this Handbook.

There are new revelations to be made about the beauty of the universe and about right and wrong, but there must be some one individual attuned at the receiving end to get them.

In the interpretation of right and wrong, in the teaching of our ethics, this is a time when new revelation is needed such as can come only to the individual through a larger understanding of facts today available. Private initiative, the great teacher in ethics, is the greatest need today.

OLD MOTHER NATURE'S TOYS

In a completely socialized or communized community, as among the bees and ants, private initiative is impossible. It has long since been suppressed. If our education becomes completely socialized probably we will, too. We may go the way of the bees or the white ants.

OTHER SOCIETIES THAN OURS

For there are other ways than ours in which life may go on. For hundreds of millions of years Old Mother Nature has been playing with our organized societies. Consider the perfect social organization of the thousands of individuals that make up a sponge, as perfect and self-sufficing in its way as the clam is as an individual. Corals and sea fans and scores of other colonies made up of great numbers of individuals closely associated in societies you may find on the ocean floor where Nature has been experimenting with their social organization since earliest geologic time. And on the land, animal societies with systems of social organization and town planning have been worked out in various groups, most marvelously among the insects, most humanly in their perfection among the rodents. Prairie dog towns have populations running into the hundred thousands and the rabbit warrens of England are probably more ancient than the English Cathedral cities.

Private initiative in the perfect insect colonies would be as inimical to peace and prosperity as rebellious cancer cells are among the otherwise harmonious collection of cells that make up our own bodies. Private initiative in the cancer cell or the revolutionary is inimical to the status quo in the social organization.

SOCIETY VERSUS THE INDIVIDUAL

An important school of educational thought which has emanated from Chicago and from Teachers College, emphasizes the importance of the social side of human life, the problems of living together. Much is made of this even in the elementary grades. But any society is made up of individuals and can be improved only through the improvement of the individual.

Individual initiative is not essential to a well organized and smooth running society. In insect societies there is no individuality, all are alike. There is no initiative, all act together. By standardization and by suppressing initiative, the Pax Romanum was maintained in human society.

Professor William Morton Wheeler of Harvard has given his life to the ants and studied the development and forms of their social organization over a period of millions of years. At the recent meeting of the Society of Naturalists in Cambridge he told them that the peace and smooth internal functioning that characterizes the societies of insects is due to the dominance of the female. Bees in hives, ants or termites in their colonies never fight among themselves but work harmoniously for the good of the group as a whole and, if need be, die for it without hesitation.

COMMUNISTIC OLD MAID ANTS

The ants long ago solved all the social problems of their highly organized society by relegating all the powers of the community to the spinsters. The worker ant, in all her modifications, soldier, herder, agriculturist, is a modified desexed female, an old maid. These spinster workers never fight among themselves. There are no jealousies for the male drone is of only temporary value to the community, to be treated with contempt or thrown out.

The one perfect female is left the job of perpetuating the colony and the species. She produces the eggs which the old maids take care of. They tend the young and bring them up by standardized methods, producing a uniform product.

AMERICA'S CONTRIBUTION TO EDUCATION

In our socialized public schools we have followed the advice of Old Solomon who told us to go to the ant. Today our female teachers outnumber the male teachers ten to one and the proportion is steadily growing in most of our large public school systems. Female teachers are forbidden to marry and are dismissed if they do. As in the case of the ants, the care of our young is turned over to these modified desexed females.

According to one of the speakers at the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, boys taught by women teachers are liable to "grow up to be spineless, weak individuals because of their failure to come into contact with virile men teachers". But the "economically privileged few" who are sent to private schools under men teachers will grow up and, because of their early training by men, take over the important posts in private and public life.

America's greatest contribution to education has been the desexed, superannuated spinster in charge of the education, ideals and activities of our virile growing children. Nowhere else in the world, except in a few primitive, matriarchal societies and among the ants, has the upbringing of the next generation been left to the spinster,—the future virility of the race been sacrificed to the support of the sterile, desexed, superannuated female.

FASCIST ROYAL TERMITES

The white ants or termites which have recently invaded New York and may yet inherit the earth, so successful are they, have solved their sex and social problems in quite another way. Theirs is absolutely sexual equality. They have one queen as do the ants and bees, but she takes a lifelong mate who helps her dig the bridal chamber and shares it with her.

Both desexed males and females make up the workers and soldiers. They have nothing to do with courtship, love or reproduction. Consequently they never fight among themselves. They are absolutely alike except as they are differentiated robots for special work. And there is never any initiative.

THE DISTURBING MALE

The fighting spirit of the male, whether man, ape, dog or bird, aroused over wooing and mating, keeps the whole community in a perpetual state of ferment and unrest, Professor Wheeler points out. But this, too, promotes initiative and individuality. Among human males he finds three classes, as he might among polymorphous ants, "One comprises the completely socialized individuals, who maintain the social structure, there is a second much smaller class whose dominance is largely manifested in intellectual or emotional fields, which creates the great social values, and also the great social illusions that develop civilization; and the third class consists of criminals of low mental age with unbalanced endocrines who in the past have succeeded in destroying every civilization."

EDUCATIONAL IMPLICATIONS

What is our boasted civilization,—social organization, governmental set up? Well, the ants and bees have had a perfect social organization a hundred times longer than we human simian vagrants have had any.

Eliminating sex and courting, vagrancy and roaming, Old Mother Nature found was the first step. Perfecting social organization, desexing the mass of workers was her next step. The fear is that we may be doing just that today in our boarding schools, and public schools and national life,—perfecting our social organization at the expense of the vagrancy of the individual. Our law and business school graduates, laboring for corporations, become robots, the best of them bought and sold for a few hundred thousand a year.

WHITHER, SIMIAN

But Old Mother Nature, not satisfied with perfect social organization, with peace and stability, went on trying countless experiments, disturbing to the order of life, to the vested interests. Tiring of ponderous dinosaurs, from marsupial beginnings of the then insignificant mammalia, she staked her big future gamble on the tiny tree shrews, from whom came our simian predecessors.

Removed from predatory dangers on the ground, they warred with a mightier force, gravity, so constant a danger that even now, children awake in fright dreaming of falling. Eye forward vision and unceasing alertness attained a new import.

OUR DIVINE CURIOSITY

With all this developed that simian interest in the vaguely seen or understood,— that impulse which led to investigation and experiment, even when there was no possibility of food or good,— that divine curiosity, the desire of knowledge for its own sake, which has led us humans on to what we call pure science.

An editorial assistant was to be chosen. Candidates had presented snap shots, photographs, histories, samples of their writing. Those in counsel, weighing qualifications, were in a quandary. Up spoke an editor, wise in the ways of women,— “I would take her for her monkey face.” Yes, there was alertness, curiosity, initiative. From the people you know subtract these simian qualities and what have you left — grave, stupid old apes, bovine stuffed shirts, dignified old owls. You find these at the zoo, outside the cages as well as within.

MAN AND WOMAN MADE HE THEM

This simian-human trait of individual initiative has been the most potent factor in the advance of the species and promises most for the future. You will search for it in vain among the old maid ants, the fascist termites or the sexually segregated public school people controlled by bureaucrats.

Sex all through the upper scale of animals, among the birds, the barnyard fowls and the cattle of the fields, and among men, has brought rivalries, aggressiveness and initiative. It has brought pride, parade and strife.

Dispense with sex as have the bees and the ants and there is no need of gay dressing or gay costumes. But where there is individual courtship and mating as among the birds, the extravagances of costuming and posing brings us the peacock's strut or the bird of paradise plumage.

Segregate your boys and girls, put them in drab uniforms, under desexed teachers, more drab, and do you stimulate initiative? No, you are not playing Mother Nature's game, you are running counter to the plan.

THE HUMAN PLAN

The ideal of the termites, the white ants, has been internal social organization, preserving equality of the two sexes by removing all the conflicts that sex brings. There is no internal strife, no discord, no external militarism, no soldier class. Here we have social organization bringing peace and honor and contentment and food for all. But there is none of the private initiative that springs from sex and race rivalries.

It is a mighty and perfect organization they have built and naturalists tell us that these meek termites, unlike the militaristic ants, may yet inherit the earth.

There are among our human advisers and educators, those who hold up white ant ideals for us to follow. But it is not for this that Mother Nature has been toying with our forebears these millions of years.

So there is reason why we should not regiment our children under desexed, devitalized, superannuated spinsters in denatured schools run by bureaucrats controlled by vested interests. These lively, active young humans shall not be standardized and made into drab robots. That way lies toward the white ants. God endowed us with a brain, as yet but little used, and understanding of Nature's ways shows another destiny planned for us.

EDUCATIONAL LAG

The Committee on Social Trends which published its report at the close of the Hoover administration performed a great service in emphasizing our social, ethical and cultural lag

FEAR AND IGNORANCE

Tribal or socialized education must always be a conservative force. The individual genius may teach his disciple new things but organized society must use education as a means of conserving its power.

Fear and ignorance on the part of those who are in a position to lead, willful selfishness and obscurantism, cause the lag in our educational, social and economic institutions. There is no lack of knowledge, no lack of light to guide the feet of those who would progress.

To realize how far our educational thought and practice are behind our scientific knowledge, attend educational meetings, even of our more progressive educators, and then go to a meeting like that of the Association for the Advancement of Science.

WHAT EDUCATORS TALK ABOUT

The outlook of the two groups is entirely different. One is interested in "principles", mostly fetishes, their own purposes, methods and the petty problems of their craft. See the programs of meetings of our representative educational associations as reported in the December 1933 issue of Private School News. The Head Masters Association, supposedly national, though snobbishly eastern, was interested in examinations, records, house plans and a concert. The National Association of Principals of Girls Schools manifested broader interest in present day problems. The National Education Association has become politically minded, and the Progressive Education Association has moved to the left in social theory. The New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, bringing together representatives of the greatest universities and private and public high schools, dealt almost wholly with the trivialities of a trade association.

THE SCIENTIFIC ATTITUDE

The scientists on the other hand, with the zeal of the discoverer, seek new knowledge and endeavor to interpret it for human use. Scan hastily Science for February 2, 1934, which summarizes papers read at the recent Boston meeting of The American Association for the Advancement of Science. They elected as president Edward Lee Thorndike who made his reputation through scientific studies of the processes of learning. He has destroyed most of our cherished educational principles and built sound foundations for an education of the future. But it is the scientists rather than the educators that recognize him.

WHAT NATURALISTS THINK ABOUT

The zoologists, naturalists and geneticists in joint session listened to a series of papers on "Biology and Society." W. M. Wheeler speaking on "Animal Societies" gave a characteristically humorous and satirical account of animal organizations, not always flattering to human society. E. A. Hooton, another keen humorist, discussed social problems of "Primitive Human Societies". F. H. Hankins dealt with "Modern Social Organizations" and the retiring president talked on "Environments."

All this would seem to be fundamental stuff for those interested in the coming generation. But what do school masters know about such things? They are busy teaching what they and their fathers before them were taught.

WHAT ANTHROPOLOGISTS TALK ABOUT

The anthropologists held a symposium devoted to "Anthropology and the Child" and discussed such matters as how the child grows and develops into a man.

Another anthropologist talked on "Anthropology and the Community" and showed the difference in the growth and physical development of children of different social and economic levels, showing that under-privileged children are not so tall or so heavy as those better fed. Such matters have been left to anthropologists. Hog raisers would have been interested in such researches, educators less so.

WHAT INTERESTS PSYCHOLOGISTS

The psychologists heard that even the chimpanzee may have intuitions, that irrelevant and incidental rewards are of significance in learning, although greater rewards and punishments have only slightly greater effects, that environmental factors such as slum life or good schools affect delinquency. E. A. Kirkpatrick put it up to the scientists to construct new ethical codes for modern society.

The scientists seem to have knowledge and interest in things that would prove helpful to those who are training and guiding our youth. The educators seem ignorant of the facts of most importance to the next generation. Contrast of the enthusiasms of the two groups, emphasizes the vast gulf that lies between the mental content and vision of the scientist and of the educator. Brutally, our educators are ignorant of the more essential things.

NEW EDUCATIONAL AIMS

Carleton Washburne's devastating investigation as to the principles which guide those who control education has given thousands of educational thinkers a new slant on what they had held to be fixed and self evident. He has discovered to us the three great purposes which actuate those who control (1) Perpetuation of the traditional order, as in Japan; (2) Preparation for a pre-conceived social order, as in Russia and Italy, (3) Development of each child's individuality, as in some of the modern schools of Europe and America and with some of the philosophical thinkers in China. These more realistic views of the principles of education, the motives held by those who control make the theoretical principles enunciated in our text books and college courses, seem academic and obsolete. In these times we must face a realistic world.

INDOCTRINATION

Indoctrination of youth is now prominent in discussions at educational meetings. A considerable group of progressive educators, led by Professor Counts of Teachers College, advocate indoctrination of school children. Of course there is nothing new about indoctrination. It is the basis of all religious instruction. It is what has made Catholics and Methodists, just as today it is making fascists and communists. Most military training, too, is indoctrination. The marvelous rhythm, the color and exhibitionism, and much that is attractive in military life are successfully used to dwarf and stultify the thinking mechanism.

It is quite possible to 'bend the twig'. But even the most perfect specimen of espalier produced by a French gardener or clipped yew of the English topiarist can give us no conception of what Mother Nature planned these trees to be. It is not long since, even in the west and more recently in the Orient, that we distorted the bones of children to make artificial dwarfs and hunchbacks to amuse the monarch or the crowd. The day perhaps is not far distant when it will be considered even worse to distort human minds.

ECONOMIC GUIDANCE

There is a call for economic guidance in the schools. We have been awakened to the fact that our national income has been wasted by the shrewd imposing on the gullible through fraudulent sale or at high prices through bally-hoo advertising and high pressure methods.

The schools in the past have not been permitted to instruct pupils as to values of electric current they use in their homes, of watered stocks, of worthless medicines. This was opposed by those who profited, as interfering with 'business'. Now there is a sudden demand that the schools shall remedy all this quickly.

WHAT KNOWLEDGE IS OF MOST WORTH?

More than half a century ago Thomas Huxley, in the light of new knowledge, challenged with the above question the teaching of the day. Now with added knowledge and greater freedom and courage, we may once more raise the same question.

A hundred thousand teachers are giving nearly a million teaching hours each year to holding pupils, more than a billion study hours, to such subjects as partial payments, the binomial theorem, square root, use of the ablative and a thousand other subjects that ninety-nine percent of them will never have cause to use once out of school. This costs the nation four billions a year and ten years of the life of each child.

These children come out of school ignorant, insofar as the schools can keep them, of how our democracy actually works, of who controls, of how our national income is wasted, of where the defects lie in our laws and government structure. Such ignorant citizenry permits the avaricious and acquisitive to reward themselves unduly and bestows honor upon those who profit from promoting war in which these young folk will be the cannon fodder.

Disciplined with mathematics they will never use, with dead languages they will never read, with rules and distaste for living languages they will never speak, we send them forth untrained in estimating values, their heads filled with useless knowledge, with untrue myths of their government, their history,—fitted to be victims of bally-hoo advertising and high pressure salesmen.

Without interests or training in leisure, with no legitimate outlets for their initiative or spirit of adventure, these youths must find their own ways of magnifying their egos, which often brings them into the clutches of the law and through the police court, jail, reformatory school and penitentiary until their criminal education is complete.

If in those ten years they had been led to carry through one creative project, so to maximize their own ego, if they had learned one poem that fired their imagination, or encountered one hero that stimulated their admiration, they might have been started on the upward track.

NEW TOOLS

With the new freedom to think and to speak that has come to educators new purposes are being set up. No longer are we content with the traditional. No longer are we confident that our whole duty is to pass on the wisdom of the past. Again we are filled with the spirit of pioneers. We must find new ways to new ends.

New tools are needed for new ends. The three R's, for a century essential tools, are diminishing in importance while the schools, with increased time given to the R's, do not train children to use them.

The tools that men use change slowly. The stone handaxe lasted a million years. The Japanese still pull their saws where we push. East of Suez all drilling is still done with a kind of violin bow. So there is just as much provincialism and irrational traditionalism about the tools of education. All about us are new ones unused.

CHANGING NEEDS

Only a few centuries ago it was essential that every gentleman know Latin that he might have access to the literature of his time. And if he wished to know the classics, he studied Greek as well. Not long since it was considered essential for ministers to know Hebrew that they might read the Old Testament in the original, and know Greek for the New.

The importance of counting and money-changing for peasants and for merchants was not the same. So arithmetic was not taught in our early Colonial schools. To meet the needs of the merchant class, night schools of ciphering for apprentices sprang up in such educational centers as Boston.

THE THREE R'S

Reading can be acquired by almost any child from four to six by exposure or imitation, as has been repeatedly demonstrated at home and in progressive schools. Reading as taught in our schools has made vast numbers of newspaper readers who would otherwise be illiterate. It is a very small fraction of one percent of all who go through our schools who emerge without a distaste for books or good reading.

Writing has relatively little importance for the great mass of people today. Letter-writing is for business, transmitted by stenography or dictaphone to the typewriter. Few high school graduates ever write after graduation. They telephone. They don't have to write telegrams for the telegraph companies have the proper condolences or congratulations ready made, so we have only to designate the number

Those who do write are mostly those who have done or seen things which give them the urge to tell about them. A Conrad or Gorky never learned to write in schools.

The time given to arithmetic in our common schools is diminishing year by year. And still countless precious hours are being spent by children on arithmetical processes that are obsolete and will never be used.

FOR THE EYE

Our whole system of education is based upon the printed page, to which some never become sensitive, to which more early become calloused. Our educational system offers little hope for these. We have got to have new tools.

The new educational tools that are coming into use have not been developed by school people or universities for educational purposes. They have grown up around the schools and universities and in spite of them, and, for the most part looked upon with contempt, have been little used in formal education. In Russia the greatest use has been made of the eye in quickly educating an illiterate people. Museums, exhibits, posters, movies, on every subject, have been used as nowhere else, especially in adult education.

The large part which the talkies are playing in the education of our children has recently been the subject of a scientific investigation by the Motion Picture Research Council which published eleven reports and summaries. This is an important element in the education of the eleven million children under thirteen who weekly attend the movies. The studies reveal that they learn more readily and that their impressions last longer than when gained from books, and that all this has a profound effect on their emotions, their sleep, and their conduct.

Almost none of the movies are produced for, or are fit for, children, and the vicious system of block distribution makes it inevitable that they shall be trained in crime and gangster activities and the feltnicity of Hollywood's amorosities.

In this country scores of so-called educational film companies have been organized, educational film movements started, none of which have ever lasted or succeeded. The use of the motion picture as an educational instrument has been practically neglected.

The great thing in life is to see accurately and interpret what we see in the light of other knowledge. This the movie makes possible. The Germans early made great educational use of the movies in their scientific "Scientia" films in the teaching of natural science.

The slow opening of a flower through twenty-four hours may transpire before us in a few minutes. The rapid movements indistinguishable to the eye may be slowed down so that we may analyze them. The fascinating and varied activities of minute animals in a drop of pond water may be revealed and explained as seen through the microscope with accompanying explanation to a large audience.

In perpetuating the current event, in revealing to many the rare or unusual, in concentrating slow changes in a short time, in enabling us to see in the slow film what our imperfect eye misses in nature's speed, the moving film is a new means of revelation, an educational tool.

FOR THE EAR

Radio is making it possible for millions to hear at almost any distance what might otherwise be confined to the few. It permits artists, teachers and others to reach a greater audience. It is true that the radio has been introduced into our schools, that there are so-called educational programs. But its possibilities have not begun to be realized.

If we had an educational system which counted economy and efficiency, ways would be found of utilizing the best teaching of a few teachers of French, English, history and other subjects, to supplant in large part the inferior teaching of tens of thousands of present incumbents.

When television has been brought into the home, with its appeal to the eye as well as to the ear, radio will have even greater significance, and it is fully developed now, ready for use as soon as it can be made commercially profitable.

FOR THE FINGERS

Put a child of four in a room with a typewriter and he will learn to write, if you leave him alone. It is the most promising educational tool for training in writing and reading. But it is only within fifteen years that a few progressive parents have recognized it, and only within a decade that a few progressive schools have taken it up. Now it is being widely introduced and used as a means of stimulating interest in the creative art of writing from kindergarten on up through the grades.

A two year investigation has been conducted by Ben D. Wood of Columbia and Frank N. Freeman of the University of Chicago on the educational use of the typewriter in the elementary school. Two volumes have been published, the first "An Experimental Study Of The Educational Influences Of The Typewriter In The Elementary School Classroom", and the second on "The Typewriter In The Primary And Intermediate Grades". The purpose was to show how the typewriter could be used to aid in the normal school curriculum. It had nothing to do with training in the vocational use of the typewriter, and in fact a little training in its use is at first advisable.

With the typewriter a child of four or younger may write clearly long before the development of his musculatures and the medullation of his nerves permit the coordination and control necessary to form alphabetic characters, whether in print or script. Moreover the creative act of striking a key and seeing a letter appear is a stimulus to further creation.

The research showed that early use of the typewriter in the lowest grades tended to coordinate reading, spelling, composition and vocabulary. As President George Willard Frasier of Colorado Teachers College writes in the introduction to the second volume, "The ease and success with which young children operate a typewriter tempts one to the prediction that some day longhand writing will pass out, not only as a school subject, but as one of life's activities. Children can be taught to 'print write' and typewrite in our schools. These skills will fill all of life's wants and make unnecessary the teaching of the difficult art of writing by the longhand method."

LEARNING FROM OTHER COUNTRIES

In the kaleidoscopic changes now taking place in the political scene in Europe, preliminary to the next explosion, education has become the plaything of political potentates. An aftermath of idealism, of increasing freedom for private initiative in education, followed the war and led to the promise of great things in European education, only partly realized and since modified by dictatorial and nationalistic exigencies

THE NEW GAME WITH CHILDREN

The art of using children as a third line defense has reached high development in the dictators, plutocrats and gangsters world since the last war

Out of the Versailles Treaty has grown increased racial and nationalistic bitterness, intensive preparation for war and increased cupidity for war profits. On the Continent those who controlled heavy industries and armaments have found it a good investment to finance Hitler, bribe Roumania, own the French press, control the government and spend millions on propaganda in America. All this has manifested itself, not only in larger national armies and war appropriations than ever before, but in seizing and strengthening the third line of defense, the children in the schools.

Fascist and Communist governments are boldly and baldly using children to strengthen and perpetuate their power, just as in Japan the little group that holds power is educating youth in the revived, ancient myths of Shintoism to strengthen its hold.

During the reign of prosperity in this country the public utilities, with great stakes at issue, under the inspiration and direction of Insull, spent millions in propaganda to indoctrinate public school children and to prostitute university professors with the "Spirit of Service", as one of the films of these utilities companies was called. This is the modern way of playing the game in the struggle for power and profit

The higher the stakes, the more the art is perfected, the more capital is invested. It looks like good business to the Comité des Forges of France to finance Hitler, to own the French press and the French Government. There is much that we may yet learn from other countries

WHAT WE STOLE

A century ago we took over from Prussia their elementary school system, though during the late war rationalizing professors of education did their best to wiggle out of this. Three centuries ago the chief influences in American education came through the Moravians and Hessians in Pennsylvania and the Dutch in New York.

The English settlers in New England brought something of Holland as well as England with them in their educational ideals. And when the English took New York, Anglican religious propaganda led to the establishment of Trinity School, which still survives. The first vocational schools for the training of ministers were, of course, influenced by the old English ecclesiastical foundations, especially Cambridge University.

WHAT WE GAVE

From the spark that Colonel Francis Parker first struck at Quincy, came the Cook County Normal School, John Dewey and the new freedom of the child from slavish school routine. At the same time Cecil Reddie at Abbotsholme, England, was working out his ideas which through Demolins and Lietz spread through Europe as the 'New School' movement.

But the American waves were higher and travelled further,—the Dalton Plan swept England and John Dewey's ideas Soviet Russia. Then we sent Carleton Washburne, who had made possible the preservation of the individual in our socialized school system, round the world as an emissary to learn what the men of power were planning to do with children.

ENGLAND'S CHAOS

England's educational system is a patchwork like some of her ancient castles which show masonry Roman, Saxon, Norman, Tudor. The Universities and public schools of England have grown from medieval monastic foundations established for the training of priests. Modern demands of empire and industry have erected new structures on these old foundations. In the newer industrial regions there have been developed, to meet the needs of the middle classes, modern universities and secondary schools in variety, following generally the pattern of the public school, but differing in spirit and aim.

The handicap of tradition, the absence of a rational plan, educational laissez faire in its fullness, are the things that strike an American as most characteristic. The socialization of education, though far behind this country, has gone farther in the great cities. Government inspection of private schools, on the other hand, is a very real thing in England. A long black list is annually published of schools that do not come up to standards.

With the recent capture at the polls of the London County Council by the Socialists this socialization of education in London will be greatly extended. The Council manages education for four and one-half million people. London secondary schools provide higher education to the "cream" of the crop of applicants, who pay tuition fees from four to sixteen pounds sterling a year, but from twenty to forty percent are on scholarship.

English secondary schools were "confusing" to W. C. Ruediger of George Washington University who visited other than the nine well known 'Public Schools' and tells about it in the School Review, June 1933.

"Private and group initiative plays a larger part in the establishment of schools in England than in America, but this initiative manifests itself primarily in different methods of support rather than in differences in curriculums. It is this variety in support that accounts, in part, for the confusion in English secondary education. In recent years, however, public control and at least partial public support have gained over private control of secondary education by a wide margin. In London more than one hundred secondary schools, enrolling approximately forty-five thousand pupils, are now under public control."

English elementary schools impress Helen Earle, an American teacher reporting in New Era, July, 1933, with their chaos, drabness in the classrooms, great variety of method and curriculum, lack of standardization, of continuity in experience of the children, and of unity of policy in those directing education.

On the other hand she finds children and parents do take education seriously, assuming personal responsibility. There is a spirit of industry and joyousness, and "the ability to express ideas clearly with a well chosen vocabulary seems quite general. English education has a certain sturdy moral fibre that corresponds to the national character of the English people. Whether the education is responsible for it, or it is the result of the moral stamina of English society, is a question."

DENMARK'S FOLK SCHOOLS

In our country it's through the eye, the printed page, we educate. In the Folk Schools of Denmark provision is made for those who get little or nothing from the printed page. Some of our ablest captains of industry have been of this class.

One is surprised in England, where there are so many idle hands, to find in the shops and on the breakfast tables Danish bacon, Danish butter, advertised and proclaimed as something superior. Denmark, with an area half the size of the state of North Carolina and a population half that of the city of New York, supplies England with these staples from her limited but intensively cultivated area.

Something may be due to the Folk Schools which, during the past seventy-five years, have played an important part in the cultural development of rural Denmark. These are due to the ideas of Grundtvig,—poet, scholar, prophet,—who died in 1872 at the age of 89. The best education, he held, is the one the father and mother could give, the home comes first. The state should step in only when the home fails. Where schools were necessary they should be as homelike as possible, the teacher should be a good story teller, able to play with the children, and examinations should be avoided.

There are now about sixty of these Folk Schools, all privately owned, but many receive state and municipal aid. In the winter when agricultural work is not too pressing these folk schools are filled to overflowing with young men. They live at the school at very little expense and attend and discuss lectures on Danish history and literature, foreign languages, economic and social problems and in certain cases, the natural sciences. Since all the instruction is oral and no reading or written work is required, students are stimulated to discussion and thought. They are liberated from the exaction of learning solely for the purpose of regurgitating the information they have garnered on the examination paper.

During the summer a smaller number of girls attend the schools and receive in addition to what the men have, instruction and training in household problems.

As an outgrowth of these folk schools, higher continuation schools have since 1900 been established. Here the men may come to receive technical training in agriculture, the girls learn to be house assistants and house managers and are hired by farmers and householders just as we hire experts to organize and manage business and government. These schools are likewise all privately owned, many are endowed and the tuition rates are low enough to accommodate the class they serve.

FRENCH BUREAUCRACY

Private initiative has little scope in education in France. The effect of Demolins' Ecole des Roches has been almost negligible. But since 1917 a group of educators calling themselves 'Les Compagnons de L'Université Nouvelle' have been demanding a complete reform of education in France. They would eliminate class distinctions and provide equal opportunity for all. But above the elementary grades instead of identical uniform education they would have a system in which pupils could find that education best suited to their abilities.

"Education has been carefully worked out to preserve the status quo. Little is heard in France of education for a changing civilization," reports Ruth E. McMurray in School and Home, November, 1933.

A standardized bureaucratic system prevails. The underlying philosophy of the system is stated by Pécaut, "Education in France is the effort by which France aims to perpetuate herself in what is characteristic of her in her social structure, in her modes of thought and feeling, in what history has made of her, what she is now and what she is in the process of becoming."

Elementary education is free and up to the age of eleven or twelve all children are subjected to a standard curriculum. On May 31, 1933, fees were abolished in the remaining classes of the lycées and colleges. Secondary education is, however, still for the training of an intellectual elite and is dominated by the classical traditions. In recent "debates in the Chambre and the Senat fear was expressed that free secondary education would substitute quantity for quality and that there would be great danger of developing an intellectual proletariat."

The French people want security, to be left alone. Long a self-contained country, its adventurous Napoleons have built an unstable empire, and its munition makers an industry that should not survive. It is a country in which the women of the bourgeois are the petty financiers, where the fields are tilled by the mothers and sisters of "Nos Enfants" commemorated on the monument in the village square.

Controlled as the country is by an avaricious group of bankers and munition makers, native and Levantine, who make public opinion through the press and politicians whom they own, there is little hope for change except through the appearance of a new man on horseback.

GERMAN YOUTH IN THE SADDLE

Many promising educational movements and institutions that developed in Germany under the Socialist government have been disturbed, arrested or stultified in the great revolution that has taken place in the past year. This last act in the historic movement for the unification of Germany which has been going on for a hundred years, has been obscured in American minds by Jew-baiting munition makers propaganda emanating from France.

Badly directed, misguided as they may be, German youth is in the saddle. The war babies hold the power through their loud speaker Hitler whose financial support has come even from French munition makers. It's as if our Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and high school and college students, organized and controlled, had disbanded our regime, dissolved our legislation and seized the complete power with a loud speaker controlled by international munition makers and industrialists.

But German education has not stood still. Since the war the reorganization of the educational system has gravitated around the Einheitsschule, which was only partially achieved by the common Grundschule. In the past two decades Germany has published four encyclopedias of education, in addition to several series of handbooks devoted to the study of education.

The American may learn much in Germany of model school buildings. Up to the onset of the depression, many new buildings were constructed, particularly in Berlin, and many of these in the environs where ample space was available.

An article in "The American School and University" for 1933-1934 gives illustrations and plans of a number of these novel school plants, entirely different from any school plants to be found in this country. The striking features are the ample space about the buildings, the court-yards, the swimming pools, the playing grounds.

The buildings are low, built in zig-zag or curves to afford the maximum amount of sunlight. In some there is a ring of buildings around a large play-field; in many, in addition to classrooms, there are work rooms, motion-picture rooms, libraries, laboratories, and every school is provided with at least two gymnasiums. The schools at Lichtenberg, Zehlendorf, Wittenau, and Weissensee provoke thought as to the long way we have to go to make our "little red school house" the ideal environment for child growth.

MUSSOLINI'S CHILDREN

Mussolini in 1922 began reforming the defective Italian school system through Giovanni Gentile. The purpose was to strengthen the nation and solidify his power and this has been effectively carried out.

In 1929 the Fascist use of the schools to enroll children in the Balilla brought conflict with the Vatican. Though protested, the Church schools and youth organizations have been absorbed into the Fascist system. The Balilla enrolls boys from eight to fourteen years. From the Balilla the boys go on into the Avanguardisti until they are eighteen. Young Italian girls are enrolled in the Piccole Italiane and the Giovanne Italiane. Bequests and gifts and state appropriations support these activities. Some of the best features of the Scouts and the Camp Fire Girls have been incorporated. The Balilla also provides continuation schools, vocational education, adult education, circulating libraries and reading rooms, visits to museums and monuments, cruises, summer camps and athletics, medical and preventive treatment, and accident insurance. The total membership in the association is over 3,000,000.

Thus with inspiration from the American Summer Camp and the Boy Scout, Mussolini has built a great machine which provides the best features of the foregoing and still more to children from the age of eight upward. However, the regimentation of mind is complete so as to insure the continuance of Fascism.

Characteristic of concomitant developments is a children's village in the outskirts of Milan unlike anything in the United States. Twelve hundred children live here daily through the winter months and three thousand in the summer. Many of the children are brought by train and bus from all parts of the city; some live here in dormitories the entire year.

The one-story buildings of four class rooms each of the Umberto Di Savoia Open-Air School surround the enormous open-air swimming pool. There are open-air play pavillions as well as closed in gymnasiums. The nursery, model home, dairy, stables, poultry yard, fish ponds, and garden, orchards and vineyards, afford opportunities for instruction in domestic science and farm methods. The equipment provides for games of all sorts — in fact, for a completely rounded life in which most of the instruction is accomplished by activity. The children learn by doing.

Unfortunately, this school is limited to tubercular children, but it has for some years demonstrated successfully what might be done for all.

This coincides almost exactly with the picture of the future city school in the country, which was portrayed in the fourteenth edition of this Handbook.

CZECHOSLOVAKIAN UNITY

The educational structure, inherited from diverse elements of the Austrian monarchy, is still confused. The old system provided uniform instruction up to the fifth year. In 1925 "reform schools" were organized in half a dozen communities. These were somewhat similar to our American system through junior high school. Early in 1933 new laws were proposed whereby the state would pay teachers who had previously been paid by the provincial authorities. The new system will provide also for minorities schools.

YUGOSLAV SOKOLS

The Sokol furthers the physical, cultural and national education of the masses. There are seven thousand societies in Yugoslavia having educational-humanitarian aims, in addition to two thousand sport organizations. The Sokol is the most highly organized of these, with a strongly centralized organization.

The Sokol originated in Bohemia, now Czechoslovakia, for the purpose of balancing physical with intellectual training. In 1933 the Catholic church attacked them and condemned them for holding exercises on Sunday. Both radio and movies are much used by the Sokol in spreading their propaganda for health and physical training.

CHARACTER EDUCATION IN RUSSIA

"A child can be formed, a youth can be bent, but only the grave can straighten the hunched back of an old man," so runs the ancient Russian proverb and although the Soviets have proved the last false they have given most of their attention to children and youth. They have realized that to make their revolution permanent, it must be cultural and spiritual, that the very character of the people would have to be profoundly changed. So we learn from George S. Counts in his introduction to "Character Education in Soviet Russia," Ann Arbor Press.

The organization of children and youth for activity and character training is explained by the editor, William Clark Trow. Behind the Communist Party which constitutes about one percent of the total population, are the Young Communists or Komsomols comprising two million young youths of both sexes from fifteen to twenty years. The third shift is made up of the Young Pioneers, four million children from ten to fifteen years, while children from seven to ten are organized as the Little Octobrists. Each Pioneer division, which may contain up to fifty members, elects its own officers and division council, but is led by an older Komsomol youth selected for the purpose.

The Pioneers are the best all round pupils in the school, generally about one-fifth of the total. "They help the backward, seek to stamp out national hatreds, introduce games and sports, investigate misunderstandings between pupils and teachers, in which they are trusted by the administration, and assume part of the responsibility for the Octobrist organization."

Their methods have been adapted from the Boy Scouts which have been wholly supplanted. Their activities include social and practical work, often of economic value, such as collecting junk, and discovering raw materials, as so fully explained in Ilin's "New Russia's Primer."

Another objective is social knowledge of the country's institutions. Excursions are made to inspect banks, postoffices and factories. But the chief purpose is to develop self-activity that can be collectively used for the advantage of the whole group. Cultural and recreational activities enter into the program.

The book that Professor Trow has edited consists of a series of pamphlets that have been used by these Pioneer organizations in developing initiative. Written by various leaders, they are the tracts on which this great organization has been built. They are directly addressed to, and have been used by, millions of these Soviet children. Notable particularly is number four on "The Role of the Leader" and number five on "Self-Activity." What other peoples have talked about Soviet leaders have put into effect.

USE OF LEISURE

A topic for newspaper headlines and radio addresses, even our leaders are puzzled about the use of leisure. When it became apparent that shorter hours of labor under the N R A would mean more leisure, questions came from everywhere. "What are people to do with their leisure hours?" Reporters scurried about from public man to professor to ask how that leisure might best be used. They found them unprepared and evasive.

UNPREPAREDNESS

Most people seem to think that leisure should be used for pastimes, not for any useful thing. Books have been written, a magazine is published, elaborating on devices for passing time.

Here again our ethical teaching has been all wrong and leaves us unreceptive and unprepared for the use of leisure. Obsolete today is our old ethical teaching on the sin of idleness and the sacredness of labor. The distress that comes from unemployment, from the surplus of labor, mocks at these old teachings. With the continued improvement in technical processes of production, labor becomes increasingly less important. But our traditional school training still tends to cultivate slavish habits of routine labor. In the new light this is not merely anachronistic. It lies at the root of all evil. It is the hotbed of mischief and crime. For it leaves the individual without resources to enjoy usefully the new leisure which is being thrust upon him. Pastime, fleeting pleasure, boredom, craving for excitement, crime, follow in sequence.

INCITEMENT TO CRIME

American youth craves excitement. So did their ancestors who found adventure in migration or piracy. If boys in their teens, for excitement, steal motor cars and race them through city streets, defying the police, and from the reformatory course go on for a postgraduate course to the penitentiary, it is because they are bored with what their elders and the schools feed them.

Girls in their teens, whose interest in all that culture and art has brought the race is dulled by stupid teaching in the schools, easily revert to primitive pleasures, go boy crazy. Why shouldn't they? If their grandmothers had been desexed spinsters like their teachers, these girls and their problems would not exist.

Have we made available, useful and enjoyable to our girls the modern arts to take the place of the old household tasks that gave creative zest to the life of their grandmothers? The instinct to create must lie in every whole woman.

If we have not helped them to satisfy this innate craving in a modern useful way, then we must expect reversion to the primitive and anachronistic which will put these girls, too, through a 'reformatory' course

Let us admit, then, that schools and homes are the great incitement to crime in that they have not shown youth how to get a kick out of useful modern things. They have to revert to anachronistic, primitive ways of achieving personal satisfaction, which today we dub criminal.

The ancestors of us Nordics won great approbation from the home folks, returning with plunder from their burning raids and rapine. Most of us today have found ways of spending our energies to bring greater satisfactions. Otherwise we might revert to cutting throats

PLAY NOT A PASTIME

It is only those with a superabundant flow of energy, those who seek excitement, achievement, who have the stuff within them to make criminals or productive citizens. Most of us, with depleted energies, without interests, without tastes, with no training in the use of leisure, seek pastimes. As though time in its ever onward flow might become clogged, like plumbing in cold weather! With no inner drive, no purpose, in finding ways to kill time we imitate others. Killing time, averting boredom, is not making use of leisure. We might take an opiate — then time would pass unconsciously.

The young of all the higher animals engage in play, a means Old Mother Nature developed of utilizing their superabundant energy in preparing for exigencies to come, social or anti-social, for courtship or warfare

Some of us never grow up. For them play is normal. Some of us learn to sublimate in useful and productive activities what would otherwise be wasted energy. But the grown-up who has no purpose but to devote his life to play is a pitiful parasitic drone in the hive

A recently published volume "Fun In Bed" tells of delightful pastimes, for the convalescent. But children may better be engaged in creative play. Even in the homes for imbeciles the activities can be purposeful and useful.

THE HEADMISTRESS' QUESTION

Here comes a head mistress with a background of foreign travel, residence in Rome — "Has anything ever been written on the use of leisure?"

Open-eyedly I replied: "Why everything that has been written that was worthwhile has to do with leisure! Homer was a vagabond, Shelley a rebel; Christ wasn't satisfied to stay at the carpenter's bench and Buddha refused to occupy his throne. All our great poets, philosophers, and dreamers were men of leisure. Otherwise they could not have been what they were. It is from them that we must learn how to use leisure "

But that didn't satisfy the school mistress. What she wanted were devices to keep her girls busy and to help them make the time pass, so they would not get into mischief.

NO LEISURE IN THE SCHOOLS

No wonder school mistresses and school masters are somewhat bewildered by this matter of teaching the right use of leisure to their charges. Their utmost zeal in the past has gone into keeping boys and girls occupied. And lest the full program lapse there was busy work and seat work and other devices to fill what might have been the idle moment

Every well organized school was proud of its carefully planned program. And today we must study the schedules of a hundred schools to find one where there is an hour or a half hour that the boy or girl can call his own

From rising bell to taps or lights out their activities are fully planned. With chapel, meals, classes, study hours, fixed time on the playing fields with coaches, the purpose has been to keep every moment filled, and so to bed, lights out The head of a school by looking at a schedule could tell at a glance just where each boy or girl was and what he or she was supposed to be doing, any moment of the twenty-four hours

TOO MUCH LEISURE IN THE COLLEGES

The sudden transition from school to college is often disastrous to the boy From a fixed schedule and strict supervision he comes to a world of leisure, of what should be inviting opportunity, as wholly unprepared to use it as the soldier on leave or the suddenly freed slave.

So the colleges have attempted with tutorial and preceptorial systems, with hour exams and supervision in major courses, with concentration, and honors, to make a prep school of the university. Lowell at Harvard won great praise for making the college safe for Back Bay youth.

Some of the colleges recently recognizing this trend have established a long 'reading period'. "One of the few purely educational experiments in the new Yale is the reading period," we read in the February, 1934, Fortune edited by Yale men. The illustrations show one student asleep over a book, another extended full length on three chairs

As long as a so-called student is required or supposed to be doing something, even reading, there is likely to be pretense about it. It ought not to be assumed that a person doing nothing is wasting his time Given interests, opportunities, facilities, and time, he won't — he'll be using his leisure The one thing lacking is interest Schools and colleges kill it.

SUMMER CAMP PROGRAMS

The daily program in the booklet of any well organized camp is the most prominent feature. Hour by hour, roll calls, group activities, policing the camp, the swimming hour and the like, fill the day.

Twenty-seven bugle calls in the course of a normal day, in one camp which my own two boys attended, announced the change of program To the bugle call they learned to respond more or less promptly. When after two months they returned home they had lost their former power of directing their own activities, of utilizing their time. They had been trained to wait for the bugle.

Some camps, fortunately, at a higher cost for direction and supervision, do permit their campers some periods of leisure in which they have opportunity to act on their own initiative But the summer camp, even more than the school, has been too much influenced by the low cost wholesale methods of discipline used by the military. It saves a lot of cerebration in the high command and produces robots who simulate response and activity while becoming mentally stultified.

THE SECRET OF DISCIPLINE

The old secret of discipline was 'keep 'em busy' then they can't 'get into trouble' As children, many of our school teachers of today learned to sing in Sunday School, "Satan Finds Some Mischief For Idle Hands To Do" and "Work For The Night Is Coming." It was the soundest Christian doctrine of the time. We were just as sure of it as we were that truancy,— escape from school to wander idly in fields and woods communing with Old Mother Nature,— was the worst of childhood's crimes.

But Cato, master of slave management, no Christian, understood this secret equally well You remember his well known dictum, "The slave that is not at work should be sleeping".

Even the enlightened educator today will find himself relaxing, falling back on the old precepts of work,— 'keeping 'em busy'. It's the easiest way to keep his charges in hand. It saves a lot of trouble, it's the secret of discipline.

MILITARY ROUTINE

The West Point system of rigid automatic discipline has exerted an evil influence at West Point and all military schools modeled thereon. Though relaxed and modified in recent years, it still comes in for sharp criticism from its best friends, most recently in an article by a graduate and former instructor, Colonel T Bentley Mott, U S A.

He cites the criticism of Marshal Pétain: "One effect is that you delay by five or ten years getting the best results from the excellent education you have given him. He comes out a well-instructed and obedient subaltern and a first-rate drillmaster."

There is something about a soldier, there is a rhythm in military music, in the military step, in the military life,— there is an impressiveness about the military carriage, an efficiency about military routine that inspires admiration and stimulates the imagination. We need more rhythm in life, more color, more efficiency. Why can't we take the good of the military and enjoy it? But it is no training for leisure.

Where there is no leisure there can be no training in its use. You will see this demonstrated in the resorts about any military post where officers and men spend their time off duty. Although West Point attracts the best material, competitively selected from the whole country, few of its graduates or their wives have any intellectual resources other than card playing.

WHY BOYS LEAVE SCHOOL

The 'best' of our preparatory schools pay too little attention to training in the use of leisure. That would mean cultivating interests, but interests and leisure have had to be sternly suppressed. The aim is to get boys into college and the traditional stultifying curriculum absorbs their concentrated attention.

Only occasionally we find a school doing good college preparatory work, that maintains an attitude of friendliness toward the boy's interests, as at Choate, or affords opportunity for the boy to cultivate hobbies, as at Hill.

When two fifteen year old boys ran away from Hotchkiss to seek jobs as cabin boys, Time, staffed by Hotchkiss men, reporting, wrote: "They were both tired of going out for sports under the hard-driving supervision of 'Monnie' Monahan. However dignified and cultured 'The Duke' (Head Master George Van Santvoord) might be, they wanted no more of him. They were fed up with classroom tyrannies. Besides Students Wetter and Newberry were not doing well in their studies."

APOLOGY FOR IDLING

Once school people looked upon Stevenson's essay "Virginibus Puerisque" as dangerous material for school children and adolescents. Wasn't one of the essays entitled "An Apology for Idlers" and wasn't it educational and Christian duty to inculcate habits of work? Stevenson was so intense a worker that he could afford, even in the 90's, to parade his idleness. Thoreau never thought of making an apology for idling. He was too natural, too lacking in self-consciousness, to do that

When James Russell Lowell said, "At Harvard I would not have anything taught that is useful" it aroused the antagonism of many good people. What he doubtless meant was that he would not have Harvard give men any training in routine — in labor, vocations, the tending of machines. What he had in mind was training in the proper use of leisure

WE LEARN TO USE BY USING

The only way to learn to use a thing is to use it, whether typewriter, bicycle, books or leisure. The predicament today is that there has been too little leisure to use, too much training in routine, in machine tending — in all kinds of activities that do not contribute to the use of leisure

Our training in citizenship has missed its mark in this respect. Suddenly given leisure, the development of interests is fortuitous, unguided. So the use of this leisure thrust upon us is consequently largely controlled by revulsions from the things we have been obliged to do.

A TEST OF CHARACTER

What men do with their leisure, with their free time, when they are not driven by routine, shows what they are and makes them what they are. If they have no leisure or do nothing with it, they are not much.

We know a man who trains and maintains a considerable staff of intellectual workers. When looking for assistants he pays little attention to the platitudinous recommendations of professors or of former employers. What interests him most is the answer to the question, "What do you do when you are not doing anything else?" That is, what do you do with your leisure? It is a question difficult for the trivial minded to answer.

But for those who have developed tastes or interests this question affords a means of revealing themselves. If they have blindly and slavishly followed routine or if they have wasted their leisure in merely passing the time, they have little to say, little personality to reveal.

A fixed routine never built character. If it did the slave driver of the southern plantation, the military drill master and the routine school teacher, would have been great character builders.

THE VALUE OF WORK

Most animals have to work to get their food, to make their kill, to fill their paunch. To make a living, to get one's food, to breed one's kind, isn't characteristically human, not even animal Even the cabbages in the garden or the lilies of the field do all this better than we do

God gave us a better brain that we might do something more than these Some leaders develop initiative to find new work for the others. Once the strong drove the weak, as slaves Industrial leaders in England a century ago made possible through the factory system, the multiplication of the population as machine tenders, wage slaves

And so our mid-Victorian prophets, Carlyle and Lowell, preached the nobility of work And with new opportunities discovered, new jobs found, and increased production, came increased population and higher standards of living and eventually the dawning of social consciousness But when all is said and done, work is only to supply the means of living The value of work is to provide for periods of leisure. We work only that we may rest.

Once we held to the now outmoded theory of the leisure class, that men should work while women should weep, that some should labor that others might cultivate the refinements of life. Now we look to the time when all shall work and all shall have pleasures that each may, insofar as in him lies, develop an appreciation for the good life and a noble use of leisure

UNEMPLOYMENT AN ABSURDITY

There is no unemployment among primitive peoples. Gathering their food, plying their handicrafts, taking part in ceremonial dances, tribal initiations, contests, war, sex play, keep them busy. When they have collected their food they have their leisure and out of it comes their culture and their art.

But under a highly organized civilization we find man by the millions "bowed with the weight of centuries, a clod upon a clod." Feudalism fostered his breed Machine industry multiplied his kind. The machine no longer needs so many tenders. So he's one of the unemployed.

Perhaps wrecked by the routine of machine tending he has no energy, no ambition and no interests with which to use his leisure. Unemployment one finds among slaves recently released, soldiers off duty, just discharged victims of a discipline that allowed them no leisure.

WORK A MEANS, NOT AN END

While one is in flight from the wild beast, while one is empty-bellied seeking food, while one is doubtful of the continuance of his own existence, he is not in a creative mood. He cannot even see the need for invention

There are men of promise enmeshed in routine, caught in a squirrel cage, that never have opportunity to do anything Freed, they might do big things It takes a jolt or jar, suspension of usual activities, an industrial depression perhaps, to lead to a new deal Necessity brings out initiative and through distress we may find new ways out

Our modern industrial system was born in the great depression that followed the Napoleonic wars After centuries of repression and oppression under the czars, Russia was wasted and destroyed in the Great War And while the world was waiting for the sunrise, there blossomed the great social experiment on which the eyes of the world are fixed

The danger of stabilized society as shown among the bees and ants and termites, is that all are engaged in routine In the busy season the desexed female bee works so hard she dies in six weeks. There is no internal strife, the social organization is perfect. There is no opportunity or spur to initiative. There is no leisure.

THE PRODUCTS OF LEISURE

The great things that have been done in the world have been done by those who had leisure.

Euclid, had he been a slave at hard labor, would not have had the leisure to think and scratch out his diagrams with a stick in the sand Socrates had leisure to loiter about the Agora at Athens and ask questions of the youth of the day which led them to think along new lines. Jesus, deserting the carpenter's bench, found leisure to talk with the caravan men from the East and to question the elders in the Temple. Shelley, Byron, and Wordsworth, fortunately for us, had leisure to use.

All art results from a kind of play activity or creative activity that comes with leisure Cavemen, painters on rocks, etchers on ivory, of 25,000 years ago, have left their portrayal of the charging mammoth, the lowing reindeer. Fed by the successful hunters, they had leisure for art. The whole art of life is the art of using leisure Leisure, then, and its best uses, are the whole end of life, the one way we have of magnifying God and praising Him forever

Nothing worth while was ever done in the world except by the use of leisure. The great work of the world has been done by those who had nothing to do and consequently had time and interest and energy to do what had never been done.

So thank all the gods that be if you have nothing to do, if you are off the treadmill — then you can do the thing you most want to do. When you have no work go to work. "Blessed is the man who has found his work". But remember no one ever did anything who had a job

WHAT EDUCATION MAY BECOME

Education as we know it in the west is provincial. With monastic and ecclesiastical backgrounds, it has been influenced to some extent by what we learned from the Greeks who in turn had derived something from the older civilization of the East. Western education until recently has been training for this world less than for the next. And it has been directed chiefly at the mentality through the memory. Language-by-eye methods has been largely its field

DIRECTING ENERGY

All that man has ever done or ever can do is to make more or less use of some of the energy he has derived from the sun. All we can do in educating or training the growing boy or girl is to direct his energies, change or suppress them. We may temporarily stimulate the flow of energy, but we can't manufacture it. With all the thousands of definitions of education it is, in the end, merely a process of directing the energy of the individual along new lines. It may be memorizing the Koran, construing Latin, practicing a ritual, or engaging in the physical training that the Greeks prized.

Probably no one single individual of the species since civilization developed has had a perfect education, an environment in which he could achieve the utmost that was within him.

IN THE PAST

In primitive societies, before the development of agriculture brought its train of land tenures, kingships, war and lust for land and the thousand and one ills that we still have with us, before we had interfered with the purposes of old Mother Nature, the individual man probably attained his latent possibilities more completely than today. Civilization has interfered with all this.

Every civilization has made demands upon the education of the young, that they be trained in the mores of the tribe, that there be handed down through them the body of tradition, the wisdom of the old men. And thus education became a means of perpetuating the ideas of those in control. So have arisen the evils of our civilization, our neuroses, and that characteristic mark of our more advanced civilizations, the insane asylum.

OUR NEGLECTED INHERITANCE

It is only within the last few decades that we have learned of the great endowment Mother Nature gave us some twenty-five thousand years ago. In the interval we were all unconscious of it. It lay hidden and unused.

About the middle of the last century in the little hamlet of Cro-Magnon in Dordogne, southern France, in building the railroad the skeleton of a six foot man with a capacious skull was uncovered. It has taken us a long time to understand the significance of this discovery. This Cro-Magnon was a biologic sport. Here suddenly appeared a race with a new brain, with a thickened cerebral cortex, — millions more brain cells than any man had before. We carry this same brain in our own craniums, this great inheritance still latent and unused, the possibilities of the cortex as yet unrealized.

Dr. Frederick Tilney, in his book which he calls the "Master of Destiny", has written a virtual biography of the brain. In his study of the fossil brains of earlier man, he traces the progressive enlargement of the frontal lobes to the culmination in Cro-Magnon man, but he tells us that the human brain is still in its infancy, that the creation of a "better world" and the future progress of mankind depend chiefly upon the further evolution of a still better brain than the one we have now. The rank and file of mankind use but a small fraction of their potential brain power. If the schools could turn their attention from their traditional books to inducing and helping youth to use more of its brain power "there would be created a more intelligent world to live in, with fewer hatreds and fewer struggles."

PRESENT EDUCATIONAL LIMITS

Education has been limited, up to the present time, to some mental training, mostly of the memory and largely in the language field and in the ideology of the time and place. The effect has been to establish association tracts, brain paths or ruts which would save or prevent the individual from using his cortex.

There has been little conscious training of the emotions, and no understanding of how they were controlled by the glands. The effort has been to suppress or ignore emotions, not to train them. No cognizance has been taken of the importance of glandular functions in emotional life nor of the importance of endocrinal balance in determining personality.

Only within the century have we learned to respect the body which medievalists taught us to look upon with shame. Physical training and pride in the physical is still more recent. In spite of our contacts with the East at the time of the Crusades, it remained for the retired nabobs of the East India Company to bring back to England with them the Eastern custom of bathing and cleanliness.

EASTERN WISDOM

We Westerners have a very limited cultural history. From the East has come both our godliness and our cleanliness. Our education too through the medievalists, Rome, the Greeks, came out of the East,— mathematics, astronomy, philosophy,— all Eastern. The ancestors of almost any who read this only a thousand years ago were barbarians, cut-throats perhaps. But in the valley of the Indus four and five thousand years ago, as we have discovered within the last few years, there were great cities with a large merchant middle class, living in detached residences, with baths and open plumbing.

In the long cultural history of India, men have learned control of nerves and musculature when actuated by an idea. In India today one may find thousands of yogis superior to pain, hunger, thousands who have held arms aloft until they have become ankylosed.

Yeats-Brown, hardboiled militarist, in "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer", tells us how he studied the methods of the yogis to control their nerves, their glands, their emotions, and their feelings. These are things we modern Western barbarians have not yet had time for. Yet inadvertently, unconsciously, in our Gothic architecture, which leads to up and down muscular eye movements, we have developed a means of producing indirectly an effect on the glands which we associate with the spirit of worship.

NEW CONCEPTIONS IN EDUCATION

Few men neurologists tell us use ten percent of their brain cells. Insofar as education has to do with reiterating the wisdom of the past, thinking the thoughts of the past, there is no occasion to utilize our great inheritance. So education and all the stabilizing influences of our institutions have served to keep it latent.

Reverence for the individual, for the child yet unmolded, unspoiled by his elders and their condemnations, is as yet a relatively new idea for us Westerners.

Hughes Mearns, now Professor of Education at New York University, by demonstrations and exhibitions at the Lincoln School, and in his writings, has done much with other educators to use the generally latent creative impulses that exist in children. "It is to children we must go to see the creative spirit at its best, but only to uncoerced children," declares Mearns. "The new view of education reports that even tiny children have thinking minds. Adults, restricted in creative thinking by tribal taboos, convention and mechanistic living, laugh at children, term their wills, 'obstinacy', their indignations, 'bad temper', their artistry, 'idling' and their poetry, 'silliness'. We call their enthusiasm 'noise' and their passion 'puppy love'."

But children have an instinct for the right word, even at four and five,— "a beautiful, untaught rhythm in their natural speech whose outcomes — if we do not step in prematurely to 'correct'— are what we have always called literature. Unwittingly parents and teachers step in early to root out native expression of individual ability . . . Youth has unguessed gifts and to find them is the new quest in education. It is from this starting place that the cultivation of personal power begins, building up from something already fine to something inexpressibly finer." And it is only through perfecting the individual that the race can really advance

ENDOCRINE CONTROL

Some popularizers of endocrinology have gone so far ahead in their anticipation of what has yet been undemonstrated that they have provoked a deprecatory attitude toward the whole subject. All scientific knowledge of this is so new and has developed so rapidly that it cannot but stimulate the imagination as to what the future may bring.

We can now control growth to a considerable extent through changing the glands by a surgical process or by administration of their secretions. To a certain extent we can in the same way control some of the elements that make up personality.

The English biologist, Aldous Huxley, grandson of the great Huxley, does not hesitate to anticipate the time within a few generations when, through control of the glands and their secretions, personality and even genius may be determined. We are able today to some extent, by correcting endocrinal imbalance in the function of the glands, to change temperamental qualities as well as growth.

But there is another kind of control that may yet be achieved, conscious self-control. While Matthias Alexander makes no mention of endocrine glands in his teaching, there can be little question that many of his subjects suffer from endocrine imbalance and that his training in conscious control leads to an unconscious control of some endocrine functions. It is possibly equally true that the yogis in their control of their musculature, their breathing and their metabolic functions and apparent insensitivity to pain and bodily suffering have achieved a somewhat similar conscious control of endocrine functions.

We know that it is possible for some men to control, suppress, or at will to bring into action that most primitive and useful of all emotions, anger. From physiological experiments we know that all the effects of anger can be produced by the artificial injection into the blood of adrenalin. Other emotions may some day similarly come under our conscious control.

CENTRAL CONTROL

For forty years now Alexander has been teaching in a modest way to a limited clientele the possibility of what he calls "central control." He has published three books explaining what this is, how he discovered it and how it may be developed. Recognizing that man has only gradually, through the thousands of years of his existence, attained consciousness and conscious control, he has shown how the process of previously unapprehended control may carry us much further.

It is the lack of understanding of this, he believes, that is responsible for the nervous disorders and increasing insanity which is characteristic of our present day civilization. And thus, he has demonstrated, is due to the dissociation of higher nervous functions from the more fundamental and primitive functions which together are the basis of our conscious life.

With such central and inner control as he has trained individuals to acquire, it is evident that the possibilities of the individual are vastly greater than the mind itself in its present stage is capable of realizing.

All this was set forth in his first book, Man's Supreme Inheritance, reviewed in the 1918 edition of this Handbook. In a second book, Constructive Conscious Control of the Individual, reviewed in the ninth edition of this Handbook, Mr. Alexander explains more fully the technique he had developed for extending the conscious control of the individual over bodily functions which determine personality and character.

A third book, which reviews the other two, is reviewed in this issue. Mr. Alexander's conceptions and teachings are evidently far beyond the grasp of most of our educators.

But for twenty years John Dewey, our foremost American philosopher and educator, has been a pupil, a disciple and protagonist of Alexander's doctrines and teachings. Dewey asserts that while Alexander's method has found most ready acceptance from the medical profession, practising psychologists and psychiatrists "it is one of constructive education. Its proper field of application is with the young, with the growing generation, in order that they may come to possess as early as possible in life a correct standard of sensory appreciation and self-judgment. When once a reasonably adequate part of a new generation has become properly coordinated, we shall have assurance for the first time that men and women in the future will be able to stand on their own feet, equipped with satisfactory psycho-physical equilibrium, to meet with readiness, confidence and happiness instead of with fear, confusion and discontent, the buffetings and contingencies of their surroundings ”

CONSCIOUS SELF CONTROL

We have gone only a little way as yet in the conquest of self, in the training of the individual to control self, in creating environment and methods which will enable each self to realize its best.

An Olympic Greek would not stand a chance in games today with southern Californian athletes. Statistical measurements of college graduates over the last sixty years show, that without even taking thought, we have added to our stature. Within the memory of some of us better hygiene and better understanding of the functions of the body have greatly improved the physique of the younger generation

We have not made a similar improvement in the control of our emotions, in the qualities that make for personality. There has been no conscious attempt to do so, no use of the recently acquired knowledge and scientific data that would make it possible. The great mass of intelligent people still mouth the adage, “You can’t change human nature ” But the Soviets, working with mass methods, have demonstrated that you can

The possibility of bringing the individual to a higher development of his own powers, a higher control of his own mental, endocrine, and metabolic functions, through useful knowledge, planned training, and improved environment, is just beginning to dawn upon us. It would be possible today to bring together a group of less than a hundred physiologists, endocrinologists, psychologists, men in touch with the wisdom of the East, who could plan a regime for education which would lead speedily to a greater development of each individual, to a more complete control of individual selves, which would speed the time when all men may be gods.

WHAT WE READ

Our reading tastes and habits determine our reading. A study of what Americans read, it would seem, should be in some measure a test of the efficacy of their schools. For some years we have reviewed the statistics of books published and read as evidence of the reading habits of the nation.

SCHOOLS AND READING

The first of the three R's is reading, and the first purpose of our expensive, socialized school system is to teach people to read. Those who cannot we classify as illiterate. It took the World War to reveal to American consciousness that one in ten of our conscripts could not read or write. And we think of that as of the past, unmindful that in old Massachusetts the 1930 census revealed 35 percent of the population still illiterate, and in the whole United States 43 percent.

LIBRARIES AND READING

We spend at least a billion dollars a year in our schools to send forth pupils with a distaste for reading anything they have ever heard about in school. The least expensive way to teach people to read is to put books before them without advice or compulsion. A surprising number will read them.

The depression years have brought unwonted leisure to millions. As a result four or five million new borrowers were added to library lists and the total circulation of library books increased forty percent. But the amount of money spent for library books decreased from $2,340,000 in 1931 to less than $1,000,000 in 1933. During the same period in Russia the number of volumes made public for free reading has increased a hundredfold.

The cost of renting a book to a reader is a very small fraction of the book's price. In 1930 we spent thirty-two cents per capita from public and private funds to supply library service and free books to readers.

In spite of Carnegie, and of all the local magnates who, at the sacrifice of their relatives, have had their names in granite on the front of the village library,—if every American went to the library at a given time to draw one book, only about one half could be supplied.

The American Library Association reports that in 1931 the public libraries possessed 68,653,275 volumes, or six-tenths of a book for each person in the country. But in that year there were lent 237,888,282 volumes, or about two books per capita, at a total cost including upkeep and library service of about sixteen cents for each reading. But that was more than we could afford in our wasteful and unplanned social economy.

These are some of the basic facts brought out in the introductory chapter, Can We Afford Libraries?, in R. L. Duffus' "Our Starving Libraries," Houghton Mifflin, 1933. It is a detailed study of how the libraries of ten of our greatest cities with decreased funds are meeting the extraordinarily increased demand for books.

FEWER BOOKS PUBLISHED

Book production in America in 1933 continued to fall off. The number of new titles published, 8,092, was almost 1,000 less than the total of the previous year. The biggest drop was in books on education which were one third fewer, in general literature, about one fourth less, in biography, about one fifth.

From 1923 to 1931 there was a steady increase in the number of new titles published. The year 1932, however, showed a decrease of about a thousand, and now we are down another thousand.

MORE IN EUROPE

The British output for this year, on the other hand, continued increasing, 15,000 titles showing a gain of 188 in 1932. France's book production, highest since 1925, increased almost 3,000 over that of 1931; figures for Denmark, Bulgaria and Spain show negligible gains. Only in Germany and Sweden was there an actual falling off. These two, publishing 21,542 and 2505 new books respectively, showed marked decrease in their book production.

THE WORLD'S LARGEST PUBLISHERS

The Superintendent of Public Documents in Washington reports that in the last fiscal year Uncle Sam sold eight and a quarter million copies of its own publications, bringing in a revenue of half a million dollars. The only publisher that can vie with the U. S. A. is the U. S. S. R. Figures are difficult to obtain but latest reports are that their presses are turning out four times as many as those of our government.

THE YEAR'S BEST SELLERS

In the 16th edition of this Handbook we reported that "the lists of best sellers for 1931 again show a gratifying advancement in the public taste." In the 17th edition we noted our increasing social- and political-mindedness and the corresponding increase of best sellers on sociologic and economic subjects.

As compared with previous years it is difficult, from the list of 1933 best sellers, to draw any definite conclusions. Among works of fiction the surprise of the year was the revival of the picaresque, the three volume novel of 'Anthony Adverse' selling 300,000. The rather sloppily written story of Maine farm life, "As the Earth Turns", came second. In non-fiction Pitkin continues to be a best seller, heading the list with "Life Begins at Forty". Zweig's realistic "Marie Antionette" and Bruce Lockhart's "British Agent" follow. For the second year "100,000,000 Guinea Pigs" remains a best seller.

AMERICAN TASTE

A list of best sellers in America covering the period since 1875 has been compiled by Edward Weeks of the Atlantic Monthly for the Institute of Arts and Sciences. Charles M. Sheldon's "In His Steps", published in 1899, comes first with a sale of 8,000,000 copies. Gene Stratton Porter's "Freckles" with a sale of 2,000,000 comes second, Lew Wallace's "Ben Hur" is third with 1,950,000, and "Tom Sawyer" is fourth. John Fox comes next with "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come". "Huckleberry Finn" and "Treasure Island" follow.

Other authors whose single works have sold over a million include Harold Bell Wright, whose novels have sold 9,000,000 copies, Owen Wister, Jack London, Du Maurier ("Trilby"), and others now forgotten. H. G. Wells' "Outline", Lindbergh's "We", Durant's "Story of Philosophy", Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street", Zane Grey's "Mysterious Rider", and Somerset Maugham's "Of Human Bondage" have sold something over a half a million.

BLOWING OUT THE BOYS' BRAINS

In the 80's came the dime novel,— "Nick Carter", "Deadwood Dick". But during the present century has come the 'fifty-center', stories of unrestrained imagination for adolescents of from ten to sixteen. A pile seven hundred miles high of 45,000,000 of these board bound books has been sold in the past twenty-five years by one publisher, Grosset and Dunlap. Twenty million of these were written by Edward Stratemeyer and his assistants. Thirty-six volumes of his "Tom Swift" have sold over six and a half million copies.

Carleton Washburne in 1926, under the auspices of the American Library Association, asked 36,000 pupils in 34 cities what they read, and 98 percent replied with titles of these fifty-centers in which "Tom Swift" and the "Rover Boys" were the most popular. Since then these best sellers have been passed by "Nancy Drew". These facts and figures are brought out, not in an 'educational journal' but in the magazine Fortune for April, 1934

Librarians have denied the books shelf room Franklin K. Mathiews of the Boy Scouts has waged war against them, setting backfires of somewhat better books, and in a tract, 'Blowing Out the Boys' Brains', denouncing the extravagance and overstimulation, and the mental debauchery they cause. School men and educators have been silent on the results of the reading habits that have been established in the pupils who have been subjected to their compulsory instruction.

But they are responsible They have driven youth to it. This cheap fiction, exaggerating the prowess and ability of young boys, magnifies their ego vicariously After an adolescent has been held to uninteresting stuff, subjected to irascible, spinsterish teachers, made to feel inferior, he has got to do something to magnify his ego. So school masters and parents have created the mental attitude which creates the craving which these books satisfy. They have made the market for them They are responsible.

BOOKS OF THE YEAR

Trends of thought which change from year to year, not wholly independent of economic conditions, may be discovered in the serious books of recent years. In the reviews we have published in the last few years of books of greatest import for the future of education, this comes out clearly. A year ago we were boldly and pessimistically questioning what had previously been accepted. The year before we were groping for new light and questioning our own powers, while a year earlier we were doubtful of our civilization and fearful as to the future. And in previous years we were concerned with new points of view on man and his problems, new religious cravings, new doubts on the accepted.

The books of the past year give evidence of a growing consciousness of the world about us. We are becoming aware of many things to which we have been oblivious. New national consciousness, new social consciousness has come to us. Painful as it may be for the individual to entertain new thoughts, still more is it for groups of people to entertain in their consciousness what they have previously overlooked. Those who insist on pointing out such things are usually persecuted, stoned, martyred. And perhaps most dangerous of all is to point out to a tribe, or a people, its own defects. But even we Americans have come to this through loss and privation.

At last we have gathered courage to look truth in the face, in small bits, to face facts about our own defects and the rottenness about us. We are waking up, gaining consciousness — social consciousness. We have been fooled, looted, defrauded. Stephen Leacock, economist and humorist, says "the most characteristic thing about the American is he doesn't give a damn." But we are beginning to.

AMERICA LOOKS AT HERSELF

In the fin de siècle days when we were conscious that we stood on the apex of civilization, the climax of God's design, that evolution had flowered in and for us, — we were satisfied and smug. In the idealistic days of Roosevelt the First, 'Onward Christian soldiers' was our inspiration. The war changed all that. Stunned and blinded for a time, we dared not even look back at war.

Then a few years ago we were looking for the second car in the garage, the chicken in every pot. But the brain works better on an empty stomach. The 'years of the locust' have brought us introspection and reflection. America has been looking at herself, reassessing some of the things that were accepted, held sacred.

So there has been a flood of backward-looking books that would scrutinize and reassess the things we remember but misunderstood. Among the best sellers have been Frederick Lewis Allen's "Only Yesterday", John Collier's and Iain Lang's "Just The Other Day", Gilbert Seldes' post-Hoover "Years Of The Locust", John Chamberlain's pessimistic, pre-Rooseveltian "Farewell To Reform", James H. Powers' story of the ten years after the war, "Years Of Tumult", Theodore Dreiser's muddled view of muddled and "Tragic America".

Today everybody is doing it. In the movies,— "Cavalcade" started it, and a series followed. On the radio,— Edwin C Hill reviews events of the day, and reprints in his book The American Scene, Wilmark, 1933, the big news stories he has broadcasted, stories of the Lindbergh kidnapping, Kreuger, etc. The columnists have taken it up, and the once radical Lippman, syndicated, now panders to men of large wealth and small brains.

In the past decade we have become increasingly conscious of our changing behavior patterns, in dress as well as in thought. Allen, assistant editor of Harpers Magazine, follows his best seller "Only Yesterday" with a pictorial procession.

Here is a book, The American Procession: American Life Since 1860, Harper, 1933, by Frederick Lewis Allen and Agnes Rogers. The illustrations were selected from thousands to give some feeling of the general stream of American life through the last six decades. What most impresses one is the clothes and hirsute appendages, but even these, from the uxorious side whiskers to the handlebar mustaches, from the prurient hoop-skirts to the shocking tights of 'The Black Crook', are more indicative of mental attitudes than of moral latitudes. This is not a mere collection. It is a composition, an arrangement in juxtaposition, an elimination of the superfluous, making it a revealing work of art.

That one-time radical, Mark Sullivan, who expected to see revolution follow the war, as his waistline increased and his hat-band diminished, steadied down to a wheelhorse of the Hoover regime and began to recall our yesterdays. The five volumes he has published show his gradual mellowing as he settles into the hard conservative mold. The latest, Our Times: Over Here, Scribner's, New York, 1933, deals with what happened in this country during the war. We relive the emotions we went through over here,— how British propaganda brought our blood to the boiling point with stories of what the Germans did to Belgian children, and to cadavers from the battlefield,— how Wilson exalted us to heights of idealism, how our people starved, saved and sacrificed that we might bring about the "destruction of every arbitrary power anywhere that can separately, secretly and of its single choice disturb the peace of the world".

OTHERS LOOK AT US

From Colonial days and particularly during the early years of our national existence when the eagle screamed more loudly than it does today, Americans have always been embarrassingly eager to hear foreigners' opinion of their New World. Martineau, Dickens, Kipling, and scores of other Europeans have won American audiences with their satire or ridicule.

William Aylott Orton, an Englishman, for ten years in this country as professor of economics, in his America in Search of Culture, Little Brown, 1933, presents mature views of what he has discovered, but lacks the offhand freshness we expect in foreign critics. With mingled analysis and criticism he notes our self-consciousness, our over-emphasis of sex, our anxious concern about American achievement. Our rapid material advancement has created a "social fabric . . . fundamentally unstable." He confesses that those who seek the flower of American culture among the acres of cement and empty tin cans are engaged in a desperate venture. He cannot conceive of any culture worthy of the name arising in a society without economic security, liberty of body and mind, "work to do that means something in the doing".

Bernard Fay, French historian, biographer, friend of and apologist for Gertrude Stein, interpreter of America, of its pirates of steel and worshippers of the golden calf and wooden kings, Harding, Hoover and Coolidge, now tells us about Roosevelt and His America, Little Brown, 1934. With Gallic fancy he describes America as changing her hat and expression every time she takes a new lover-president.

Government of the People, Harper, 1933, by Dennis W. Brogan, is a Scotch-Irish view of our so-called democracy. He writes in the tradition of Bryce, Siegfried and de Tocqueville. He is interested in how the American political machine works. It is a nearly complete picture of American contemporary political reality such as few Americans have seen for themselves. He is conservative, tolerant and philosophical, but without illusions. Without denunciation he makes it clear that politics in America is almost a monopoly of dishonest and dishonorable men, but it is perhaps no worse than in other countries.

This young professor of history at the London School of Economics has spent many seasons in America. He knows the inside stories and the backstairs gossip. Consequently he writes more realistically than Bryce, and without the academic aloofness of Lawrence Lowell. Academic pundits writing at third or fourth hand of public men, reformed senators, cabinet members, — tell reminiscently what they think is fit to publish without knowing what it is all about. But Brogan seems to understand the game, — who is holding the bag, and who is getting the profit.

OUR CRAVEN CIVICS TEACHING

The democracy which we boasted has not yet been tried, and our school system, with its increasing complexity and ever-growing budget, has not yet accomplished the prime purpose for which it was founded, — to make good citizens who would insure the continuance of a democratic government. So asserted the speakers at the N.E.A.'s Cleveland meeting.

Professor Clyde Miller of Teachers College, Columbia, charged that the country's schools and colleges have been "playing the rich man's game." "Leadership from the wealthy has bungled things completely." "Two percent of the people in the nation control eighty-five percent of its wealth." He called for the teaching of a "new economics", and recommended national control of all industry and finance and the teaching of "fundamentals of economic control on a national scale."

In our teaching of civics the schools have ignored essential things. The purpose has been a better citizenship, a better government, but by regarding our government as perfect and failing to see its defects the teaching has defeated its purpose.

For the American Historical Association, W. G. Kimmel, in Instruction in the Social Studies, Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., 1933, has sampled the best teaching of the social sciences in the schools. He notes the conventional, stereotyped content, the emphasis on the theory of government, and the absence of comment on performance, the studious avoidance of all 'controversial issues', the failure to consider local conditions. "Sociology", when taken up, carefully avoids discussion of social conflicts. "Current Events" treated gingerly, avoids recognition of facts or trends. How could it have been otherwise when Insull and his ilk were filling the schools with propaganda and the hearts of little men with fear?

John Dewey in his pamphlet, New York and the Seabury Investigation, City Affairs Committee of New York, 1934, presents a case study and digest of a 'typical American government'. Unless there has been a recent housecleaning, similar conditions with slight variations exist in every democratic organization in this country and have existed for a century or more. Teachers in other fields have been able to utilize and make known advancement in knowledge of their subject. The study of languages in the schools involves correction of errors. All medical schools spend most of their time on diseases, their prevention and cure. But civics teachers have not been permitted to expose the real workings of the government machinery.

Great financial interests in every community have derived benefits from and are interested in the perpetuation of a corruptible government. The people have been kept in ignorance of this, and when there has been reform their anger has been vented on the intermediaries, the middle men, not the instigators and chief beneficiaries.

A National Self Government Committee has been formed with public-spirited citizens in its membership. Their purpose is to make it possible for teachers to accept the responsibility of making boys and girls public-minded in both school and college. "The Great Game of Politics" as it is played and as it was exposed by Frank R. Kent in his book of that name reviewed in the ninth edition of this Handbook, is explained in an eighteen page pamphlet, Civics As It Should Be Taught, by Richard Welling. It brings home the fact that our public service "is more inefficient and corrupt than that of any of the enlightened nations of the world — and our schools are the most expensive."

Howard C. Hill of the University of Chicago and Rexford Guy Tugwell, in Our Economic Society and Its Problems, Harcourt Brace, 1933, have provided a text which may accomplish some of these purposes. It presents a picture of our economic life as it is and points to what it might be. There is no hesitancy in pointing out how things actually work and where the abuses lie, nor in suggesting improvements.

Vividly is presented the present mode and standard of living of our populace at its different economic and social levels against a background of economic life of other times and climes. Then are discussed methods of raising the "levels of living" by improving methods of production. The book ends with a study of various proposals which have been made in this and other countries for "economic planning."

The book is well illustrated with drawings, tabulations, charts, cartoons. The first effect upon those who have lived in grossest academic ignorance of life as it is in our country will be therapeutically shocking, but that is what is needed.

OUR FORGOTTEN CONSUMER

Here we have been building a great system of production and transportation, and our sidings are rusting. There are plenty of consumers, but they can't buy. An essential link in our economic system has been neglected. After all, our factories are only to supply people's needs, and transportation only to bring the product to those who need it. But have we forgotten what our factories are for, just as we have forgotten what our government is for? If there were fewer people we would need less food, less goods, less government. The consumer has been the forgotten man.

That prolific producer of serious best-sellers, Walter B. Pitkin, in The Consumer: His Nature and His Changing Habits, McGraw-Hill, 1932, makes an exhaustive study of this much neglected member of the species. We are all consumers. So this book is about each one of us. More particularly it is about the things we most want, what we work to get, and how and for what we spend our energy and money. This book was seven years in the making and is the first on its subject.

Pitkin is trenchant in his phrasing. The American system has learned too late that though it is strong on production, "consumption remains a no-man's land. Advertising is a queer cross between a black art and a swindle. . . . Man the consumer is much more than an economic animal, — he is an enormously complex individual caught up in the Web of Life. . . . To understand man, the consumer, we have found it necessary to bring into juxtaposition his trends of schooling, temperament, vocational skill, language, analytical thinking, vigor, ambition, social attitudes, income, savings, race, religion, health, and many more aspects."

After considering "How Wealth Accumulates", he takes up "We Who Buy", "The Web of Wish", "Factors Limiting Volume Consumption". The last touches on habits, time, energy, health, intelligence, money, emotions, age, race, religion, leisure.

OUR OUTGROWN CONSTITUTION

There are powerful vested interests that feel they can profit by maintaining the traditional attitude of speaking of the founding fathers only with bated breath. The late Calvin Coolidge served them well. The old stupid attitude, by no means patriotic, of unwillingness to face defects and correct them, has been cultivated assiduously in our schools. This has been one cause of the blindness of our citizens to the abuses and defects in our government. But the new books are stripping away the sham.

The New American Government and Its Work, Macmillan, 1933, by James T. Young, is the third edition, revised, of a work that has stood the test for twenty years. It is practically a new book, recording far reaching changes and looking ahead to greater ones to come. The author shows us why our House of Representatives must always be a futile force until reorganized, why our President today has to be what our forefathers sought to prevent, why the whole system of checks and balances has broken down. Ours is perhaps the oldest written national constitution. Hundreds of other governments have since made new constitutions, avoiding many of our errors. Few have copied ours explicitly.

The Constitution, McGraw-Hill, 1933, by Frank Abbott Magruder and Guy Shirk Claire, professors of political science and law in the University of Oregon, is a comment and interpretation, article by article, of the text. The authors think we are probably "on the threshold of a period of reinterpretation of the Constitution, perhaps like the period 1800-1835, which will witness a broadening of the powers of the Federal Government."

Our Obsolete Constitution, John Day, 1933, by William Kay Wallace, is a frank outline of what a new constitution might be. Our present constitution attempts futilely to define what governments may not do and establish a system of checks and balances, which have proved useless. Mr. Wallace sketches the sort of constitution he thinks fitted for a new civilization and a planned economy.

OUR STUPID HISTORY TEACHING

History has a rhythm, a meaning, but the schools and colleges have done little to make this known, and when Wells sensed it and presented it in his "Outline", he was derided by the academics. Since then history has been rapidly rewritten for our generation.

If American history has been presented in the schools and colleges truthfully it has been because those in control had no desire to suppress or distort to protect their own interests. Rarely indeed has a professor or teacher of history been able to hold his job unless he presented a traditional view which in no way interfered with vested interests. There is nothing new or strange about this, nothing peculiar to our own country.

In Japan with the coming of the meiji and the seizure of power by the three southern clans, the old Shinto, the old myths about the mikado, then archaic, were revived. And it is on the revival of this mythical history that their power has rested.

In our universities history has been presented in little sections, in periods unrelated to other periods. In our schools stereotyped versions with significant portions wholly omitted and, until recent reforms, with undue stress upon our prowess in war have been prescribed.

In his latest book, The Future Comes, A Study of the New Deal, Macmillan, 1933, Charles Beard and George H. Smith explain how "the New Deal grows inexorably out of the Old Deal". This is a prelude to a larger work to be entitled "The Idea of National Interest", and summarily traces the decline of the old economic system which culminated with the bank holiday in March 1933. The authors find evidence that Roosevelt's policies make the "New Deal signalize a break with the historic past and the coming of a future collectivist in character."

Two other recent books present the working of these forces in American history in a way little known to school and college students. Who Rules America?, Longmans, Green, 1934, by John McConaughy, now deceased, attempts to give us a panoramic view of those who have controlled affairs from the time of the constitution. Americans are particularly prone to surround the past with a halo, to make myths of prominent figures of the past. We have been prone to think that venality and corruption have existed in our country since the Civil War only.

McConaughy, a Democrat and strict interpretationist, believes that our constitution has never been given a trial, that it was warped from the first by the Supreme Court into a shield for special privilege. He reminds us of the scandals connected with the first Bank of the United States, of Patrick Henry as an old man mixed up with the Yazoo land swindle, of the graft that followed Alexander Hamilton's treasuryship, of how John Jacob Astor borrowed five billion dollars of government money and kept it for twenty years without paying interest. He makes it abundantly clear that there have always been the shearers and the sheep, that those who have had the power have used it to enrich themselves. His index of the latest malefactors of greater wealth reads almost like the Social Register. Bitter and impassioned as his narrative is the author still has faith in democracy.

The Robber Barons, Harcourt, Brace, 1934, by Matthew Josephson, deals with these same suppressed facts of history in a somewhat different way. Less ambitious and impassioned than McConaughy, Josephson deals largely with individuals who have reaped the reward of their canny prowess at the expense of the people. It is mostly derived from books and records of investigations previously published. Most of the stories are familiar to those who have delved into this sort of thing, but are unknown in our college and school teaching. How Vanderbilt, Fiske, Drew and Jay Gould looted the railroads, how J. P. Morgan got his start in unsavory Civil War contracts, Rockefeller's ruthless extinction of competitors, Whitney's buying of the 'boodle alderman', the iniquities of Carnegie, Hill, Russell Sage, H. H. Rogers, and Collis P. Huntington, are all related to show them strong armed villains of finance without much reference to the essential part they played in the organization and development of industry or the breaking in of a new country and its raw populace.

Individuals have been singled out to justify his title. Whole chapters in connection with our economic development have been omitted. Land swindles, the packing industry, the control of the press would all afford equally lurid chapters with possible portraits of many additional 'robber barons'. Though the materials lie at hand, there is not yet a history of our country which shows all the forces at work building wastefully, warring ruthlessly, to bring about what we have today.

It could hardly have been expected that such a history could have emanated from our great universities, largely supported by robber barons or by appropriations from legislatures which are in turn controlled by them. Josephson shows the worst side of the old deal, the raw deal, which should bring added aid and comfort to the subscribers to the New Deal.

PERSONALITY IN HISTORY

After all, there were real people 'even in those times'. Historical events and dates of import in which no personalities figured really don't have much interest. It is people we are interested in today and we might be interested in people of the past if we knew what was in their minds, what they wanted to do, how nearly they achieved their dreams, where they failed. If only professors and teachers would make it possible for their pupils to become acquainted with personalities of other times they would arouse interest.

Marquis James understands and conceives figures of our American past in this way. From original sources he digs out episodes and bits neglected by the academic and brings to life, with nerves and red blood, people of the past. Here are sixteen episodes of American history written with restraint but with compelling interest. In They Had Their Hour, Bobbs-Merrill, 1934, the first story is of the "Remarkable Voyage of Captain Thomas Jones, Pirate", who, in an interlude between his piracies in the South Seas, took a shipload of Brownists from Holland, and through collusion with Gorges landed them at Cape Cod Bay in midwinter instead of on the Jersey coast, to which they wanted to go. The ship was the Mayflower, one of twenty of that name then afloat.

His last story deals with Dick Yeager, Oklahoma bandit. One of the most thrilling tells how Andrews, a Union spy, with twenty men in 1862 stole a railroad train and ran it from Alabama to Tennessee, destroying bridges and wires and almost wrecking the Confederacy.

We learn too that Captain Kidd, a prosperous New Yorker, head of a family and a business, in his legitimate privateering against French ships unfortunately became entangled with the powerful British East India Company and was hanged as a pirate

Even James' feeble candle sheds light enough to show the hollowness of our revered school history myths.

IGNORANCE CONTROLS

In our democratic but highly socialized school system, local school boards, in the rural school districts as in the great cities, are the arbiters of what shall be taught and who shall teach it. What these men and women believe determines the spirit and content of our education. Great educators, professors of education, writers of books on education, rarely influence them.

Most important then is the inquiry conducted by Charles E. Arnett into The Social Beliefs and Attitudes of American School Board Members, Emporia Gazette Press, Kansas, 1933. Dr. Arnett submitted to five thousand school board members a list of questions to draw out their opinions. Eleven hundred in forty-five states replied, and here we find the result of this inquisition tabulated, revealing in stark cruelty the blank ignorance and narrow prejudices of those who control our education. The answers to the seventy-one questions "constitute a comprehensive credo of the American school board member".

Sixty-four percent replying held that teachers should so indoctrinate their pupils that never in later life would their views be unsettled or modified. Fifty-seven percent were opposed to free speech. Forty-seven percent oppose anything favorable to socialism in school textbooks. Fifty-four percent hold that our great private fortunes are a result of proportionately large service for the common welfare. Sixty-three percent oppose public ownership of power plants. Seventy five percent feel that the government should suppress anti-war discussion. Seventy one percent believe that our present citizenship teaching is just right.

Arnett completes the picture revealed by Manly Harper's "Social Beliefs and Attitudes of American Educators", published by Teachers College in 1927, which showed that the American educator has little consciousness of any duty of improving economic and political conditions in his country.

INDOCTRINATING CHILDREN

The Progressive Education Association has been torn with discussion as to how far we shall indoctrinate children with the particular social ideals of the time. To some it doesn't seem that this is a worthy purpose for the progressives to follow. It is an old game, an easy game. Loyola discovered what that means. Fascists and Communists and Divine Rightists are building their power on it today. But to some who have veneration for childhood and youth and hope for the future if it can get rid of the past, it seems more vicious to give a child a jab in the brain than a shot in the arm

What shall be taught in school? That has been the subject of endless school board meetings in thousands of school districts. That question has led groups of citizens to go deep into their pockets to found Methodist schools, or Catholic schools, and has built up a great system of other private schools, more conservative, more progressive or more religious than the public schools which the same citizens have to support

It was recognized in the report of the Commission on Social Studies in the "Charter for the Social Sciences" that public opinion is one of the important elements "affecting school instruction in the subjects of the social sciences"

Citizens' Organizations and the Civic Training of Youth, Scribners, 1933, by Bessie Louise Pierce, associate professor of American History at the University of Chicago, is the result of an investigation of social studies in the schools. "In the quest for material used in this study, more than 200 organizations were investigated . . . interviews were held . . . periodicals published by all the organizations were surveyed". The appendices include many excerpts from these.

Many of the associations evolved out of artificially stimulated war emotions, some were the result of foreign propaganda to which the American people were particularly responsive and still are. Most of these groups, believing themselves to stand for one-hundred percent pure American idealism, characterized their programs as Americanization, and all of course were actuated by high patriotic motives

The American, perhaps because of his loneliness as an emigrant pioneer backwoodsman, is particularly gregarious, lacking some of the independent qualities of the French peasant who has lived in the same country, on the same soil, among the same people for centuries. One hundred years ago de Tocqueville remarked on this. "Americans of all ages, all conditions . . . constantly form associations . . . not only commercial and manufacturing companies . . . but associations of a thousand other kinds,—religious, moral, serious, futile, general or restricted, enormous or diminutive . . . If it be proposed to inculcate some truth, or to foster some feeling, by the encouragement of a great example, they form a society."

Whatever was undertaken by the government in France or England, might be started in the United States where every man was king, by anyone who could put it over on his fellows and gather a group about him. So in our country the blind have constantly led the blind and in the strength of union have driven the open-eyed Witness the Mormons, the Ku Klux Klan, Vigilantes, and so on. And so Miss Pierce has in a scholarly, academic way collected a vast amount of material on what these groups would do to our children and have done insofar as in them lay. And without revealing any sense of humor she sets down the ideals of the most diverse groups who would indoctrinate all youth with their own peculiar emotional attitudes or twisted prejudices under the guise of patriotism or citizenship.

The chief organizations reported are the patriotic, military, peace, fraternal, religious, youth, business and labor, and liquor. Flag fetishism, deference and love for it, are emphasized by many of these. The De Molays hope for the day "when a school conducted in a foreign language will be seized by the government like an illicit distillery." In addition to the bibliography of fifty-five pages and the complete appendices, the book itself is fully documented with numerous footnotes.

MANUFACTURING PUBLIC OPINION

Recently the New York Post published the results of a survey as to how well informed New York citizens were as to the most important problems of their state government. Not one in fifty knew the names of their representatives in the state legislature. Two thirds had never heard of the most important piece of legislation then pending.

Japan gave us the first exhibition in this country of how public opinion might be manufactured, when after the Russo-Japanese War they came here to concoct a treaty with the more stolid, heavy-handed Russians. They won public opinion and they won the peace. But it took the vast appropriations of the World War to develop the art which has since been further developed by our great public utilities. Our schools have not taught our citizens to weigh evidence, to distinguish between truth and propaganda. We are gullible and ignorant.

Contemporary Opinion, Houghton Mifflin, 1933, compiled and edited by Kendall B. Taft and others, is a collection of recent views of writers and leaders of opinion, liberal and conservative, on such subjects as patriotism, nationalism, politics, peace, war, religion, ethics. The contributors include Dorothy Canfield, Stephen Leacock, Clarence Darrow, Harold Laski. They say "Don't believe what you read, think about it, discuss it". Taft is rather pessimistic, thinks the American "doesn't care a damn".

THE INEVITABLE THIRD REVOLUTION

We have been skidding. It is time the wheels turned round. And they are turning. Some call it the Roosevelt revolution.

some call it an economic revolution, some call it the third revolution. Call it what you please,—laissez-faire is dead

It is to ring the knell and to insure decent burial that Arthur B. Adams writes Our Economic Revolution, University of Oklahoma Press, 1933. Somewhat verbosely and at times dogmatically, Adams reviews the collapse of our prosperity, the Hoover R. F. C. attempt when millions were poured forth, failing to do much good except to Mr. Dawes' bank and a few other likewise privileged. Adams leaves little hope for those who would revive the 18th century doctrine of Adam Smith. In reviewing the Roosevelt policies, he leads us to believe that 'the depression cannot be permanently cured "without government direction of industry" which implies a pretty drastic control of hours and wages and the limitation of "excessive profits". In other words, business must be made to think in social terms.'

The Roosevelt Revolution, Viking Press, 1933, by Ernest K. Lindley, is a rapid factual recital of events of the past year. Perhaps the most interesting is the first chapter which he calls The Roots of the Revolution, explaining how before and during the campaign Roosevelt organized his so-called brain trust and formulated his policies.

DIRECTING THE CHILD'S ENERGY

In all educational and training projects, what we are attempting to do is to direct the child's energy along given channels. We cannot manufacture energy, though we may stimulate its flow, but we can direct it into channels which the child would not have thought of,—doing algebra problems, working out Latin constructions, or learning a dance step. So the mental content of its mind is determined.

Our purpose is to make children do what we want them to do, and we call this education and get a big kick out of giving it a Latin name. We insist upon the repetition of certain activities so that they will become habits. So we determine the reactions of the child and its attitudes and outlook. We flatter ourselves that we are building character.

Walter B. Pitkin in his writings has seen more significance in the flow of energy than any other popular writer. In his most recent book, More Power to You!, Simon & Schuster, 1933, he sets forth his ideas on the technique of efficiency, the technique that enables Mr. Pitkin himself to utilize to greatest advantage the energies supplied by his body. He sees this utilizing of energy in three divisions: the technique of the power plant, the technique of the transmission lines, and the technique of the terminal workshop.

The whole subject of the individual as a transformer of solar energy has been but lately investigated. Why one individual gives off more energy than another has long been a puzzle "Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed that he has grown so great?" puzzled Cassius as it does us today The flow of energy differs with the individual, his age and his type, generally reaching a maximum in early life and declining in later years

The young of the human species seem to give off in energy to the square inch more horsepower perhaps in comparison to their size and weight than any above the flea Most of the things they do that outrage our etiquette, our ethics, are due to what we adults conceive of as misdirected energy. Our job as we parents and pedagogs conceive it is to restrain and repress that flow of energy and to direct it from their truant wandering in fields to gather buttercups or to watch the squirrels at play, toward memorizing the generalizations of some medieval scholars as to the forms in which Latin speech became jellied. Groves of birch, jungles of rattan, countless oxhides and acres of shingles have been sacrificed, in repressing this flow of energy

OBSERVING GROWTH

The subject matter of education has too long absorbed educators without sufficient attention to the objective matter, the growing boy or girl on whom this subject matter is to be inflicted How the child grows is a matter of recent knowledge in which Bird Baldwin was a pioneer The mental growth and early behavior of the human infant, of which hundreds of millions of loving mothers and fathers have known so little, has only recently been studied by Arnold Gesell The all important endocrine control of growth is an even more recent discovery. Within the last decade the anthropologists, from Malinowski to Mead, by a comparative study of primitive races, have thrown a flood of light on child behavior All these have rather butted in on the ground that was the pedagog's,—the subject of the child and how to train him, how to induce the most favorable physical and mental growth If the scientific study is continued, eventually we pedagogs may know as much about the growing child as the stock raiser or the gardener knows about his growing things

But there are still new modes of approach. Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Kellogg, The Ape and the Child, Whittlesey House, 1933, when their own baby was seven months old, adopted a chimpanzee baby of the same age, taking her from her mother at the Yale Anthropoid Experiment Station Then the two babies were treated exactly alike, dressed, fed, helped alike until each was eighteen months of age.

The chimpanzee was mentally more advanced than the human baby, coordinated better, knew her picture books better. At the age of sixteen months she responded to sixty phrases and commands, was not imitative, was more emotionally excitable, possibly more affectionate than the human baby. Were the experiment to be repeated the authors would place the chimpanzee with a family of somewhat older children, more nearly of her own mental age. We have much yet to learn from the apes.

BENDING THE TWIG

A Japanese horticulturist, taking the appropriate chrysanthemum stock, may produce on a single plant thousands of blossoms like a bursting rocket cascading forth, or a single bloom of gigantic proportions. Parents and educators have had, in a similar but less definite way, an ideal as to what they wished to make of their children. In early New England the highest ideal was to make and train ministers. The ministers in turn controlled education. Until recently college presidents and heads of girls seminaries and private schools were generally drawn from the ministry.

The ideal of public school education of the last generation or so has been for the teacher to prune and suppress. Sterile spinster head mistresses have sought to mold and create womanhood in their own image. The head master on whom the ministerial cloak had descended sought to mold adventurous, rebellious boyhood, to trim and repress until his pupils became prigs like himself.

The child was considered by the pedagog only as the horticulturist considers his plant — is it good stock for a process, could the result aimed at be achieved, or — like the topiary — would the stock stand the rigorous pruning necessary to attain his ideal? His purpose was to bend the twig that the tree might be inclined as he was inclined.

It is only since the time of G. Stanley Hall that we have had any real understanding of adolescence. When he started his child study he was a crank. When he produced his volumes on adolescence he was regarded as a rambling, somewhat sentimental, if scientifically inclined aberration. The last ten years have been replete with studies of adolescence, notably the recent works of Schwab, Veeder, and Frank Wood Williams.

Here are two books of this year, produced on opposite sides of the Atlantic, parallel in title and approach. Both profit by recent anthropological studies and give some account of the life of the adolescent among primitive peoples.

In Adolescent Girlhood, John Day, 1933, Mary Chadwick has based her work on thorough scientific knowledge. With an English background, the work is nevertheless well worth reading by Americans. Miss Chadwick gives first a background of the adolescent girl through all the past and then deals with her status and special problems at the present time. Showing sincere understanding of a girl of this age, the author calmly and judicially recognizes the viewpoint of the older generation as well.

Dr Winifred V. Richmond in her Adolescent Boy, Farrar & Rinehard, 1933, follows the same line in tracing the history of adolescence through the ages, and society's attitude toward it. Dr. Richmond is one of the best known women psychologists in the country and therefore her practical warnings and advice on the problems of adolescent youth may well be heeded. Adolescence, Life's Spring Cleaning Time, Stratford, 1933, by Beverley R. Tucker, M.D., covers a lot of ground. He defines the period as covering the ages of nine to twenty-five years. So wide is its range and so succinct is its treatment that it may be looked upon as a syllabus rather than a handbook. It is an excellent book for the teacher or parent to check himself on. Does he know about these things that have to do with the growing boy or girl, neurology, endocrinal, behavioristic? He probably does not, nor does anyone know very much.

But these are the most important things to know if you are to have anything to do with growing things, and here is a good book in which to check your own knowledge against what is known.

Elsie M. Smithies, of the University of Chicago High School in her Case Studies of Normal Adolescent Girls, Appleton, 1933, presents a careful study of eleven "cases", temporarily maladjusted, which yielded to the author's treatment. The cases include maladjustments due to self-distrust, physical disability, exhibitionism, volitional retardation, parental dominance, etc. This is a book not for the specialist but for the teacher or Scout leader, and will give a broader, concrete experience in her field.

SELECTING THE STOCK

Any horticulturist of course knows that you must select the right stock if you would achieve your ideal through pruning or bending. Some vigorous stocks will not yield to his process. So in human affairs that heredity which has afforded the largest percentage of successes was more or less amenable to approved customs, unless there was vigor enough in the stock to establish a new pattern. Those biologic sports we know as geniuses, or prophets, or founders of dynasties.

The Fascist government in Germany plans to sterilize about 400,000 individuals. Thus simply, a eugenist's dream comes true. How wisely, how sanely these 400,000 may be selected, how many incipient Nietzsches, Strausses, Schopenhauers, Wagners, will be eliminated, is a question, but there will be eliminated a larger proportion of imbeciles, idiots, and infirm. Even though stupidly done it cannot but improve the race.

And after all, that has become for most of us today the equivalent of glorifying God

Today environment plays a much larger part in the imaginations of educators than thirty years ago when the disciples of Weissmann were contemptuous of the Lamarckians John and Jane in the elementary school had ancestors that gave them certain ineradicable qualities and unchangeable limitations But it is the job of the educator to utilize and plan the environment insofar as may be possible to counteract the disadvantages of heredity.

In "Studies in the Genesis of Psychological Characteristics", which is the subtitle of Gladys C Schwesinger's Heredity and Environment, Macmillan, 1933, the author presents in suitable form for reference a vast amount of data recently acquired from scientific measurements of individuals of many groups. From the study of identical twins reared under different circumstances we have a measure of the effect of environment as compared with that of heredity We learn that no definite pronouncement may be made It depends upon the individual In one stock heredity will be of importance, in another susceptibility to environment is the predominant trait.

The final chapter throws light on the development of personality considered from the standpoint of the endocrinists, psychoanalysts, behaviorists, and psychologists. It is the most comprehensive study for one who would understand the genetic basis for behavior.

"Why did you do that?" is a favorite question of chiding parents or teachers. This book shows the futility of asking the child and tells how, by going to the frontiersmen of science we may get some glimmer of the answer.

USING LEISURE

The New Leisure Challenges the School, National Education Association, 1933, by Eugene T. Lies, is his third attempt along these lines made for the National Recreation Association. It is published with the approval of the National Commission on the Enrichment of Adult Life, a subsidiary of the N.E.A., which through interlocking directorates we conclude is a sort of foster mother to the original N.R.A. before eagles became blue and so many combinations were pulled out of the alphabet soup. But all these great associations were working together for good like the big trusts that antedated them

But in this case profits for the millions were foreseen by prophets like J. H. Finley who tells us in the preface to this volume that "at least twenty years ago I began to preach this gospel of education for the best use of free time" And you will remember he had the courage even then to break off work and go on long walking trips even to Jerusalem when such things were not popular.

"I had never heard anyone in America make this specific suggestion though I discovered that Aristotle" was one with Finley, he says, and adds: "It is likely that the wise use of increasing leisure may become for the masses as for the few, the chief end of education"

How this would shock our God-fearing pedagogs and parents of a generation or two ago who taught us as children to sing "Satan finds some mischief for idle hands to do"

"Shall Recreation Enrich or Impoverish Life?" is the subtitle in which Lies sets his problem "Depending upon the use made of it, leisure can degrade or elevate people".

For twenty-seven years the N.E.A. has been attempting to help find ways for the better disposition of leisure time. As early as 1918 in "Cardinal Principles of Secondary Education" the N.E.A. set forth as one of its Seven Objectives of Education, "Training for the Worthy Use of Leisure". Since then improved mechanical processes of production have made "leisure an increasing segment of life". "Schools are supposed to train for life".

This book deals with the public schools and attempts to paint a picture showing in how far they have contributed to training in the right use of leisure. The method is to show the high lights, the best practice in certain schools, and then the shadows, or the worst in other schools. Only public schools in cities are studied. Visits to thirty-five large and small public school systems in different parts of the country reveal great contrasts.

Private progressive schools, emphasizing the contrast further, were studied for ideas in an attempt to learn how far their practices and ideals had affected the public schools. The survey shows just how far inspiration from above has seeped down into the interstices of our public school system. Conspicuous are certain centers of infection like Montclair, Bronxville, Winston-Salem, where progressive ideas have been planted or where the people have been inoculated with desire for something better for their children by educational geniuses like Washburne at Winnetka.

The most valuable function this book will perform for public school people is in attracting their attention to those bright spots on the map which otherwise they may have missed. It is well that the finger of scorn should be pointed at the dark spots.

But after all, the school teacher's idea of leisure isn't very inspiring. What's reviewed here are the somewhat frayed and stale subjects that have been dragged through schoolrooms and around the school grounds as extra-curricular activities. They have been displayed in evening schools and continuation schools and summer schools.

And this education for leisure is a sort of canned or dried and packaged product. For the most part the book offers what public school teachers are looking for,— ways of keeping pupils busy,— busy work, pastimes. Why should anyone be busy? Why should anyone strive to make time pass? In the ways suggested for spending leisure time there's really nothing functional. They lack the true play element which springs from exuberance of energy, of vitality, imagination.

There is an excellent ten-page bibliography on leisure and related subjects including handicrafts, dramatics, extra-curricular activities, music, etc.

Life Begins at Forty, is by Walter B. Pitkin, Whittlesey House, 1932. We used to be turned out of school and college convinced by educators that our education was now finished, that the time for learning was over, that they had prepared us for life. Edward Lee Thorndike in his scientific researches destroyed this fundamental pretension of educators by proving scientifically that adults too could learn, some things better than youth. He gave new purpose to the lives of many and made possible such books as this. Life really begins when we are freed from routine imposed upon us by others, whether schoolmasters or an economic system. Life begins when one first tastes the joy of leisure, of doing what he will.

This book will help those whose life has been wasted in education or industry or office routine to find ways of using their freedom purposefully and hopefully. The chapters on "Busy Leisure" and how to enjoy "The New World" are the high points in the book. Parents are wisely advised to cease their functions at forty and leave their children some opportunity to do for themselves while still in their teens.

Spend Your Time, Teachers College, 1933, compiled by the Parent-Teacher Association of the Lincoln School, deals with New York's Resources for the Use of Leisure. It lists places to visit, facilities to use and opportunities to improve in the city and environs. These are presented under the headings of art, drama and dance, music, libraries, science, radio education, historic interest, civic institutions, transportation, parks, playgrounds, athletic facilities, stamps, coins, and photography. There is a supplement of reading lists, guides to New York's cultural activities, and suggestions for special trips. It is suggestive of how any school might use its community and facilities as a laboratory, though there are not many of course that have as ample resources as New York City.

More broad and incisive is the treatment of Leisure in the Modern World, Allen and Unwin, 1932, by C. Delisle Burns. Though this is based on a series of radio talks it gets to the heart of the subject.

AUTOPSYING OUR EDUCATORS

The greater number of the more important educational executives and teachers have during the past twenty years come under the influence of professors of education in our leading universities

Forty years ago there were only two or three universities at the most that at that time had established a chair of pedagogy, as it was then called. Since that time hundreds of colleges and universities, and, if we include normal schools, well above a thousand, have built great departments of education for the purpose of inculcating educational theory, teaching educational methods to prospective teachers and executives, besides those that had already had experience.

The influence of the outstanding men in these departments of education during these last twenty years has become enormous. They have literally molded the minds of our educators who in turn have played a large part in molding the lives of their pupils. If there is anything wrong with the results or if the product of the educational process is not up to our anticipations, then an autopsy on the minds of those inculcators of educational theory is in order.

It is just this that Norman Woelfel performs in his audacious book, Molders of the American Mind.

He has selected seventeen professors of education for autopsy and, like a good clinician, he has given us their case histories and life backgrounds as well. But before doing this, in his introduction he gives us a general idea of what he is aiming at, a more thorough exploration of the background of general philosophic thinking.

Next he surveys the American scene with a view to discovering 'some implications of contemporary social change', and he cuts deep.

This is no book for those used to platitudinous writing. His first examination is into the 'factors in the decline of the Christian tradition' which he realistically accepts as un fait accompli. Summarizing, 'modern life no longer operates under any real guidance or supervision of the Christian church', though 'man today is as fundamentally spiritual as ever he was'.

Next he dissects the 'factors in the decline of the business regime', accepting as fact that we no longer believe in 'the gospel of unlimited freedom for business enterprise', and considering that 'it seems a patent fact that the old days of laissez faire are definitely gone'.

Next he examines historically 'the beginnings of cultural distinction and independence in America', and finally surveys 'the resource for future social reconstruction' and the 'bearings of the contemporary social background upon organized education'

It is with such background that he dissects seventeen of the leading professors of education to reveal their innermost thoughts and why they think as they do. He discloses the general view point of each as to education, current educational practices, and reaction to the point of view of other educators.

The seventeen educators thus handled are in three groups. In the first group those 'educators stressing values inherent in American historic traditions' are presented. Herman H. Horne, Henry C. Morrison, W. C. Bagley, Ellwood P. Cubberley, Thomas H. Briggs, and Ross L. Finney. The causes of their traditional and conservative idiosyncracies are revealed as unsparingly as a surgeon might demonstrate a series of tumors to a clinic.

Among the 'educators stressing the ultimacy of science' are Charles H. Judd, David Snedden, Edward L. Thorndike, Ernest Horn, W. W. Charters, and Franklin Bobbitt. They similarly pass under the scalpel, revealing the source of their acuter vision.

In the third group 'stressing the implications of modern experimental naturalism' the dissection reveals John Dewey, George S. Counts, William H. Kilpatrick, Harold Rugg, Boyd H. Bode, seeing a vision of 'a new heaven and a new world'.

Woelfel then proceeds to dilate in a chapter of interpretative criticism on what has been learned of value for the rest of us from each autopsy, and in his final chapter he offers 'suggestive strategic considerations for American educators'. He concludes that the 'theorizing of prominent American educators about the relations of society and education has been limited by too much concern for social institutions which are manifestly decadent or by undue concentration upon technical scientific problems with consequent neglect of more important social considerations.'

This fearless book, clear cut and constructive in its thought, is radical in its method, and as Kilpatrick, one of the dissected writes, 'not all will accept all that Dr. Woelfel has to say, but if the rest of us will do as good re-thinking as he has done, the results will be excellent.'

This book has a bibliography of forty pages and an adequate index. It makes one see how limited and restricted the mental and social equipment, how empty the bag of tricks, of those who have molded the American mind. It helps to explain why we are morally and socially bankrupt today.

OUR CONSCIENCE

The Dawn of Conscience, Scribners, New York, 1933, is the ripest fruit of James H. Breasted's long years as an Egyptologist and epigraphist Here he briefly summarizes the story of how the Nile civilization arose and how out of the mores an expression of moral attitudes and justice was put down in writing as early as 3500 B C. This earliest ethical writing Professor Breasted has deciphered from an inscribed stone that had long been used as the nether millstone

One of the best features of the book is the many new, fresh and improved translations of old texts and newly discovered texts which mark the stages in the ethical literature of the Egyptian people. Breasted's main thesis is that our concepts of ethics, morality and justice which we attribute to the Hebrews were fully developed by the Egyptians thousands of years before God spoke to Moses on Mount Sinai We are the heirs of a social and moral development which, beginning in the Nile valley, has come to us "rather through the Hebrews than from them". For the Egyptian culture is three thousand years older than the Jewish and "contributed essentially to the formation of the literature we call the Old Testament" The wisdom of Amenemope, for example, is the source of the old Book of Proverbs The thousand-year old Egyptian version of the text Breasted translates, "Seest thou a man diligent in business, he shall stand before kings."

Imhotep, the architect of Zoser, of 3000 B C, Breasted calls the first "individual in history", a title others had reserved for Ikhnoton who after a long period of priestly demands from the priestcraft, swept away for a time the old gods and in praise of the one god Aton wrote hymns which resemble the Hebrew psalms.

As an archaeologist, as a translator of the old texts, as a seeker-out of the sources of the Hebrew writings Breasted is unsurpassed But to an anthropologist the title of this book is not satisfying For psychology, ethics and history agree that conscience in a large way is the individual's reaction to the mores of his people. And any primitive man, even a Neanderthaler, after he had broken a tabu and had reason to fear the vengeance of his people, had qualms of conscience.

Conscience is something older and more primitive than Breasted acknowledges He is taking the relatively short-sighted, modern, theological, Hebrew, Christian attitude towards this, not the modern scientific one. Conscience has always been and still is, in its weak survival, a premonition of punishment to come, from your fellows or from God, for violating a tabu

So what Breasted calls the "dawn of conscience" is the beginning of the sunset. Just as soon as men began to write down their moralizings and admire themselves for it, as soon as the kings favorites of ancient Egypt began to write down moraliz-ings for others to read and repeat, they became self-conscious of their greatness and started us on our course from primitive downrightness to modern selfrighteousness and hypocrisy

To read Breasted's excerpts from the moralists and to read the old Hebrews one might naively conclude that equity and justice had arrived in human affairs, but the sculptured stones of Egypt tell of tax-collectors grinding the poor, of atrocities and injustice which belie their precepts and texts, just as the life of David later on in Jerusalem defied his God. And a genuine idealist and reformer like Ikhnaton whose god "heareth petitions and cometh at the cry of the afflicted poor" was soon de-throned and destroyed by the ancient priestcraft

So Breasted, a learned archaeologist and epigraphist, has given us in the "Dawn of Conscience" not even a history of human morals but an excellent book on the development of moral precepts. And the writings of the Egyptian and Hebrew scribes are no more to be taken a hundred percent in the study of ethics and morality, than are the moralizings of Polonius.

OUR RELIGION

Any number of books are being produced yearly on contemporary religious thought, so-called. These books for the most part are actuated by awakened social consciousness, a well-meaning yearning to bring about a better world, with no definite method by which to achieve it.

Religion is undergoing a difficult time, well portrayed in Paul Hutchinson's The Ordeal of Western Religion, Houghton Mifflin, 1933. The author in one sentence summarizes his attitude: "The realistic modern who is also trying to hold on to religion has in these post-war years taken a penetrating look at the nature of the social order and has concluded that the idea of organizing this social order according to the ethics of the so-called social gospel is a delusive dream".

He is a pessimist, who sees no gradual development, only a catastrophic ending to our present social order. The modern Christian hope of making the powerful just to the underdog is not politically realistic, he maintains. "Either a successful social revolution or — another dark age". The ordeal with Mr. Hutchinson is to keep religion alive without faith, afire without flame.

The Sensible Man's View of Religion, Harper, 1933, by John Haynes Holmes. Holmes, the leader of the community church in America, is more realistic. "If Christians were Christians," he tells us, "there would be no churches, no dogmas, no sects, no denominations, no anti-semitism, no race prejudice, no nationalism, no war, no poverty, no violence nor the machinery of violence such as prisons, armies, navies, and the police " This may not be realistic but here is faith that leaps like a flame

Contemporary Religious Thinking, Falcon Press, 1933, edited by Robert W Searles, associate minister of Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York, and Frederick Bowers, presents a symposium of the attitudes of present day ministers to whom we look for religious leadership They are actuated by a yearning after social justice, after a more perfect society, and the thing called brotherhood, a vague sloppy expression for a vague indefinite feeling

For the most part these sermons reveal an awareness of sociological conditions of moral problems, which these men are unable to disentangle from our social and economic chaos Their beliefs are indefinite, not hard nor realistic enough to satisfy their grandfathers, not intense nor flaming enough to satisfy the next generation

The religion of most of these ministers is a well-meaning mixture of sociology and ethics, without any comprehension of either They are not experts in sociology or politics, and are seldom trained in these lines with which they deal so largely today. They still cling to the belief that the doctrine of love is applicable to business and politics Their thought is not "implemented with political realism " From their fog of fuzzy thinking and muddled feeling, littered with tags and ends of old time beliefs and apprehensions of new things ahead, their spokesmen agree, they offer "no panacea — no formula — no magic word" The sea of faith is at the ebb.

Here is a man still searching for that next world that the Egyptians were so sure about. At least he has made the title of the book to appeal to those who are searching for life in another world.

Dear Ellery Clark: Thank you for your new This World And The Next, Stratford, 1934 You've written a beautiful book. You've put yourself into it, years of your life, much of your stoical sorrow, and a great deal of your all-pervading cheer And you've made it a bright, white, glowing monument to your wonderful wife In a way, I am happy that I never met her, in spite of your cordial invitations, for I have known her and experienced her, a spirit redistilled, through you I've known her as a guiding star, an inspiration.

At first, your book was to me disappointing,— tolerantly, delightfully, deliberately written as it is, for there is little of "this world" in it, and nothing about "the next". I have always been wanting to read something interesting about the next world. All that I have read makes it repulsive,— the old Hebrew idea of pearl gates and gold paving stones, of a hierarchy of Cherubim and Seraphim, ranged above one another about the throne, jealous of one another, jockeying for place. And all those countless hundreds of billions of souls who have passed these thousands of years, milling about the crystal sea or around the throne, halos askew, the gilt worn off,—I can't stomach it. It reminds me of Lourdes and St. Anne de Beaupré. So you've disappointed me in not telling me something about the next world.

At first I say I was disappointed, and then I turned back to the title page and read, "For the Average Man." I trust the bait on the cover is intended to attract just that man who wants an eternal reward for his brief feeble effort—something for nothing—and you've shown him that he can't get it. But on the title page I find one bit of modest deception. The book's by no 'average man'. And so, I hesitate, knowing how good a job you've done, to tell you where you've failed,—particularly as there is a little question as to whether you have failed,—writing as you do for the "average man."

But I mourn to find your faith so weak, your chance of salvation so jeopardized, and I would that your faith were stronger. If it were, I think you might have done much more for 'the average man', to provide what he needs and craves.

The one thing that keeps him stumbling on, that has kept him climbing up, has been Faith. It hasn't mattered much what he placed his faith in so long as he's had faith. Mostly his faith has been placed in gods that have played him false, gods now dead, dethroned, eviscerated. And all that man now holds most sacred, and cherishes most devoutly will doubtless in time be proven false and worthless. But faith keeps him striving on. So I mourn that your faith is so weak and your salvation so doubtful. And yet, I think there is a way in which you can strengthen your faith.

You've approached the old problem in the old anthropomorphic egocentric way, as from the center of a dark room. Here and there you have descried faint glimmers of light coming through crannies. You've traced them all, you've considered carefully whence they came, and what they held for man. But you seem to have been unable to get outside that dark room, out into the glorious sunlight, out into the starlight and the moonlight where you could assess with more certainty the value and the source of these stray rays that you have caught.

Don't let me be dogmatic but do let me take another point of view. Science has almost given you this point of view, and I believe you underestimate the capacity of "the average man."

The whole thing is so simple to me. I know that my religion like that of primitive man arises from fears and resides in hope.

He found his hope in supernatural explanations I find my hope in scientific explanations Religion didn't originate with our species — it's older, and I believe it will still continue after everything that you and I believe in has been negated.

The elements of our religion we now know came from the Neanderthal Man Before him the Hemadryads sitting on Abyssinian cliffs before the dawn awaited the rising of the sun,— sun worshippers And all the way down the scale of animal life we still find sun worshippers And as we like Ikhnaton, rid ourselves of creed we shall still be sun worshippers.

One must go to the East to understand religion In India they still live it as well as believe it. The Mohammedans of Rajputana still fear God,— a meaningless phrase in Western mouths. We Westerners, to whom all our religions have come from the East, know nothing of the religious intensity of belief that leads and is leading today thousands of Easterners to abnegation of everything of the flesh.

We Westerners see only a little of the afterglow of the glorious sunset tints our ancestors saw of the sun which came out of the East and is now below our Western rim

Go to the East if you are really interested in varieties of religious experience. Religion goes sour in our Nordic, northern minds. Some of us have gotten rid of the old mystical religion, have found a basis for a religion on which we build a greater faith.

You quote at length from Tilney who tells us that this brain of ours, an endowment from twenty thousand years ago, still remains unused, and of great potentialities for the future of the race.

I believe devoutly in the destiny of the species The mastery of man over the forces of nature has but just begun I believe that man's learning to use fire by which through some new combinations of molecules he derived heat and energy was one of the most important milestones in history, and that we are close to the next milestone in which we will split the atom and use its energy — to hold the stars in leash and fix nose rings in the comets.

I believe in man — not in the gods that he has created in his own image, Jewish, or Greek, or Hindu. I believe that everything that man has to do with, can be improved, along lines now latent and unrealized. I believe that while there are latent forces at work, these can be controlled by man as he learns to neutralize and overcome deterrent forces. I believe the men today are better than the gods of old and the men of the future will be better than the gods we now conceive.

Today, as in the past, I believe that we need Wise Men who will follow stars to find a Saviour But one Saviour will not suffice — for this race we need many Saviours.

The Buddhists tell us that the last Buddha was the thirty-six thousandth reincarnation of Buddha And from them I have hope and faith that new leaders will arise to bring us new salvations

And so, I hope that out of the cogitations that the building of this book has brought to you, you will eventually build a stronger faith and win a surer salvation Faithfully yours, P S.

OUR FAITH

The March of Faith, Harper, 1933, by Winfred Ernest Garrison, is a misnamed history of religion in America since 1865. Telling how the churches "quite openly have been the handmaidens of the ruling class", the author recognizes the "contradiction between the church's moral claims and its actual functions"

Faith, Macmillan, 1933, by Stewart Means, brings together the results of thirty years of broad reading and deep contemplation What has faith meant to mankind in other times under other religions? That is the author's quest but he traverses such broad and fertile territory that often he dallies in delightful by-paths with loss of direction. Two conceptions of faith are considered The first is the static assenting to a body of propositions, and performing a set of supposedly sanctified acts The second is the more vital and renovating,—accepting faith as the out-giving of the innermost personality toward that which inspires it

Faith may well be regarded by anthropologists and psychologists as a primitive urge or drive that has profoundly affected the lives of all men The importance of faith, of belief, of certitude has been overlooked because these metaphysical theologians have so largely appropriated the idea for a narrow and vague conception For Dr. Means Paul of Tarsus and Luther of Worms are the perfect examples. But there are hundreds of thousands of men and women in the East to whom realism has been more intense, whose faith is stronger than was that of Paul or Luther. What is that faith? Certitude in the belief that holding to a belief will bring a result. What more could faith be?

OUR ETHICS

So long as ethics was part of religion, the voice of God, we could only accept blindly and, failing to live up to the tabus, develop a callous, hypocritical hide, a sanctimonious attitude or be overcome with a sense of sin. This very consciousness of guilt was supposed to be the one means to redemption This attitude doesn't fall in with modern psychology, since through ethnological studies of the mores of primitive peoples we have come to a better understanding of our own mores or group morality.

America's Social Morality, Holt, 1933, by James Hayden Tufts, with mellowed wisdom considers the mores of the American people as a nation and of the most important groups which make up the nation. The author is not interested in the morals of individuals nor in what social morality ought to be, but confines himself to an inquiry into the social morality that prevails and how it has come to be what it is. He finds "standards themselves are uncertain and in some cases shifting," and his purpose is to "discover these moral dilemmas and explore the factors that are causing strains and tensions".

In an introduction he endeavors to make clear what is meant by social morality and to discover the elements that make up our mores, or group morality. These are the things that American citizens as a whole value most, their attitude towards work, leisure, recreation, class, and race. The genesis and history of each important factor of business, industry, government and social custom is studied with the influences that have played upon it and its present significance.

Optimistic as to the future, Professor Tufts finds in the many moral dilemmas that underlie the present unrest, indications of moral health and growth. The changes in our mores toward sex, marriage, the family, and the greater freedom of women, he believes may lead to a new sexual morality upon a better and more effective basis. The moral dilemmas of the business world, of the American attitudes toward property and wealth, profit-seeking and public welfare, are fairly met. The phases of our social morality which include our attitudes toward law and law-breaking, the conscientious objector and the lawless police, the moral conflicts in theories of state and government, are not dodged. All these problems are handled in a scientific, impersonal way, but he finds morally indefensible some of our relations with other peoples, especially the native Indians.

The final chapter on public and private morals expresses an optimistic belief in the morality of the best American ideals and our advance toward higher standards of American public morality.

Ethical Relativity, Harcourt Brace, 1933, by Edward Westermarck, is a supplement to the author's "Origin and Development of Moral Ideas" in which he studied the genesis of moral opinions. His searching studies of our moralities and how they came to be had as great an influence during the early years of this century in forming advanced public opinion as Sumner's "Folk Ways" and Havelock Ellis' studies of sex.

In this book Professor Westermarck attempts to defend psychologically and philosophically the attitude which he was led to take up by his studies of morals. Our observation of certain acts in others gives rise, he tells us, to a specific class of emotions which he calls "moral emotions." Those of course differ with race and time and place. A negro with a white girl on the street of Atlanta or the streets of Paris arouse very different reactions in the beholders. In Paris, there is no emotion, the reaction if any is amoral. In the Georgia town the morality of the whole population is aroused and it may lead to instant reprisal.

Westermarck concludes that these moral emotions are the result of illusions. The main purpose of the book is to show "that the moral consciousness is ultimately based on emotions, that the moral judgment lacks validity, that the moral values are not absolute but relative to the emotions they express." Whether we are Triobriand islander, Virginia gentleman, or Parisian roué, we regard as moral those things which we approve, and we approve those things in accord with our individual taste.

Of course these moral tastes are more complex and more deeply influenced by customs and habits and intellectual considerations than some other tastes. The Egyptian of Ptolemy's time regarded the marriage of brother and sister in the royal family as good. The Alabaman of today regards the association of a black buck and a white girl as bad, but adopts an amoral silence in regard to the association of the white man and the black girl. The American countryman generally regards the fungi which are relished by Europeans, as bad. The Englishman loathes the frog the Frenchman loves.

All these are tastes influenced by latitudes and longitudes, oceans and mountain ranges, temperatures, and all the things that may have come out of the physical environment during the centuries. This moral relativity does not lead to moral anarchy, Westermarck makes clear. We are no less guided by our tastes because we know them to be merely tastes, and there is no reason why our moral preferences should be less effective because we understand what they are. As we become more and more attuned to finer things, our tastes develop. We recognize them as tastes. Our self-respect comes to be more and more bound up in a satisfying of our tastes.

Our morality, when we realize it depends upon our tastes, becomes innate, not imposed from without, becomes natural instead of supposedly supernatural in origin. As Westermarck concludes: "Our ethics may be relative, but they are relative to a total situation of which we are a part and therefore have as much stability and as much urgency as it is desirable that moral principles should have."

The sage of Baltimore, H. L. Mencken, produced the "Treatise on the Gods", took unto himself a wife, gave up his American Mercury in order, as he announced, to produce his Treatise on Right and Wrong, Knopf, 1934. Simultaneously with his return from a Mediterranean cruise, the book and its reviews appear. This good pedestrian work by a sober, solid sage who occasionally still lets out a rip-roaring snort at some hypocrisy, avoids the quagmire of definitions of right and wrong, moral and immoral. Mencken is as learned in the letter of his subject as any academic pundit, and with Aristotle believes that ethics should be ranked among the sciences. He is strongly of the opinion that "its frequent pollution by theology should not be premitted to disguise the fact that, at bottom, it deals with realities and with some of the most solid realities confronting mankind".

Beginning in a modern scientific way with some consideration of the ethical history of primitive peoples, he leads us on into all the intricacies of the tabus that grew up with our increasingly complex institutions and vested interests which we call civilization. The key to a better ethics Mr. Mencken evidently believes is in a better government. If we could apply to the economic business of society the same intelligence we apply to getting out a newspaper or cutting off a leg, our ethics, Mr. Mencken thinks, would be improved.

Dr. Richard C. Cabot, running counter to the artificial ethics of the medical profession in Boston where medicine has its zealously guarded priestcraft, took refuge at Harvard as a teacher of ethics. There his social conscience has flowered. There he has been a guiding star to men and women, and through his inspirational books a help to many afar. "What Men Live By" dealt with practical applications of moral precepts to everyday situations. It answered questions, stilled doubts, helped men to live staunchly.

In his recent The Meaning of Right and Wrong, Macmillan, 1933, he plunges into speculative philosophy and gets lost in the depths. He feels the need of a restatement of our ethics but instead of sinking to new and solid foundations he is led to a re-examination of the old austere doctrine of duty and loyalty. The nub of his ethics is the concept of agreements, compacts, openly or tacitly arrived at with our fellow men.

He says, "the substance of ethics is the honest endeavor to keep our agreements until they are dissolved by the consent of all concerned." These agreements may be principles of conduct which we have inherited or specific promises that we have individually given. Our morals he tells us are the result of experience which is still lifting the level and enlarging our vision. Life is a moving thing and morality must face reality.

THE PRIVATE SCHOOLS
STATISTICALLY AND CRITICALLY PRESENTED

EXPLANATORY NOTE

In bold face type the basic statistical facts are given for each school as reported by the school. Figures sent which seem plausible are indicated by an asterisk. Many schools have failed to report and others have sent figures asking that they be not published. Others have given a blanket approval of the statistics published in former editions. Such figures are printed in lieu of more up to date data.

The school name, for Boys, for Girls or Coeducational (Coed) the Ages of the pupils enrolled, the date of establishment (Est); the head with degrees, colleges, and title. The enrollment (Enr) is whenever possible divided into boarding (Bdg) and day. The number of the faculty (Fac) in general includes only full-time instructors. Tuition (Tui) with its various ranges, boarding and day; the grades covered and the courses given, college preparatory (Col Prep), academic (Acad), and special (Music, Art, Domestic Science, etc.), are indicated. The type of ownership, — incorporated, incorporated not for profit, partnership, proprietary; the number of trustees and how elected; the endowment; scholarships and their value; prizes and their value; denominational influence or affiliation; the colleges and associations to which the school is accredited; the number of pupils taking College Entrance Board Examinations (C E B Exams) for various years, and the number of graduates entering college in 1933, are given where reported. Accrediting by the state department of education and by church boards has been omitted.

MAINE

AUGUSTA, ME. Pop 14,114 (1920) 17,198 (1930).

This manufacturing center lies on both sides of the Kennebec river on a series of terraces. The state capitol, resembling in some details the Boston state house, commands extensive views of the surrounding country.

This philanthropic institution was established by George W. Hinckley, now president of the Good Will Home Association, then a poor preacher who took three homeless boys into his family as a nucleus of the two thousand or more boys and girls who have since been given a home and education under his direction. Mr. Hinckley was one of the pioneers in the summer camp movement, having conducted a camp for boys in 1880 on Gardiner's Island, Rhode Island. Needy boys and girls are here given industrial training and schooling. Boys and girls grammar schools are separate, but both attend the same high school. The boys live fifteen in a cottage. Parents or friends may contribute toward the support of the pupil if they are able.

Chartered by the General Court of Massachusetts "for the purpose of promoting piety and virtue, and for the education of youth in such languages, and such of the liberal arts and sciences as the Trustees shall direct," this old academy, maintained through changes and vicissitudes for over a century, entered on a new era in 1926 with the election of Mr. Hyde. In 1928 Cyrus H. K. Curtis gave over a quarter of a million dollars for new buildings and equipment. Vigorous, far-sighted, Mr. Hyde maintains this as a low priced school fitted to the needs of the boys and girls of the neighboring coast and islands. The low rate is made possible by a cooperative plan through which the girls of the home economics department, under supervision, cook and serve the meals.

The establishment of St. Paul's marked a new trend in education in America. The economic development of the country and the increase of wealth had created a place for a new type of private school which should meet more nearly the requirements of a growing wealthy class who no longer wished for their sons the old type of democratic schooling.

This need was first recognized by Dr. George Cheyne Shattuck, who in 1855 gave his estate near Concord for the purpose, as he expressed it in his deed of gift, "Of endowing a school of the highest class for boys, in which they may obtain an education which shall fit them either for college or business, including thorough intellectual training in the various branches of learning, gymnastics and manly exercises adapted to preserve health and strengthen the physical condition, such æsthetic culture and accomplishments as shall tend to refine the manners and elevate the taste, together with careful moral and religious instruction."

The Rev. Henry Augustus Coit at the age of twenty-five was called by the trustees to the position of first rector of the new school. Dr. Coit, whose family name for two generations had been prominent in American education, had received his training under the Rev. William Augustus Muhlenberg, at whose suggestion he was later an instructor in the College of St. James, Hagerstown. Dr. Muhlenberg's school at College Point, L. I., which later became St. Paul's College, in its eighteen years existence exerted a great influence on the future private schools in America, for among his pupils in addition to Coit were several future bishops who were later influential in organizing the earliest Episcopalian church schools of the parental type. At St. Paul's Dr. Coit entered upon a virgin field and during the formative years of the school he indelibly stamped his personality upon it. As Dr. Coit developed it the school showed the influence of his master, Muhlenberg, in its unreserved adoption of the "in loco parentis" theory. Combined with this was much from the English public schools which he had visited, freely adapted to new conditions, and inspiration was without doubt especially derived from Arnold's methods at Rugby. "A stern, sad man in clerical black," writes Owen Wister, "he was born seven hundred years later than the days of his spiritual kin." Dr. Coit was an able administrator and a keen student of boys and men. His career was marked by an unswerving adherence to lofty Christian ideals, and the strength of his success lay in his remarkable ability to inspire others with them. For nearly forty years, until his death in 1895, Dr. Coit was the head and heart of St. Paul's and made it one of the foremost of the American schools. Not without some reason has he been called the greatest of American school masters.

Even in outdoor life English influence was at first apparent. Dr. Coit encouraged cricket rather than baseball. The English schoolroom nomenclature, too, was here introduced to the American boy. St. Paul's still has "forms," but the "removes," "evensong" and "matins" and even the cricket of Dr. Coit's time are now forgotten. Most of the boys in the four upper forms have separate rooms. The young boys have "alcoves" in the dormitories similar to the "cubicles" of many of the English public schools. This custom here first introduced in the American private schools has been followed by Groton, St. Mark's and other schools.

Dr. Coit's immediate successors were somewhat overshadowed by his greatness. He was followed by his brother, Joseph Howland Coit, who had been vice rector since 1865. The Rev. Henry Ferguson, professor of history at Trinity College, who was an "old boy" of St. Paul's, accepted the rectorship for a limited number of years.

Dr Drury, rector since 1911, has brought new inspiration to the school and established new standards of usefulness. Several times in line for a bishopric, he now devotes himself to the school and especially to counteracting the feeling that St. Paul's is only for the wealthy. A priest with the ecclesiastical attitude, he has a genius for publicity that reveals itself in his prolific and popular writings. In his readable annual reports he fearlessly advocates progressive innovations which must have had a broadening educational effect upon the alumni. He has introduced with success a measure of student control and self-help in the dormitory life. In many other ways the student life has been broadened and deepened.

St. Paul's is today the largest of the church schools, enrolling over four hundred. On the long waiting list about a fifth are sons of alumni. Some boys receive partial remission of tuition or full scholarships each year.

This ancient town, with its wide, elm-shaded streets and air of undisturbed tranquillity, resembles perhaps more than any other New England village an old English provincial town. The buildings of Phillips Exeter Academy lie about a spacious campus on either side of Front Street. The main Academy building, designed by Cram and Ferguson in 1915, is a reproduction in brick and marble of the smaller building erected in 1794. The Plimpton Playing Fields extend from Court Street to the river, across which are the Plimpton Fields Beyond. Bordering in Front Street is the sixteen acre campus of Robinson Seminary and on High Street, near the Academy stadium, Emerson School for Boys occupies the Follansbee estate.

Stirred by the immediate success of Phillips Academy at Andover, founded by his brother and his nephew, John Phillips established The Phillips Exeter Academy in his home town in New Hampshire. It was incorporated by the legislature in 1781 and was opened early in 1783.

Benjamin Abbot, the second principal, ruled over the institution with great power and wisdom for the term of fifty years. He had been trained at Andover under Principal Pearson, graduated from Harvard in 1788, and came immediately to Phillips Exeter where he became perhaps the most famous of all the early academy teachers. "Little Daniel Webster came to him for schooling in 1796. Edward Everett finished his preparation for college here at the age of thirteen. Lewis Cass came to the school at the age of ten, a headstrong boy, fond of pranks and of outdoor life; and here he remained for five years and made a very good record." Lincoln, Grant and Cleveland sent their sons to Exeter. In 1838 Gideon L. Soule, who had already been a teacher in the school for seventeen years, succeeded Dr. Abbot, and in 1872 the fiftieth year of his continuous service in the academy was celebrated.

Exeter's alumni represent every state of the Union and many foreign countries. No other school has given so many distinguished men to the nation. In 1880, at the close of the first century of her existence, Exeter numbered among her alumni "nine college presidents, including three of Harvard, fifty-two college professors, two hundred and forty-five teachers, thirty-six authors, five ambassadors, seven cabinet ministers, twenty-eight members of Congress, twelve governors of states, a long list of Federal and State judges, Army and Naval officers, and more than a thousand professional men " Such a contribution to the nation's assets must be due to the spirit of Exeter, which has not only attracted pupils of promise, but accounts for their fruitful development

At Exeter there is a progressive spirit which accepts nothing as necessarily final in educational work. With all its rich traditions Exeter has never become moss-grown There was no Theological Seminary as at Andover to hold it so strictly to orthodoxy, and its students continued to resort to the more liberal Harvard, and today Exeter remains to a marked extent a school preparatory to Harvard There is more of the university atmosphere, of the freedom and the fostering of the individual at Exeter than at perhaps any other great American school The atmosphere at Exeter is essentially democratic and thoroughly American Not only does it attract seven hundred students from all over the country, but admission is in no way dependent upon class, race or wealth, or the lack of any of these Each boy stands on his merits

The long line of principals, men of strong personality, may have prompted President Eliot of Harvard to characterize Exeter as "one of the most precious institutions of the country." Not the least of these was Harlan P. Amen, who, coming to the principalship after "a period of executive laxness," in his eighteen years of office, by strong and sympathetic leadership, brought Exeter again to her ancient standards Dr. Perry, elected principal in 1914, was previously a master at Lawrenceville School and a professor at Williams College To him in large part is due the recent great development in material plant and endowment through his close contact with the alumni in all parts of the country. The munificent Harkness gift, received in 1930, has enabled Principal Perry to inaugurate a system of class instruction in small groups and conferences limited to ten or twelve. In 1934, the last remains of the old country academy idea of boarding round disappeared and, as at Andover and most other schools, a flat rate was made covering all charges An unusual number of scholarships makes it possible for Exeter to enroll boys of good scholastic standing who are unable to pay the full rate See page 803.

Long a famous educational center, this beautiful old town is rich in literary associations which linger about some of its Colonial houses. On Seminary Hill a mile south of the center, the Memorial Clock Tower with its carillon on the campus of Phillips Academy, is a conspicuous landmark from afar. The increased endowment, the enlarged grounds landscaped by Olmsted Brothers, the new buildings designed by Charles Platt, the new Inn, a model of restrained and luxurious comfort occupying the hillside site of the old Theological Seminary, are among the great transformations that have recently taken place. A little further on is Abbot Academy with its buildings grouped about a circular green. The Brooks School at North Andover overlooks Chochickewick Lake.

Early in the field of education for women, Abbot was the first incorporated school for girls in New England. Miss Bailey, principal since 1912 and in 1929 made a trustee of her college, Wellesley, has impressed the stamp of her own personality on the school and on its life. Undiverted by passing fashions, maintaining the even tenor of its traditions—neither exclusively college preparatory nor a junior college—the school offers diverse interests to the girl of preparatory school age. Abbot is proud of its college preparation but even more of its alumnae and the work that they have done and are doing in the home, the community and the world. At present nearly every state in the union is represented, though more than half the girls come from New England. Daughters, granddaughters, and great-granddaughters of loyal alumnae turn to Abbot for their schooling. See page 858.

Named in memory of Phillips Brooks and started by Groton men, there is no connection between the two schools, although Endicott Peabody is president of the board of trustees of the Brooks School and Mr Ashburn was a Groton boy who later taught at St Bernard's, New York. The simplicity, directness and youth of its head master are reflected in the plans for the school, the buildings grouped about a New England village green. Starting with two lower classes, the school has added a grade each year and now prepares efficiently for college

Phillips Academy is the oldest of the great national schools which have become such distinctive features in American education. Its founder, Samuel Phillips, and its first head master, Eliphalet Pearson, were both students at Dummer and classmates at Harvard College, graduating in the class of 1771. In 1778 Samuel Phillips, together with his father and his uncle John, deeded both land and money for the purpose of founding the school. According to this document, the donors proposed "to lay the foundation of a public free SCHOOL OR ACADEMY for the purpose of instructing Youth, not only in English and Latin Grammar, Writing, Arithmetic and those Sciences wherein they are commonly taught; but more especially to learn them the great end and real business of living." Further on, "it is again declared that the first and principal object of this Institution is the promotion of true piety and virtue."

Andover was doubtless chosen as the site because it was the old home of the family, as the father of the two brothers had been a former master of the Grammar School at Andover. The school opened in the midst of the Revolution and in 1780 was incorporated with the title of Phillips Academy, the first chartered academy in New England. Among its early patrons were Washingtons and Lees from Virginia, as well as Lowells and Quincys from Massachusetts. The national appeal has continued and forty-one states and eight countries are represented in the current catalog.

Eliphalet Pearson, the first principal, was a man of great force and versatility and of commanding presence who held his pupils well in awe and was known to the boys as "Elephant" Pearson. He afterward became professor of Hebrew at Harvard and still later in the Theological Seminary at Andover.

There were twenty-three boys in the academy, when, in 1810, Dr. John Adams came to the master's throne. By 1817 the number had increased to a hundred, and during his twenty-three years Dr. Adams admitted 1119 pupils, nearly a fifth of whom became ministers.

Under Samuel H. Taylor, a man of picturesque and striking personality, head master from 1837 to 1871, the institution gradually took on its present character. After his death, however it declined in prestige until it was rejuvenated and brought in touch with modern methods of education by Dr. Cecil F. P. Bancroft, principal from 1874 to 1901.

The first head master to give his whole time to administration was Alfred E. Stearns, in office for thirty years from 1903, alumnus of the Theological Seminary and of Amherst, to whose tact, vision and energy the school and the plant of today are a monument.

In the early days no housing provision was made for the boys, but they were left to the mercies of the townspeople. Like Exeter, Andover from the first repudiated the "in loco parentis" theory of school life, but with the building of dormitories this tradition has become a memory. Each dormitory is in charge of a "house prof" who gives careful and regular supervision to his charges.

Andover perhaps more than Exeter long remained conservative, less influenced by the Unitarian movements which have stirred New England, and perhaps for that reason Andover early became primarily a preparatory school for more conservative Yale rather than Harvard, which soon came under more liberal influences. In its long career it has prepared more boys for Yale than any other school in the country. Democracy and simplicity have been its tone. Nearly two hundred boys each year receive some assistance in paying their expenses.

To the casual visitor Andover looks like a college. There is no study hall. The boys wander from their dormitory rooms across the campus to their recitations. Andover's archæological museum, with its research workers, its art museums with special exhibits, add to the college flavor.

The old, primitive, austere life of Andover has given away in the last decade to a richer life as millions have been spent in enlarging and beautifying the plant. Part of these millions came through gifts secured by 'Tom' Cochran, old alumnus, Morgan partner. The old Seminary and old Academy buildings have been remodeled, decapitated, moved about, and new and beautiful buildings from the drawing board of Charles A. Platt make an ensemble fittingly designated 'the loveliest group of buildings in America.'

More than twenty thousand boys have graduated from the school, about sixty per cent of whom have gone to Yale and perhaps twenty per cent to Harvard. Its more than nine thousand and loyal living alumni are organized in numerous associations throughout the country. The continued interest of the Andover alumni through the years has brought to the school increased endowments and gifts.

Mr. Fuess was appointed after Mr. Stearn's resignation early in 1933. Like his predecessor, Mr. Fuess is a graduate of Amherst. He has been instructor of English at Andover since 1908, secretary of the alumni fund, editor of the alumni magazine, secretary for information and, at intervals in his academic career, executive of numerous patriotic and civic organizations. He is official historian of Andover, has published a score of books, and is a specialist in New England biographies. From the first he has boldly established new policies, strengthened the bonds with the alumni through frequent visits and numerous addresses all over the country, and has displayed versatility, keen sense of humor, tact and skill. He has set as one of his purposes to teach the boy in the new deal "how to adjust himself to his environment and to remold it to his heart's desire." See page 801.

A school of national rather than local repute, Lasell was founded by Professor Lasell of Williams College. Since its early years it has offered the equivalent of junior college work. Under Charles C. Bragdon for thirty-four years from 1874, many practical features were introduced including the study of home economics on a scientific basis. Dr. Winslow who came to the school as a master in 1898, has been in control since 1908 as principal and more recently president. He has practical business ideals as to the education of the modern woman. The preparatory school, Woodland Park, offers work from the seventh grade.

This school was opened by the late R. Heber Howe, who for twenty years had been a master at Middlesex and from 1920 rowing coach at Harvard. He encouraged affiliations with schools in France and England, and, a naturalist, established an unusually well equipped museum for the natural sciences. Mr. Taylor, long the most popular master at Middlesex, was appointed to the headmastership on Dr. Howe's death in 1932. An engaging personality, he is a man of vigor as well as tact, and handles with great success both boys and their families. Mr. Taylor has emphasized the separation of the lower school under William T. Barker and a "combination of conservative and mildly progressive education."

BOSTON, MASS. Pop 748,060 (1920) 781,188 (1930).

Provincial it may be, but Boston is a city of individuality and local flavor which often reminds visitors of old English towns, even the one for which it is named. Harsh its climate, snobbish its people, corrupt its government, still it is one of the world's choicest places of residence. Set in a basin of hills about a beautiful harbor, the city is within easy reach of some of the loveliest of the New England countryside.

Many claim it as home who have no vote, for most prominent Bostonians live outside its confines and anyone who lives within fifty miles may announce himself as from Boston. The aristocrats of Boston all left with Lord Howe. The old Boston families of today are for the most part derived from the rabble of smugglers and privateersmen who poured in as the Tories left with the British fleet. Most pride themselves on their conservatism, for the more radical Bostonians, in life derided and mobbed, are now enshrined in bronze or native granite.

A surprising number of good things originated here—shoe-making, etherizing, Christian Science. Boston has been a hotbed for new ideas, new religions, new institutions—educational and social. Its lists of 'firsts' in the past tense rank high. And new ideas still germinate in this fertile soil though many Bostonians have moved away to leaven newer and rawer communities.

The Boston puritans of today came from Ireland within the century and their moral censures come from the mouths of a Curley or O'Connell. Only to outside vulgarians is it the home of the bean. Bostonians don't know beans, frijoles. All they know is the California pea bean cooked in one particular way. No longer is it the home of the cod. And the Cabots are mostly queer people, and the Lowells know not God.

Boston is not a state of mind as some, dazed, have thought. It is the stronghold of trustee estates of the third and fourth generations managed by cultured aristocrats whose skin grows close to the bone, whose chief interest is to keep the return on their capital unfluctuating. To insure necessary concessions, they relegate power to financial and political gangsters who in turn seek their reward from the underworld.

The City has turned its back on its island-studded harbor to face the Back Bay and the West whose railroads and mines it has exploited to the enrichment of its families. Except for Beacon Hill, the city has never improved its points of vantage. Its heights remain uncrowned, its waterfront misused. The golden dome on Beacon Hill, the hub-cap of the universe, long looked down on the greatest educational center and student population, and until the dawn of the twentieth century, on the literary center of the country. The higher institutions of learning include, in Boston, Boston University (Methodist), Boston College (Catholic), and Simmons College. Across the Charles are the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Harvard, and Radcliffe. On the outer fringes are Tufts and Wellesley. These with the professional and vocational schools enroll some 30,000 students.

The private schools, patronized by upper middle class families are in Back Bay and the Fenway. As the wealthier Bostonians live mostly outside the city, Brookline, the Newtons, Milton, Dedham, Cambridge, Weston, Waltham and Concord, all have their private schools, separately treated.

Developed along modern but conservative lines, Huntington School emphasizes preparation for college and technical schools. Special courses prepare for M.I.T., for business administration colleges, and for College Board examinations. The school is housed in the Boston Y.M.C.A. building which, with a playing field in Brookline, gives it an athletic equipment unusual for a city school. The success of the school has been due to its filling a real need. A nine weeks summer session admitting girls as well as boys opens the first Monday in July and covers an entire year's work in all grammar and high school subjects. Mr. Sampson, connected with the school since 1912, and head since 1925, is devoted to the interests of his boys. See page 808.

Named for Mary C S May, this is a continuation of Miss Folsom's School which for many years enjoyed the highest social standing. Miss May established a regime which appealed to a characteristic Boston clientele by whom she was regarded with trust and confidence. In 1918, after many years of service, she was succeeded by Miss Degen, long her associate. Miss Walley was made associate in 1925. There is a strong college trained faculty. In addition to regular college preparatory and post graduate courses, the school offers advantages in French.

Alumni 1583. Approved by N E Col Ent Certif Bd. Member N E Assoc Col and Secondary Sch.*

Roxbury Latin School is the oldest endowed secondary school in the United States. Nine years after the establishment of Harvard College, and only fifteen years after the founding of Boston, it began to prepare boys for Harvard and has continued its work without interruption. It resulted largely from the influential efforts of John Eliot, the "Apostle to the Indians," who when minister of the First Church of Roxbury, together with other inhabitants of the town, signed a statement that they "in consideration of their religious care of posterity, have taken into consideration how necessary the education of their children in literature will be, to fit them for public service, both in Church and Commonwealth, in succeeding ages. They, therefore, unanimously have consented and agreed to erect a free school in the said Town of Roxbury."

"The Free Schoole in Roxburie," as it was called, was not then free in the sense of being supported by uniform taxation or free from all tuition fees. But today the school is free to all boys living within the limits of the original town of Roxbury. In 1671 Thomas Bell, formerly a freeman of Roxbury, died in London, willing two hundred acres of Roxbury lands to the school and naming the Rev. John Eliot and two other officers of the First Church as trustees of the endowment.

Cotton Mather, half a century later, wrote of the school, "Roxbury could not live quietly without a free school in the Town: and the Issue has been one which has almost made me put the Title of Schola Illustris upon that little Nursery; that is, that Roxbury has afforded more Scholars, first for the College, and then for the Publick, than any Town of its Bigness, or if I mistake not, of twice its Bigness, in all New England."

The school has always been intimately associated with Harvard, fitting most of its pupils for the higher work there. College preparation in Colonial days was a matter of intensive education. The regulations for admission were thus stated: "When any Scholar is able to understand Tully, or such like classical Latine Author ex tempore, and make and speake true Latine in Verse and Prose, suo ut aiunt Marte; and decline perfectly the Paradigm's of Nounes and Verbes in the Greek tongue: Let him then and not before be capable of admission into the College."

William C. Collar, for more than half a century connected with the school, in his long career attained a national position in the educational world. Appointed a master in 1857 and head master in 1867, he resigned in 1907 and died in 1916. D. O. S. Lowell, a graduate of Bowdoin, became a master in the school in 1884 and was head master from 1909 to his retirement in June, 1921. Daniel V. Thompson, who came from Lawrenceville as his successor, maintained the high scholastic standards. It was in his regime that the school moved to its present site.

During the interregnum following his death in 1932, the trustees combed the country for his successor, turned down hundreds of candidates, among them an alumnus who was immediately thereafter elected president of Harvard, and chose Mr Northrop, once head of Brearley and more recently of Chicago Latin.

The leading day school for girls of Boston, The Winsor School is the result of the notable executive capacity of Mary Pickard Winsor, whose sister created the Roger Ascham School, and brother, the Middlesex School. Its continued and successful growth necessitated repeated removal, until in 1908 it was incorporated and moved to its present building. Miss Lord, who took over the active management of the school upon Miss Winsor's retirement in 1922, is assisted by a strong administrative and teaching staff. The grounds of the Longwood Cricket Club were acquired in 1924 and a large gymnasium erected in order that regular physical exercise might be assured.

The oldest institution in New England for the higher education of women, Bradford Academy was established by the parishioners of the Congregational Church of the town of Bradford and until 1836 was coeducational. The school has been fortunate throughout its history in having on its board of trustees men and women of unusual capacity and devotion to the interests of Bradford. Alice Freeman Palmer long took active interest. The unusual advantages of Bradford early drew students from all over New England, but for many decades the patronage has been national. During the century and more of its existence over nine thousand students have attended the school. The strong personality of Laura A. Knott, principal from 1901 to 1918, was long stamped on the life and work of the school. With Marion Coats, principal from 1918 to 1927, the great impetus toward the graduate courses began, culminating under Dr. Denworth in 1930 in the acceptance of Bradford as a junior college member of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Dr. Denworth, formerly principal of the Friends High School, Moorestown, N. J., and head mistress of the Stevens School, Germantown, Pa., is a young woman of zeal, ambition and marked personality, especially trained for her present position. Under her able scholastic and financial administration standards of scholarship have been raised, the faculty strengthened and a broad, human attitude pervades. See page 908.

Dr. William Gallagher, principal for twenty-three years, was succeeded in 1919 by Mr Southworth, long a master in the Boston Latin School and formerly head master of Camp Marienfeld. Under his energetic administration the enrollment and faculty have more than trebled, the course of study has been enriched, especially in the departments of science, music, and art, and a country day school program inaugurated. Thayerlands, a sub-preparatory school, has since 1924 been a separate institution under Gertrude W. Wilcox

Organized and incorporated as a coeducational day school by liberal minded parents who wished to bring to Boston the more progressive educational methods, since 1931 the enrollment has been limited to girls. Dr Smith, who had successfully developed the Park School, Baltimore, has been in charge of Beaver since the beginning. The school now has three well equipped departments in the new plant, supervises the Beaver School in Boston, and has recently inaugurated a department for training apprentice teachers, many of them recent college graduates. The school has been extraordinarily successful, not only admitting from the large number of applicants an increasing number, but adding constantly to its activities and the development of the school plant. Unique are the courses in instrumental and vocal music for which school credit is given, the opportunities for instruction in the decorative arts and sciences, and the kitchens in which girls are given experience under home conditions. Among the many features unusual in secondary school plants are a completely equipped theatre and beautiful art and library quarters. See page 867.

CONCORD, MASS. Alt 121 ft. Pop 6461 (1920) 7477 (1930). Motor Route 2 from Boston.

Concord is both a literary shrine and a mecca of the patriotic. As the home of Hawthorne, Emerson, Thoreau and the Alcotts, it has the significance in American literature of Stratford in England or Weimar in Germany. Here was fired the "shot heard round the world." Here Surette puts to revolutionary esthetic use an old theological steepled structure. And here Thoreau in jail wrote his "Civil Disobedience" which through Tolstoi and Ghandi has shaken the foundations of the world's two greatest empires.

But its schools of today are in no way revolutionary. Concord Academy occupies the former Samuel Hoar estate and the adjacent property on Main Street. The Fenn School is on Monument Street, about a half mile from the bridge. The Surette Summer School of Music is held in the parish rooms of the historic First Church on Lexington Road. Three miles from the center of the town are the brick Colonial buildings and spacious grounds of Middlesex School.

Deerfield as it exists today is a monument to the genius of the head master who has dedicated to it his whole career, and has developed from an old New England academy one of the nation's most notable schools for boys. Former masters in the school are following in his footsteps as head masters elsewhere. Here Mr. Boyden was the first to work out successfully a system of athletics for all. The social community life of the school and general participation in dramatics are made use of in training and developing the personality of each boy. The Amherst-Williams-Dartmouth tradition is strong, though a few boys each year take College Board examinations. Mr. Boyden selects from his candidates the type he can develop with the greatest success. Recognition of his wonderful work has enlisted the interest of wealthy men and has brought funds which have made possible the erection of attractive buildings See page 811.

Samuel Williston, a wealthy manufacturer of the town, established and endowed this academy and gave freely of his money to equip lecture rooms and laboratories. His placing of English and scientific courses on the same plane as the classical courses was at that time a radical departure. Under Josiah Clark, principal from 1849 to 1863, the standards of instruction in ancient classics were established. Under Marshall Henshaw (1863-76), Mr. Williston's ideal of a school in which science, mathematics and English should be held in equal honor and pursued with equal thoroughness as the ancient classics, was realized. Of the ten thousand who have attended the school during its long existence, more than a third have entered some thirty colleges and universities, a fifth, the learned professions. Seven of its teachers have become college presidents; seventeen, college professors; nine, principals of other schools. Dr. Joseph Sawyer, connected for half a century with Williston, resigned in 1919 because of failing health. Mr. Galbraith, for nearly twenty years master at Middlesex School, has been principal since 1919 and has succeeded in broadening the school's appeal, modernizing its outlook, and bringing its standards up to those of the best college preparatory schools. New buildings and endowments have brought added facilities within recent years.

WILLISTON JUNIOR SCHOOL, presided over by Robert B. Cunningham, has been maintained as a separate unit since 1916. It has its own houses for thirty boys in grades five to eight and its own faculty of six. The tuition is $850. The majority of the boys enter the senior school. See page 815.

With Groton at the half century mark we must doff our hats to the man, a true New England worthy of the type and class of President Eliot, an aristocratic soul who in a democratic spirit has built an institution, the embodiment of his own uncompromising personality, in which acolytes serve and disciples worship and which has brought nurture, intellectual pap and a spirit of aristocratic democracy to the leading families and the socially ambitious of New York.

Groton is the result of a great personality that gathered about him worthy satellites at a time when economic factors had created a need. The further accumulation of wealth and the development of social planes which had led to the founding of St. Paul's and St. Mark's resulted in the establishment of Groton in 1884 by Dr. Peabody of the Salem Peabodys, long prominent in the mercantile and philanthropic life of the country. He was an all round athlete; a scholar, and yet a very graceful and sophisticated man of the world, according to Arthur Ruhl. But in his first charge in the raw west, Tombstone, Arizona, he had demonstrated even to cowboys and gamblers that he was a stalwart, full-blooded man.

Groton began with a small number of pupils secured through advertising in the papers, but through a natural inheritance, from friend to friend, rather than from conscious effort on Dr. Peabody's part, it has attained the highest social prestige. So long is the waiting list that as an old graduate expressed it, "A Groton man wires to Dr. Peabody as soon as his son is born. Others generally think a letter is quick enough."

Although originally English in its inspiration and atmosphere, Groton is one of the most remarkable and successful institutions in American education today. It was established with the same earnestness and sincerity of purpose as was any foundation of Puritan times. From every American point of view it is exotic, but it is sincere and its sincerity commands not only the devotion of its masters and the loyalty of its alumni, but the respect of those least in sympathy with its ideals. Groton from the first attempted to steer a course between the "in loco parentis" plan of St. Paul's and the larger freedom of Andover and Exeter. A modification of the monitorial system which for twenty years had been in successful use at St. Mark's was adopted at Groton and has from the first proved successful, but at Groton the boys are called prefects. A head prefect and six prefects are appointed annually from the upper form. They exercise a considerable measure of influence in the student body, which develops responsibility in the holders of these offices and lessens the load of the masters. The boys at Groton do not have separate rooms; all except the prefects live in cubicles. The system that is followed at St Paul's and St. Mark's for the younger boys is here continued through all forms, and Groton's system in this respect has been copied in some other church schools. Two upper forms are provided with studies and the lower forms study at desks in large schoolrooms. The relations between master and pupil at Groton are particularly intimate in all branches of school activity. Boys for admission are selected in order from lists on which they are registered at birth. But of recent years eight scholarship boys have been admitted annually on competitive examination without reference to their previous environment. The course, too, has been enriched by the introduction of new activities—science in all forms, music, drawing, and some manual training including woodworking and printing.

One of the three boys schools north of Florida in sight of the Atlantic, this is the only one that makes use of the New England tradition of the sea having training value for boys. Founded with money derived from whaling, it was a rundown coeducational academy when Mr. Lillard, a former assistant to the head at Andover, took charge in 1916. Here he has built a new and attractive plant and made the preparatory school for boys nationally known. Advantage is taken of the ideal location to make nautical training an essential part of the program. Boys whose records warrant, are rewarded by opportunities for cruising and travel to Central America and Europe during the spring and summer vacations. Mr. Lillard has been largely responsible for the project of cooperating with the Ecole du Montcel, near Versailles, in sending American boys to France each year and in offering scholarships permitting French students to take similar courses at schools in this country. Summer term exchanges are arranged with schools in England, France and Germany under Mr. Lillard's personal direction. In addition, a summer term at Marion is open to boys from other schools as well as to Tabor boys. See page 817.

More of a community school than most of its type, Milton draws the greater proportion of its students from local families but to relieve the local flavor makes special effort to recruit boys from far afield and now over half its residents come from outside Massachusetts. Contacts of boarders with Milton homes and weekend privileges are encouraged. The Explorer's Club brings old and young together. As early as 1798 steps were taken to establish a local academy which finally opened in 1807 and was conducted interruptedly until 1866 when, on the establishment of a town high school, it was closed. The academy, reopened in 1885 on a new site, was coeducational until 1901. Success came during the long administration of Harrison Otis Apthorp. After an interregnum of less successful management under Principal Cobb the academy regained its former prestige under the joint direction of Mr. Field, a naturalist and entomologist of scientific training, and Frank E. Lane, A.B., Harvard, principal of the boys school for many years. Although the Harvard tradition is strong, the school definitely encourages boys who wish to enter other colleges.

Inaugurated under the best of social auspices the school was a success from the start, but credit must be ascribed to the kindly, pervasive personality of Mr. Kerns, whose tact and ability inspired confidence with mothers. The course of study is as broad as its college preparatory functions permit. The school has made a good record on college entrance examinations, preparing largely for Harvard.

St Mark's School was founded by Joseph Burnett, a Boston merchant and manufacturer, who is said to have been inspired by the success of St. Paul's and by the desire to have a similar school in his own native town of Southborough. Members of the Burnett family have continued on its administrative board, watchful of the interests of the school. Beginning with twelve boys the school has at intervals increased its plant until today there is dormitory accommodation for nearly two hundred. Assured of prestige from the first, it developed steadily in strength and efficiency under the capable management of William E. Peck, head master from 1882 until 1894.

St. Mark's is a church school of the parental type. A notable feature is that all the school activities are confined to one large building. "That the entire life of the school should be under one roof," one of its masters wrote some years ago, "its chapel services, study, recitations, eating and sleeping, means much not only for convenience, but also for community of interest among the boys and between masters and pupils" The boys of the three lower forms do not have separate rooms but occupy dormitories with windowed alcoves.

Though the general policy of St. Mark's was modeled after that of St. Paul's, one notable innovation in American school boy life was introduced which has proved a valuable contribution and has been extensively adopted by private schools since established. A modification of the English "Lancastrian Monitorial System" which had its origin in England early in the nineteenth century was adapted to American conditions. From its opening St. Mark's has had its present system of monitors, six or seven boys chosen from the sixth form who "are the representatives of the school, have certain duties and a general oversight of the life of the boys. They are supposed to stand for the school ideals and to exert their influence and leadership."

St. Mark's offers an intimate, proscribed, community life, admission to which is eagerly sought and rigidly restricted. Under the Rev. Dr. William G. Thayer, head master from 1894 until 1930, the ideals of the school were zealously maintained. With Dr. Thayer's retirement on the sixty-fifth anniversary of the school, the alumni established a quarter million Rev. and Mrs. Thayer Fund. Dr. Parkman, an old St. Mark's boy, was appointed head master after six years of business and five years in graduate study and administrative work at Harvard. He brought to the school a new alertness and straightforwardness and, introducing new activities, is gradually enriching the curriculum. A third of the available places each year are now reserved for admission by competitive examination. So it is no longer true that only sons and nephews of old boys are enrolled.

Founded by William Dummer, Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts, who in 1761 bequeathed his house and farm at Byfield for the establishment of a grammar school, this academy was first opened under the charge of the celebrated Samuel Moody, who had graduated from Harvard College in 1746. Mr. Moody made it a grammar school of the older type, and prepared for Harvard many boys who became prominent in the life of the nation, including the founder and first master of Andover. It was always a democratic school accepting boys from all classes. After years of decadence it was revived by Dr. Charles S. Ingham, head master from 1907 until his resignation in 1930.

Mr. Eames, young, alert, inspired by Boyden at Deerfield, with educational experience in Buffalo and Deerfield, and educational backgrounds of Amherst and Harvard, brought new life to the school, refurbished its name, plant, equipment, improved the quality of the student body, cut off the lower school; raised the standards and the price. Boys are encouraged in taking initiative and have undertaken large projects for the improvement of the school. In a few years Mr. Eames has put his name among the great head masters. See page 810.

Founded by Julia A. and Sarah P. Eastman with the cooperation of Wellesley College as a preparatory school for that institution, these schools have been under the exceptionally strong management of Miss Cooke since 1899. To her administrative ability is due the fact that Dana Hall has become one of the leading secondary schools in the country. Miss Cooke is a woman of remarkable personality, clear-sightedness and executive capacity, with the highest ideals of womanhood She makes a strong appeal to girls and her influence upon them is inspiring and lasting. The heads of departments in all three schools are women of unusual capacity and enthusiasm

DANA HALL, the preparatory school, sends about two-thirds of its graduates each year to the leading women's colleges. It has an enrollment of one hundred fifty. Dorothy Waldo is the principal. See pages 865, 909.

This school was established by Arthur Gilman in Cambridge to prepare for Radcliffe and soon became the foremost school for families of Old Cambridge. In 1918 Mary E. Haskell, A.B., Wellesley, became principal, and the name was changed to Cambridge-Haskell School. From 1922 until 1929 Hope Conklin Macintosh was in charge. Mr. French, who successfully reorganized the old Derby Academy, Hingham, as a progressive, modern, coeducational school, came in 1930 as head master, returned the school to its original name and made it coeducational. The lower school, through the sixth grade, continues to occupy the old site on Concord Avenue, Cambridge. In the upper school, since 1931 at Kendal Green, a country day program is followed. The boarding group, with separate houses for boys and girls, may be on either the five day or full week plan. Today a well equipped school offering preparation for college or technology, Worcester has occupied a middle ground between the large academies and the smaller preparatory schools and has some of the characteristics of both. Dr. D. W. Abercrombie, during the thirty-six years of his administration from 1882, made a great boys school from a coeducational Baptist academy. In 1918 Samuel Foss Holmes, long on the faculty, was made head master and George Dudley Church, registrar. They brought the scholarship and personnel to higher standards but because of the financial situation were forced out in 1933 when Mr. Wade, for some years in charge of alumni relations, was made head master and Charles L. Stevens, director of admissions.

This splendidly appointed private boarding school was founded by the Rev John B. Diman who later established Portsmouth Priory School. In 1917 Stephen P. Cabot who had been a master in the school since 1901 became head master. During Mr. Cabot's administration the school went through a period of great material growth and the alumni took an increasing interest in the school, evidenced by St. George's Clubs at the three great universities to which the majority of the boys go. Mr. Cabot "ultimately resigned on religious grounds" in 1926, according to Barklie Henry, "an old graduate, hoary at thirty-one", in an article on St. George's in Town and Country. He emphasizes the beauty of the setting, the matchlessness of the architecture, and the dominance of Bishop Perry. Mr. Merrick, for thirteen years a master at St. Paul's School, was elected head master in 1928. Interested in athletics, popular with his boys, he has won the support of influential church people. The enrollment is cosmopolitan, representing leading families in all parts of the country.

First opened at Portsmouth and long known as the Friends School, Moses Brown was re-established in Providence in 1819 and endowed liberally by Obadiah Brown, son of the founder. Mr. Thomas, former principal of Friends Central School, Philadelphia, and associate principal of Moses Brown for one year, became head master in 1925. A trend toward the conventional preparation for college together with necessity for curtailing expense, has made this more nearly the typical college preparatory school, though it was established to secure for its boys the sturdiness of character found in the old New England stock of Colonial times, through community occupation of farm, shop and forest. Students still participate as citizens in all the operations of the small commonwealth and in the planning of their own education. Theodate Pope, now Mrs. John Wallace Riddle, established the school in 1918 as a memorial to her father, although it was not opened until ten years later. The whole concept of this school—the plan of education, the layout of the grounds, and the architecture—is the creation of the founder. The buildings carry out in their hand construction the modified Cotswold village plan on which the school is modeled. Francis Mitchell Froelicher was provost from 1927 to 1929. Dr. Kammerer, formerly dean of Trinity Cathedral, Pittsburgh, and a trustee of the Fay School, Southborough, succeeded him in 1930 and has endeared himself to the boys and to his patrons. In the past ten years Mr Sheriff has made Roxbury a highly efficient college preparatory school with a separate and well developed department for younger boys. Heir to the property and traditions of two ancient schools, Episcopal Academy of Connecticut, founded in 1794, and its successor, Cheshire School, the present Roxbury School offers a well organized and flexible course preparing for all colleges, and especially for Yale. Small classes and close supervision of each boy's progress characterize the school, and individual instruction is given when advisable. The junior school for twenty-five boys offers work of the upper elementary grades, as well as the lower high school years. A summer session is held. See page 825.

Centering around the personality of Sarah Porter, a sister of President Porter of Yale, Miss Porter's School began in a small way. This remarkable woman gave her whole life to the school up to the time of her death in 1900 at the age of eighty-seven. Her fame as a teacher, as it became more widely appreciated, drew to her increasing numbers from which she selected the best material. "Her impress upon her long line of pupils was the result of her own unusual character. She gave to hundreds of the best born women of the land that poise and stability of character, that combination of learning and good manners, which is a mark of the noblest American womanhood" On Miss Porter's death her nephew, Robert Porter Keep, became trustee of the school, and after his death it continued under the able administration of Mrs. Keep, who had herself been a pupil of Miss Porter. Mrs. Keep died in the spring of 1917. Under her son, for many years an instructor at Andover, and his wife, the school continues feminine, sentimental, in the best spirit of the nineteenth century. The "Little Meeting" still includes the whole school just as when it was a real prayer meeting.

Exclusively a college preparatory school, Rosemary Hall was founded by Dr. Ruutz-Rees in Wallingford and for ten years conducted there. Of English birth and education, Dr. Ruutz-Rees has degrees from St. Andrew's as well as Columbia. Since 1883 she has lived in this country, of which she is a naturalized citizen. Dr. Lowndes had been long associated with her and was made head mistress in 1911. With its classical terminology, its stress of walking or "bounding", naturally there are many things that suggest the English girls school. Uniforms for day and evening are obligatory. An atmosphere of dignity and repose, of spaciousness and beauty, distinguishes Rosemary. The intellectual and physical life of the school is robust and well supervised. To receive the school diploma a pupil must have passed examinations qualifying for Bryn Mawr, Vassar, Smith and other colleges. Miss Debevoise, appointed in 1932, was formerly director of the lower schools of North Shore Country Day School, Winnetka, and before that at Lincoln School, New York. Rosemary Lower School, with a large country day enrollment, under the direction of Ellen W. Steele, B.S., Teachers College, holds to the ideals of the progressive education movement. See page 871.

The model and inspirer of many cities that have improved upon it, the capital of the state is on the Connecticut river fifty miles from Long Island Sound. Civic pride early resulted in a system of well laid out parks and substantial public buildings. Hartford wears an air of complacent repose, but the vigor of its life pulsates in new extensions to the north and west and blossoms periodically in a beautiful bridge or a notable building. Here are the home offices of many of the large national insurance companies, so every fire alarm is heard in Hartford and every obituary brings tears to the eyes of its leading citizens. When Mark Twain, Harriet Beecher Stowe and Charles Dudley Warner lived here, Hartford well maintained literary pretensions. Trinity College, started patriotically as Washington College in 1823, became Episcopal under its present name in 1845. At West Hartford, a residential suburb, is Kingswood.

Kent has become one of the great schools of the country. It is the creation of Father Sill's own remarkable personality. Begun in a farm house, simplicity of life, self reliance and directness of purpose have always dominated. Much of the community work is done by the boys, and this so called "self-help" plan has been widely copied by other schools, impressed by a system which enables a school to be run with small expense for servants. The religious life is actual and sincere. The school activities and outdoor life are varied. Its crews, accompanied every three years to England by Father Sill, have recently brought renown to Kent. The pressure on Father Sill for admission has become onerous although the enrollment has been increased to nearly three hundred. A lusty offshoot has been established at South Kent, and scores of boys are yearly directed to other schools. Only the superior and earnest boy should seek admission. A six weeks summer session enrolls forty boys, some from Kent, many from other schools.

Founded by Mrs. Maria H Hotchkiss with a gift of $350,000, the school has from the first been intimately associated with Yale. Edward G Coy, the first head master, a graduate of Yale, had served at the old Phillips Academy in Andover and brought with him to the newly founded school much of the atmosphere of Andover and even its terminology, still preserved in the catalog in such class titles as upper and lower middlers. The trustees, too, have usually been Yale men and Frederick S. Jones, president today, was for years Dean of Yale College. The graduates have generally shown preference for Yale, though in recent years the number entering other colleges has greatly increased and now a large delegation is sent yearly to Princeton and many enter Williams and Harvard, and a few Amherst, Cornell and midwestern universities. It was Dr. Huber Gray Buehler, affectionately known as "The King" who gave the school its present sturdy character. Each year the King declared "there is only one rule in this school, Be a gentleman!" and the implications of this one rule cast a shade of responsibility over the previously unruffled brows of those lads from homes of wealth where pleasure dominated. Under Dr. Buehler's direction Hotchkiss became recognized as one of the foremost preparatory schools of the country. The life was one of tension and strenuousness, high striving and keen competition. The names of the head boys posted so conspicuously for the emulation of others were often chosen from the thirty or more scholarship boys who waited on table and who had been selected because of their superior intellect. In an ardent attempt at democracy these scholarship lads were sometimes laden with honors while they performed their humble tasks. Self discipline and self restraint under the watchful eye of the masters make unnecessary any prefect system with its detailed and irritating supervision. In the past thirty years over two thousand pupils have been enrolled, about half of whom have come from New York and Connecticut. Mr. Van Santvoord, appointed head master in 1926, a Hotchkiss boy, a Rhodes scholar, came to the school from a professorship in the University of Buffalo. Perhaps unconsciously he gives an impression of academic reserve. Tactfully he has brought new interests to Hotchkiss boys. Music, art, interest in science and nature may now be confessed without shame. Passing is the strenuousness with which the academic, athletic and religious life once was followed.

This country boarding school was established and incorporated by Mary R. Hillard, with the assistance of wealthy friends who had confidence in her as a teacher. Trained in Miss Porter's School and from 1891 for eighteen years head mistress of St Margaret's in an adjoining town, on her establishment of Westover she took many of the students with her. She endeavored to impress on her girls her own type of appreciation of music and literature and to give them well rounded training for social requirements. Few have been prepared for college. The religious ritual and atmosphere of the school, too, reflected her attitude as set forth in her "The Spirit of the School and Religion." Her purpose, "the maintenance of such loyalty" as "gives peace to the soul" appealed to families of wealth who were attracted by the fostered reputation for exclusiveness. Older members of the faculty preserve something of this, although Miss Dillingham, head mistress since Miss Hillard's death in 1932 at the age of seventy, brings an academic Bryn Mawr atmosphere.

Established on the Hopkins bequest, the Hopkins Grammar School sent its graduates for the first fifty years to Harvard. Since Yale came into existence it has naturally prepared chiefly for that institution and more than twelve hundred of its alumni have been graduated from there. Beginning with Abraham Pierson, the first president of Yale, a Hopkins graduate of 1664, the school has given Yale sixty-one professors and instructors, six treasurers, twelve fellows, and five deans. From 1795 to 1921 every president of Yale was associated with Hopkins either as graduate, rector, or trustee. Dr. Lovell took charge in 1916 and ten years later the school was moved from its crowded downtown site to attractive buildings in the country. With dormitory accommodations for twenty bcys, Hopkins is still chiefly a country day school for New Havenites. See page 824.

Leading citizens as early as 1846 originated a movement which culminated in the incorporation of this academy in 1854. The school differs in type from both the academies and high schools, between which it is historically a connecting link. As early as the closing years of the eighteenth century there had been an old-time private academy at Norwich. The movement to establish a free academy met with great opposition, for many at this time opposed free education beyond the elementary schools. The orators of the day, including Daniel Webster, were enlisted, and the agitation which resulted did much to further the development of the high school system, but in Norwich no high school was established. Though amply endowed, the Free Academy makes a nominal charge to residents of the town and exacts a low tuition from non-residents. The school was early influenced by the Putnam School of Newburyport, no longer existing. Mr Tirrell has been principal since 1903

This school was founded by William E. Peck, one of the great schoolmasters of the country, who, after twelve years as head master of St. Mark's, resigned to establish this school to more fully carry out his own ideals. William Beach Olmsted, his successor, worked unselfishly and joyously to secure the interest of people of wealth and social prominence, and created for the school a beautiful setting. He passed with the old order in 1929 and was succeeded by Mr. Lefferts, educated at Taft and Yale. As a teacher at Thacher School, California, he had acquired the westerner's receptiveness to new influences and new ideals. Mr. Lefferts, an ardent democrat, does not believe in conformity to type but endeavors to conserve and develop in his boys originality and independent thinking. He has created a new Pomfret. Rectory gives its boys careful supervision in the home, a well regulated outdoor life, and good preparation for the large secondary schools. See page 821.

This old New England village is on the Farmington river fourteen miles from Hartford. The Westminster School, originally in Dobbs Ferry, has since 1900 occupied a two hundred acre site on Williams Hill north of the village overlooking the Farmington valley. The Ethel Walker School which moved here in 1917 from Lakewood, N. J., occupies the six hundred acre Stuart Dodge estate, two miles south of the village.

Patronized by wealthy and socially prominent families, this school maintains high standards of college preparatory work. Miss Walker remained in direct charge until her marriage in 1921 when she turned the school over for a year to her assistant, Mrs. Andrews. In 1922, however, from her home in Hartford, she again took over the direction with Jessie Hewitt as resident head. The school has long had its own characteristic customs and terminology, 'sins', 'punishments', 'purgatory', and 'heaven'. Much is made of outdoor life throughout the year. Posture and a good seat bring admiration, but the pride of the school is its stable of half a hundred horses. A system of self-government, an unusual degree of cooperation with the home, and thorough investigation of each girl before admission contribute to the school's success. Incendiary fires in 1933 destroyed the old wooden buildings which were promptly replaced by a modern fireproof plant.

This modern college preparatory school has come to the fore, after a period of quiescence, under Mr. McOrmond's vigorous administration. Founded by William Lee Cushing, its inspiration lay in the ancient Uppingham School in Rutland, England, established 1584, and it has the basic ideals of this older school. For thirty years Mr. Cushing successfully conducted the school, and sent many graduates to Harvard, Williams, Cornell and other colleges, though Yale influence has naturally predominated. On Mr. Cushing's retirement in 1920 the headmastership was assumed by L. G. Pettee who was for many years a member of the faculty. In 1922 the school was purchased by Mr. McOrmond, and reopened with a summer session in July, 1923. Mr. McOrmond had been connected with the Choate

School for fourteen years as head of the department of mathematics and director of athletics, and for seven years had maintained a summer tutoring school at Wallingford. George Dudley Church, for years registrar of Worcester Academy, was made dean of admissions and vice-president of the corporation in 1933. See page 822.

This school was established by Mrs. C. E. Richardson, an Englishwoman of wide educational experience, who modeled it after the best of the English private schools for girls. Louisa Low and her niece, Edith Heywood, took charge in 1883, and continued so far as practicable the policies and ideals of the founder. Naturally the school had something of an English atmosphere and under Miss Roper, long co-principal, and since Miss Heywood's death in 1927, head mistress, has continued to stand for thorough scholarship and all round development of its pupils. The college preparatory work has been strengthened. In Miss Tilley, a capable executive, the English tradition has been continued. The Low-Heywood girl has poise and is able to enter and leave a room. Resident pupils come from all over the country and the day department has the patronage of Stamford's leading families. See page 872.

The atmosphere and ideals of the best New England homes have dominated The Choate School since its establishment. One of the most prosperous and successful of the younger New England preparatory schools, it has come into its fuller life during the able administration of Mr St John, head master since 1908, whose enthusiasm, good judgment, ready sympathy, and discrimination have been ably supplemented by Mrs St. John's personal interest in maintaining the friendly, intimate atmosphere that characterized the school in its earlier days. Although nearly all the courses of study are planned with college entrance in view, no rigid adherence to forms is insisted on and the student may take subjects chosen from different forms to suit his own needs. Interest in the individual boy and the purpose to give him what he as an individual needs, is the ideal that Mr St John holds up to his unusual corps of masters. The flexible system of forms, separate divisions for honor students, special opportunities in art, music and literature, orthopedic and physical examinations with an individual corrective and athletic program for each boy, and a close personal relationship between the school, the boy and his family help to accomplish this ideal. Effort is made to stimulate intellectual interests and to widen the mental horizon. See page 826.

The Taft School is the expression of the personality of the founder and head master, a brother of the late president and chief justice. Although he began life as a lawyer, teaching was evidently his foreordained vocation for we find him back at Yale, a tutor in Latin from '87 to '90 Dr Taft has proved himself a great head master. Himself a tremendous worker, he may be said to inspire his boys with industry rather than to exact it of them There is no salvation for a boy at Taft except by hard work, and any boy who survives the course of several years at The Taft School is sure to have a well trained mind Dr Taft sympathizes with the life of the boys on the playground as well as in the schoolroom and at once wins their comradeship and confidence by his geniality and large-heartedness. A judicious amount of freedom is a part of his discipline in order that a boy's school life may properly grade into the greater freedom of after life. The boys come from the substantial families throughout the country—about half from Connecticut and New York, and many from the middle west—and are thoroughly prepared for all colleges though nearby Yale casts its shadow. The school is incorporated as a non-profit making corporation controlled by a self perpetuating board of trustees to whom Dr. Taft has given the school unconditionally Through his lifetime of devotion, Dr Taft has endowed the school with his high ideals of work and scholarship. Loomis Institute had its origin in 1874 when five of the Loomis family drew up a charter and incorporated a school on what had been since 1639 the Loomis homestead. By 1912 accumulated funds of over two millions were available. Mr. Batchelder, previously at Hackley and Hotchkiss, was appointed head master at that time. The school was opened by him in 1914 and has continued under his guiding hand, following the best traditions of New England preparatory schools. The student body represents a democratic cross section of society, with a generous proportion of sons of ministers, doctors, educators, and other professional men. About half the boys take the academic course. The other half are distributed between scientific and business courses. For boys who may be interested, agricultural training is available. Pupils share in the useful labor of the school, caring for their own rooms, the classrooms and the school grounds and athletic fields. The endowment makes possible a low rate of tuition and there are a number of scholarships. The student council plans and supervises student activities, affording a measure of self-government which cultivates a sense of responsibility. The original charter provided for girls and in 1927 two houses were purchased across the river for the Chaffee School, named in honor of the mother of the founder Mrs. Batchelder, who was Evelyn Longman, a sculptor of genius and renown, maintains her studio on the campus, not without beneficial influence on the boys. There is about the school evidence of an awareness of things of beauty and things doing in the world. See page 820.

Dominating the city on Capitol Hill is the massive state capitol building beside which rises pretentiously the State Education building. Albany occupies a strategic position at the junction of the Mohawk and Hudson rivers. Once a notable seat of the old time Dutch patroon aristocracy, Albany is now an educational center with its New York State College for Teachers, Law School, Medical College, and College of Pharmacy directly in the city, while at Troy some six miles up the river are other important educational institutions. Of the three well known private schools in Albany, the Academy for Girls is still in the old downtown district. The million dollar building of the Academy for Boys in the New Scotland Avenue section has been occupied since 1931. On a high plateau north of the city, in Loudonville, St. Agnes is housed in a new modern plant.

One of the few surviving old-fashioned academies, this is exclusively a college preparatory school maintaining highest standards of scholarship. It conservatively holds to preparing all boys for college and ninety-five per cent in the last two decades have entered many institutions of higher learning. A cadet battalion organized in 1870 is still continued. The atmosphere and spirit of the school as it exists today are the unique product of the heart and mind of Dr. Henry P. Warren, who at his death in 1919 had been its head master for over thirty years. Dr. McCormick, a master since 1912, has fully maintained old standards. The school has always served the old families of the city. The heavy patroon hand has been lifted, however, and today the trustees, prominent public spirited citizens, are putting the school plant on equality with the best country day schools.

This school attracts daughters of conservative families to its small boarding department which is now supplemented by a thriving country day school. The college preparatory work is efficient; the physical and non-academic side of the school vigorous and stimulating. Founded by Bishop William Croswell Doane of Albany under the shadow of the Cathedral, the school was directed by Ellen W. Boyd for thirty-one years and by Matilda Gray for eighteen. Miss Pittman, energetic and pervasive, brought new vitality when she came to the school in 1930. Under her vigorous administration academic standards have been maintained and the tone modernized. This school has been developed by Raymond Riordon along the lines of his own ideas as to what the education of the modern boy should be. Mr. Riordon, from his association with the Interlaken School under Dr. Edward A. Rumely, absorbed much of the spirit of the New Schools of the Continent which he has introduced into his own. Features that have been added from time to time include instruction in roping, riding; toy making, ground and flight work in aviation; an Adirondack summer camp; Washington hotel life in the winter, and three months in Virginia, aboard one of the Norfolk-Washington fleet.

NEW YORK CITY, N.Y. Pop 5,620,048 (1920) 6,930,446 (1930).

The most stupendous of man's creations, the Egyptian pyramids and temples would appear insignificant if placed in Central Park; and London, seen from the air, flat and drab in comparison. The pinnacled ziggurated skyline of New York still thrills the approaching voyager from the sea. To the traveller by air, Manhattan seems a tiny citadel of watch towers among the sprawling suburbs that reach out on to the neighboring islands, across the Jersey marshes, and fringe the salt water rivers and estuaries.

The financial capital of the world, this modern Babylon, city of fabulous salaries and long bread lines, big winnings and tragic losses, palatial penthouses and squalid slums, has been the envy and cynosure of Europe and is still a mecca for those who have money to squander. The mad unceasing rush through its narrow canyons astounds the stranger from abroad. Behind the plate glass windows of Fifth Avenue is the loot of centuries from every land.

Historically the City of Tammany, of Al Smith, Jimmy Walker, and Boss Tweed, of the Vanderastors, saved today from corruption and bankruptcy by Seabury, New York looks for its further salvation to La Guardia, a stumpy little Italian.

Less than thirty per cent of the population is Jewish, though it is the greatest Jewish city in the world and one-third of all American Semites live here. New Yorkers include half a million Russians and nearly as many Italians. The ethnic quotas in many cases exceed the population of the greatest cities of the countries from which they come.

On Morningside Heights, the acropolis of the new world, more than 44,000 students resort to Columbia University and its affiliated institutions, Teachers and Barnard Colleges. To the north the College of the City of New York has over 19,000, not all Jewish. On University Heights, across the Harlem, New York University, famous for its Hall of Fame, enrolls 31,337. Fordham, near Bronx Park, has 8229 Catholic students.

The museums of Art, Natural History, Indian Ethnology, and things Hispanic, house matchless and rapidly growing collections. The public library is notable for its architecture, its location, its collections, and its scores of branches. The priceless collection of Morgan Library is in a building architecturally perfect.

The professional and vocational schools lie generally to the south, between Central Park and 42d Street. The private schools for boys are chiefly for day pupils while many of the girls schools provide residence for those from a distance who are attracted by the varied musical, dramatic, and other advantages of the metropolis. Some schools lie west of Central Park including two or three of the oldest in the city. But the more recently established schools that appeal to the socially elect are all to the east. Two of these, Brearley and Chapin, have within a few years moved to that recently reclaimed and still somewhat raw, but very smart, region bordering on the East river.

As a matter of convenience the schools of Long Island, including Brooklyn, are treated as a group. Staten Island schools will be found listed under New York City.

Established by Samuel Brearley, a Harvard and Oxford man, to provide a more substantial education and thorough preparation for college than the schools of the time offered, this has, since his death, been continued by its patrons. Among its alumnæ are women who have attained intellectual distinction, and on its board are men prominent in New York's educational and financial circles. James G. Crosswell, Harvard '73, was head master from 1887 until his death in 1915. Henry Dwight Sedgwick and Carl Van Doren who followed him were men of scholarly attainments and literary distinction. More recently changes have been frequent. Sarah M. Dean, George Norton Northrop and Anne Dunn were followed in 1930 by Miss Carey (Mrs Rustin McIntosh), formerly acting dean of Bryn Mawr. Since 1929 in a new building overlooking the East river, its lower floors are known as decks. Brearley leads the other fashionable schools in scholastic standards and succeeds in cultivating intellectual interests among its pupils who come from solid families of taste and culture.

Established by the late Maria B. Chapin to provide a liberal education as well as courses in the social graces, the dignity of the old-fashioned school of the eighties has been retained though the school today reflects the latest developments in educational technique. Since 1928 it has occupied its present building which Miss Chapin hoped would be a model for all other finishing schools. In 1932 she was succeeded by Miss Fairfax and Miss Stringfellow, the former connected with the school since 1911 and a partner since 1925. The school has always catered to the older families of New York, and of the more recent only those who have achieved power or wealth are welcome.

With a continuous history running back to the early settlement by the Dutch of Manhattan, this oldest existing private secondary school in the United States celebrated its 300th birthday in 1933. For two hundred and fifty years it was maintained as a parish day school, but in 1887 it became a grammar school for both boys and girls, with a fixed tuition fee, in 1891 preparatory; and after 1894, for boys only. The school has moved progressively northward as the city has developed. Its standards of enrollment, clientele, and scholarship have always been high. The school is administered by a board of trustees but is sponsored and controlled by the Consistory of the Collegiate Dutch Reformed Church. Cornelius Boocock, head for three years, resigns in 1934.

Founded as a preparatory school to Columbia College, it, too, has moved progressively uptown as the city has grown though it is no longer connected with the College. It rose to highest prominence in the middle of the nineteenth century under Dr. Anthon, America's earliest classical scholar. At one time the majority of its graduates entered Columbia, but of recent years it has prepared for all the leading eastern colleges. An all day plan for supervised study and play was organized in 1930. The clientele is largely Jewish.

Affiliated since its beginning with Teachers College, for forty years Horace Mann School occupied the old school building adjacent to Columbia which now houses the elementary department. Transferred in 1914 to its present country location, all the facilities of a country day school are now available to boys in the junior and senior high schools. Since 1931 boarding boys have been provided for in the dormitory, within easy walking distance of the school. An administrative board of nine is appointed by the Fathers Association. Mr. Tillinghast, principal since 1920, New England born and educated, has had broad experience and training including a year's exchange teaching in Austria, and is secretary of the Headmasters Association. Many contributions have been made by this progressive school to modern education, particularly in pupil expression, creative arts and literature. Its new materials in science, mathematics and social sciences, as published by Teachers College, are numerous. The descriptive booklet of the school is a noteworthy example. The school owes its origin to Abraham Flexner and was established and supported by the General Education Board as the experimental school of Teachers College. Dr. Otis W. Caldwell, director of the school from its inception, resigned in 1927. Dr. Newlon, now professor of education in Teachers College, was a former superintendent in Indiana, Illinois and Colorado.

To capitalize in a vigorous way the value of a country environment for city boys, Mr. Hackett established this school in its present site adjoining the vast open spaces of Van Cortlandt Park. From the first it has concentrated on college preparation and in its curriculum and general atmosphere the school displays unusual breadth. The large day school is supplemented by a boarding department which accepts boys on the five day plan. The entire plant, valued at over a million dollars, was turned over to a board of trustees in 1925 by Mr. Hackett, who continues as head master of this, the coeducational, and the girls schools. An Adirondack camp for boys, Riverdale, has been maintained since 1912.

A new era began for this school with its merger with Miss Chandor's in 1932. The school building overlooking Central Park is a monument to the administrative genius of Clara B. Spence who founded and conducted the school for thirty years during which time she won the implicit confidence of her patrons and gave the school preeminent position among the day and boarding schools of New York. Some of the country's foremost women, socially and nationally, were pupils of Miss Spence. Of late it has drawn students from all over the country. The spring teas, the sewing class, characteristic in Miss Spence's day are passing. From her death in 1923 the school was under the direction of members of her staff until 1932 when Miss Chandor was asked to take charge. Miss Chandor, who had built a school successful socially as well as scholastically, brings to this sound, old institution a personality and an intellectual interest that prove stimulating to students and alumnae. Trinity's self-contented conservatism is attributable not only to its hallowed past but to its successful investments in New York real estate. Founded by the "Venerable Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts" it was endowed in 1796 and was maintained in connection with Trinity Parish until 1806, when the school was incorporated. Conducted at first in the tower of old Trinity Church as an elementary school, it has moved uptown with the progress of the residential district and has increased the range of instruction. In 1898 the corporation established a separate school for girls, St Agatha. Four-fifths of the graduates yearly enter leading colleges.

BROOKLYN, N.Y. Alt 45 ft.

The largest borough in area and population, and the bedroom of a metropolis, Brooklyn has long boasted of being the "City of Churches " It is a city of varied manufactures and is also the great middle class residential suburb of the metropolis with which it is connected by huge bridges, tunnels and ferries.

The private schools serve chiefly the local residents of the borough. On Brooklyn Heights, the old aristocratic section, is the Seminary of the same name. Two of the older schools, Packer and Friends, are in the vicinity of Borough Hall, and a mile east are Pratt Institute and Adelphi Academy. Overlooking Prospect Park Plaza are Berkeley Institute and the Ethical Culture School Nearby is the Museum of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. To the east, in Flatbush, various local schools serve a residential section, once largely Dutch farmers gardens. North, near the Children's Museum, is Froebel Academy. In Dyker Heights, along the southeast shore, Polytechnic Preparatory School and Shore Road Academy overlook The Narrows.

For years the leading secondary school for girls of Brooklyn, Packer is now one of the few junior colleges recognized by the State of New York. Throughout its long history the school has played an important part in education in Brooklyn. Named in honor of William S. Packer, whose widow gave money for the new building, it occupies the site of the Brooklyn Female Academy organized by public spirited citizens in 1845. The scholastic standard is high in all departments. Four principals have directed the policy of the school, Dr. Denbigh since 1918.

One of the outstanding country day schools in the east, directed by an ardent apostle of the movement who was for seven years president of the Country Day Conference, this is an outgrowth of the preparatory department of Polytechnic Institute. More than half a million dollars went into the new school plant which is perhaps unequalled for its purpose. The memorial chapel, dedicated to the boys who lost their lives in the war, cost over $100,000; and $175,000 in 1930 went into a model gymnasium. Unlike many boys day schools, most "Poly" boys complete their preparation for college here. In the past five years over three hundred graduates have entered some score of colleges. See page 832.

The Stony Brook Assembly established this school to provide college preparation and to inculcate the principles of evangelical Christianity. During July and August the buildings and grounds are made use of for summer religious conferences. The faculty is chosen to the end that religion in the school may become neither pietism nor mere formalism. Three hours a week of Bible study are credited for college entrance. A "Morning Watch," the "Fellowship," and voluntary deputations of student speakers to churches give the boy an opportunity for spontaneous expression of his religious life. The Rev. Dr. John F. Carson, former moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, was the founder and first president. On his death in 1927 he was succeeded by Hugh R. Monro. Dr. Gaebelein's influence on the boys is traceable to the sincerity and forcefulness which he manifests in his evangelical writings. See page 831.

Pawling's beautiful site and buildings bear witness to the appreciation of its patrons for Dr. Frederick L. Gamage who established the school and conducted it for over a score of years. The Cluett Foundation, which made possible the new buildings, was established by George B. Cluett as a memorial to his son, a former pupil of Dr. Gamage, who died while a student at Yale. The school today is well known for its college preparatory work, sending its boys to all the large eastern colleges. Boys are enrolled from families of wealth and social standing from all over the country, though the majority come from New York. In 1931 Dr. Gamage, together with three instructors who owned part interest, turned over to a board of trustees the school and its plant valued at nearly a million. At that time his son, who had been an instructor in the school for three or four years and previously at Riverdale, was made acting head and by 1932 was in full control.

This smoothly running institution, highly endowed, perfectly equipped, well organized, capably administered, enrolls girls from conservative families in all parts of the country and prepares most for college. The school was founded over a century ago at Middlebury, Vermont, by Emma Willard, a pioneer in the education of women. In 1819 an offer of financial assistance drew the school to New York and in 1821, on invitation, it came to Troy as the Troy Female Seminary. In the next fifty years of its existence more than fifteen thousand young women were enrolled, many of whom became teachers and spread the influence of the school far and wide. Among these Mrs. Russell Sage, a member of the class of '48, was later a teacher in the school. In 1892 the school was reorganized under its present name. The gift of a million from Mrs. Sage made possible the architecturally beautiful home which the school has occupied since 1910. Miss Kellas was president of both Russell Sage College and the Emma Willard School from 1916 to 1928, but now devotes her entire time to the school. See page 877.

Peddie today is the creation of Dr. Swetland, a leader among school men of his group, who has skillfully directed the policies since 1898. Improving the faculty, he has made this an efficient college preparatory school. More than a million dollars was put into the equipment between 1920 and 1930. And in 1931 Austen Colgate endowed the school with another million. Best known of the Baptist schools, and since 1908 enrolling only boys, Peddie was endowed in 1879 as a coeducational institution and was named in honor of its benefactor, Hon. Thomas B. Peddie. Boys from families of wealth mingle democratically with others who work to pay part of their expenses. The enrollment is largely from New York and New Jersey, but represents more than half the states in the union. See page 834.

Lawrenceville is today one of the largest of the popular preparatory schools, and is national in its patronage. Though non-sectarian, the school has Presbyterian traditions, which, together with proximity, incline forty per cent of the students to choose Princeton as their university.

The Lawrenceville School, on the John C Green Foundation, was chartered in 1881, a reorganization of an earlier school established by Isaac Brown, a Presbyterian clergyman. From 1839 to 1878 under the management of the Revs. Samuel and Hugh Hamill, it prospered as the Lawrenceville Classical and Commercial High School and during that time enrolled 2500 pupils. John C. Green, one of the original pupils, amassed a fortune in the China trade, and having left it without restrictions, his executors determined upon the establishment of an endowed preparatory school for boys. They purchased the Lawrenceville School and Dr. James Cameron Mackenzie organized the new school in 1884.

Dr. Mackenzie introduced the English "house" system, then a novel feature in American schools, which has since been widely copied by other American private schools. The boys below the upper form occupy separate houses, each presided over by a master and his wife, assisted by one of two unmarried masters. Every house is a home unit, and there are inter-house instead of inter-class contests in athletics. The effect of this system has been to preserve and foster individuality. In the "Upper House" for the fifth form, the discipline is largely in the hands of the boys, in order that they may the better prepare themselves for the greater freedom of college life.

During the regime of Rev. Simon John McPherson from 1899 to 1919, Lawrenceville developed characteristic practices and customs similar to those of the great English public schools. The picturesque side of this life with its local vocabulary and time honored customs has been vividly depicted in the stories of Owen Johnson.

The trustees after a thorough canvass elected Dr. Abbott head master on the death of Dr. McPherson. He is a graduate of King's College, Nova Scotia, and of Worcester College, Oxford, England. He was a master in Groton from 1897 to 1916, and professor of Latin in Yale from 1916 to 1919. His broad vision, human sympathies, virile personality and courage have won the enthusiastic support and confidence of faculty and alumni.

Moreover, he is loved for the enemies he has made through his firm stand for what he believes in. Both Dr. and Mrs. Abbott have revealed more completely their devotion to their work and to their boys through books which they have severally published—"The Boy Today" and "Days from a Year in School."

A system of health supervision in operation since 1922 has proved most effective as a preventive measure. In connection with it an infirmary, probably the most complete in any school, was opened in 1929. Financial aid is extended to a few boys whose names are not divulged. See page 837.

This day school for boys, long one of the leading college preparatory schools in the country, was endowed by citizens of Newark over a hundred and fifty years ago. Samuel A Farrand, one of America's greatest masters, was in charge for forty years, from 1859, and during his long regime greatly strengthened the school. In 1887 his son joined him, becoming principal in 1901. The school has been highly successful in college preparatory work, drawing most of its pupils from the territory surrounding Newark. Its new building, occupied since 1929, was largely the gift of alumni and friends.

This oldest boarding school for girls in America was founded by the Countess Benigna, daughter of Count Zinzendorf of Saxony, and since 1743 has been continuously maintained at Bethlehem. Around old Colonial Hall, erected in 1748, cluster memories of the French and Indian Wars, and during the Revolution it served as a military hospital, sheltering hundreds of wounded Revolutionary heroes. Among its pupils were Eleanor Lee, a grandniece of Washington, Chancellor Livingston's daughter, Cornelia, the wife of Robert Fulton, two daughters of Nathaniel Greene and others representing the old Colonial families, Dutch, German, Quaker, French and English. Loyal alumnae continue to dower their ancient institution with gifts. The great majority of the girls continue to come from Pennsylvania, though many states are represented.

Work of college grade was undertaken in 1912. Dr. Heath, clean cut, idealistic, born in the Virgin Islands of missionary parents, received his early schooling in England. After twelve years at Salem Academy and College, North Carolina, he came to Moravian in 1926 and his unusual breadth of vision and mellowness have added much to the atmosphere of the school.

With a national patronage and reputation for sound college preparatory work, Baldwin School under its present head continues the wholesome and sensible ideals of its founder. Established by Florence Baldwin and incorporated in 1906, it was re-incorporated as a non-profit-making corporation in 1919. There is a large and efficient faculty, practically all college trained, many of whom have studied in foreign universities. Over four hundred of its graduates have entered Bryn Mawr, more than from any other school, although of recent years other women's colleges have been equally popular. In 1933 Baldwin School, in connection with the Progressive Education Commission on the Relation of School and College, was freed from the usual formal entrance requirements by some of the leading colleges.

This solid preparatory school has its own management, faculty, buildings and grounds, equipment, and life though the ownership and administration are vested in the board of trustees of Franklin and Marshall College. While sufficiently removed from the college to avoid too intimate intercourse, its proximity secures the students many advantages. Originally the preparatory department of Franklin College, this school was the result of a plan for an academy first proposed by Benjamin Franklin as early as 1743. In 1872, nineteen years after the merger of Marshall and Franklin Colleges, the preparatory department became a separate institution. Dr. Hartman, principal since 1897, is supported by a strong faculty. A spiritual minded educator, he is devoted to his work and maintains close and intimate contact with the boys who come largely from the Middle Atlantic States. About forty boys each year enter some twelve or fifteen colleges, chiefly those admitting by certificate. See page 836.

Nearly a century in existence, Mercersburg today is one of the great college preparatory schools of national patronage. It was merely a local academy when William Mann Irvine took it over in 1893. Dr. Irvine, a Princeton graduate, rebuilt the school, keeping in mind as a model Exeter, from which he had graduated. He incorporated also some of the features of the English schools which he had studied. The school today is the result of the broad vision, shrewd business sense and genius for publicity, and indefatigable energy of Dr. Irvine; but his work was ably supplemented by loyal alumni, efficient faculty, staunch friends and a Board of Regents with great faith, liberal gifts and trust in the institution and its management.

Dr. Edwards was called to Mercersburg in 1928 on the death of Dr. Irvine, after six years as head master of The Hill School. A graduate of Phillips Andover, of Williams, and the Union Theological Seminary, he came to Mercersburg as an old friend, for in his previous pastoral work he had been visiting minister to the school for almost a quarter of a century. He had been a close personal friend of Dr. Irvine's and brought to Mercersburg a personal knowledge of the school's problems and appreciation for the ideals and traditions of the Academy, together with wide acquaintance with leading educators, and several years service as trustee of Williams and Mount Holyoke Colleges.

During recent years Mercersburg has been sending approximately a hundred seventy-five boys to college each year—one hundred graduates and about seventy-five who enter college although classified as third year boys. Nearly two hundred take College Board examinations annually. A large number enter Princeton although a hundred sixteen colleges and universities in this and other countries have enrolled boys from this school. Mercersburg boys stand out in the college crowd scholastically and in the various activities. Recently they have been passing between ninety-five and one hundred per cent of all examinations taken in their freshman year at college. The rugged vitality of the school and its intensely democratic atmosphere bear fruit in after years—in Olympic games, in the World War, in college athletics, Mercersburg boys have made enviable records. In one year, at Princeton, they captained eight of the varsity teams. Seventy ambitious boys are annually on working scholarships.

The school now has approximately $3,000,000 invested in material equipment. Especially outstanding are the new Main Hall, Assembly Hall, Administration Building and new Gothic Chapel, designed by Cram, with its carillon of forty-three bells upon which two recitals are given weekly. See page 836.

Philadelphia, third in population, has a larger percentage of home owners than any other American city of importance. Rich in historic associations and once the capital of the United States, the "City of Brotherly Love" is still the Quaker capital of the world. Home of the Satevepost and the Ladies Home, it has awakened with the passing of Vane and his machine due to Stern of the Record who recently bought the N. Y. Post.

At the crossing of the principal thoroughfares, Broad and Market Streets, stands the City Hall, a political monument of a former generation. About Independence Square center the pre-Revolutionary landmarks—Independence Hall, with the sacred cracked Liberty Bell, and Carpenters Hall, where met the First Colonial Congress. North of Market Street are Girard College and Temple University. Southwest of the City Hall about Rittenhouse Square the old aristocratic mansions are fast giving way to shops and apartment houses. At West Philadelphia, across the Schuylkill from Philadelphia, are Drexel Institute and the University of Pennsylvania which latter now enrolls about 15,000 students, its hundred acre campus adjoining manufacturing and faded residential districts.

To a greater extent than in any other large city, wealthier residents have abandoned their town houses and migrated to the suburbs. Private schools have naturally followed and many are found in the attractive suburban sections of the city itself. Overbrook, to the northwest, lies partly in Philadelphia and partly in Merion. Germantown, largest of the suburban districts, is seven miles northwest of the City Hall. Here are many fine old pre-Revolutionary houses. Chestnut Hill, most beautiful of the outlying parts of Philadelphia, stretching along the wooded slopes of the valley of the Wissahickon Creek, is four miles north of Germantown Oak Lane, east of Chestnut Hill, lies at the northern edge of the city and has attracted various day schools

The schools in the farther suburbs are treated under their own towns Along the Main Line, one of the most beautiful series of suburbs in the country, well known schools, including many for defectives as well as for Bryn Mawr preparation, will be found at Wynnewood, Ardmore, Haverford, Bryn Mawr, Devon, Berwyn, Paoli and Malvern North of the city, among the Montgomery county hills, there are private schools in Rydal, Meadowbrook, Bryn Athyn, and Ambler In the outlying southern districts, private schools are found at West Chester, Chester, Swarthmore and Lansdowne.

William Penn gave this school, one of the oldest and largest in the country, three charters, the first in 1701 of the same date (October 25, 1701) as the Charter of Philadelphia, the second in 1708 and the third and final one in 1711. It is still conducted under the Charter of 1711 which established an independent and self-perpetuating body of fifteen overseers, and provided for "the good education of youth and their early instruction in the principles of true religion and virtue, qualifying them to serve their country and themselves, by breeding them in reading, writing and learning of languages and useful arts and sciences"

Long under the dominating personality of Dr Richard Mott
Jones, head master for forty-four years, the school prospered and Dr Jones attained a national reputation as one of America's foremost head masters. Since 1918 the school has been under the able direction of Dr. Gummere. For many years head of the Latin Department of Haverford College and a member of the board of overseers of the school, he is, himself, a classical scholar and translator, author of many school texts, and trustee of Bryn Mawr and Haverford Colleges. Dr Gummere's administration has resulted in the development of the school in numbers and influence, and to his leadership may be attributed the new plant to which the school moved in 1925.

In the upper school a system has been initiated whereby under the guidance of instructors each boy may elect and concentrate in some field in which he does work beyond college entrance requirements. Initiative on the part of the masters is encouraged and latitude in selection of material and method is allowed. A cooperative individualism is encouraged in both faculty and student body and each boy above the sixth grade is expected to spend a fifth of his time on hobby subjects which harmonize with his interests and tastes. The school has been a training ground for country day school heads all over the country and more members of the Headmasters Association have served in this school than in any other. See page 838.

City of smoke and steel and huge wealth, Pittsburgh has also the world's largest glass, electrical machinery, and air brakes works. Carnegie benefactions have done much for Pittsburgh people.

The business section is on the tongue of land between the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers. Back of the highlands to the east is Schenley Park, nearly 500 acres in area. At its entrance is Carnegie Institute, the main building of which covers an area larger than does the Capitol at Washington. The Department of Fine Arts is notable for its director, Homer Saint-Gaudens, who has a roving commission to bring annually the best work of two continents for exhibition. The University of Pittsburgh, coeducational, with over 14,000 students, dates from 1787 and is also in Schenley Park. Duquesne University, a Catholic coeducational college, was established in 1878 and has 2885 students. Pennsylvania College for Women, organized in 1869, has about 150 students. Most of the Pittsburgh private schools are in the hilly East End Section.

This school, long regarded by its own discriminating clientele as the best preparatory school, has perhaps grown too large to justify the superlative. Founded by the Rev. Matthew Meigs, the story of how his son, John, coming to the school in 1876, at the age of twenty-four, in the following thirty-five years brought the school from an obscure venture starting with two teachers and twenty boys to an institution of forty masters and three hundred seventy-five boys, has been interestingly told by his biographer, Dr. W. Russell Bowie, in "The Master of the Hill." John Meigs was a genius for organization, with abounding vitality and a passionate zest for life, with extraordinary power over his fellow men. He deliberately put from him thoughts of material achievement and gave himself not to the bending or breaking, but to the making of men. Actuated by the highest ideals, with striking ability he surmounted the greatest difficulties in managing and financing. Twice within six years his school was burned and it was ravaged by typhoid and pneumonia, but his determination never faltered in misfortune. His fidelity to his ideals of education and character building inflexibly withstood the influences of the wealth and social position of his patrons. Mrs. John Meigs, familiarly known as "Mrs.

John," played a great part in the futures of many men by her inspiring counsel in the "sky parlor."

"Mr Rolfe of The Hill" is the title of a little book compiled by Dr Boyd Edwards from the inspiring writings of Dr Alfred G. Rolfe, who directed the school after Dr Meigs' death in 1911 until Dwight R. Meigs, then in Oxford University, was ready to take his father's place. In 1914 the son entered upon his duties as head master and at once gave evidence that he had inherited his father's administrative genius. In 1920 the Alumni, recognizing the worth of the school and the present trend in educational institutions from private ownership to endowed corporate organizations, took over the control. Dwight R. Meigs resigned in 1922, and Dr Boyd Edwards, formerly pastor of the Hillside Presbyterian Church, Orange, N. J., an old friend of the school and the Meigs family, became head master. Mr Wendell, who has come up through the school, has been head master since 1928. A former Olympic hurdler, with a tremendous capacity for work and study, he is ably aided by Mrs. Wendell, a woman of rare charm.

From The Hill faculty have come head masters for twenty-four other schools, but seventeen masters served the school for twenty years or more—men like John A. Lester who leavened the intellectual life of the school and whose breadth of vision is reflected in his publications; and Michael F. Sweeney who, in charge of athletics for thirty-seven years, influenced the lives of two generations.

The Hill continues to progress. Provision has been made to give constructive work to those boys found not to be college material. The new Hobbies Building affords opportunities for many interests and sustained activities. Much of the management of the school has been put upon the faculty through the formation of four committees on discipline, administration, curriculum and extra-curriculum activities. Student self-government has been promoted through the formation of a School Council. Standards of work have always been high and it is a matter of record that few Hill graduates have failed to pass their college examinations. They have been unusually successful, too, among college undergraduates. Hill is proud of her boys and the families from which they come. Hill boys are proud of their school, too, and all applicants for admission must furnish references to or endorsement by alumni or their parents. Their loyalty is shown by large gifts,—the two million dollar campaign conducted during 1929 and 1930 having been oversubscribed by $150,000. See page 839.

Now an accredited junior college, Ogontz grew out of The Chestnut Street Seminary, founded as early as 1850, which moved from Philadelphia to Ogontz, where it occupied the estate of the Civil War financier, Jay Cooke. It has since been known as the Ogontz School, and retains its post office address of Ogontz School, although moved in 1917 to handsome buildings in Rydal. Miss Sutherland, principal since 1908, has impressed something of her own forceful personality on the school and its life. Emphasis is placed on social and family life and the study of art, literature, psychology, ethics and home making as well as college preparation. A summer camp, the Ogontz White Mountain Camp, near Lisbon, N H, is under Miss Sutherland's personal supervision.

THE RYDAL SCHOOL, established in 1917, is the junior school of Ogontz. In 1927 it occupied new buildings on the estate and continues to have the advantages of the upper school faculty in addition to its own well trained lower grade teachers. Day pupils are received. See page 881.

BALTIMORE, MD. Alt 130 ft. Pop 733,826 (1920) 804,874 (1930).

Famous for its markets, its good living, its terrapin, Baltimore has distinctive local color, customs and cuisine. It is the birth-place of Poe's Raven and America's most strident boobiphobe, H. L. Mencken. On the Patapsco river, just below the city, the British fleet was repulsed in Revolutionary days and here Francis Scott Key conceived "The Star Spangled Banner." The original manuscript recently purchased for thousands of dollars is now preserved in the Walters Picture Gallery.

Centering about Mount Vernon Place, from which rises the tall Washington Monument, are the Peabody Institute where the Peabody Conservatory of Music has its headquarters, and the Walters Picture Gallery Between Mount Vernon Place and Mount Royal Avenue are a number of private schools Eutaw Place leads through the residential section to Druid Hill Park, about which is another group of schools In Roland Park, still farther north, is the new site of Johns Hopkins University, established in 1876 and enrolling over 2200 students In this suburb also are the Gilman and Roland Park Country Schools, Girls Latin, and Notre Dame of Maryland In Mt Washington are Mount Saint Agnes School for girls, Mount Washington Country School for boys, and St Paul's School

The first established country day school, a notable development in American education, Gilman owes its start to Mrs Francis K. Carey, who formed a committee which in 1897 incorporated "The Country School for Boys of Baltimore City." In 1911, renamed in honor of the former president of Johns Hopkins, the school moved to a more spacious site at Roland

Park The five day boarding plan, here first adopted, permits boys to return to their families for the weekends. As the boarding department has developed the school has appealed to a wider clientele. During the administration of Frank Woodworth Pine, it attained high scholastic standing; and under the direction of Mr. Morrow, who succeeded L. Wardlaw Miles in 1926, it has had steady growth. The Lower School is separately organized.

A resident of Port Deposit, Jacob Tome on his death left an endowment of two and three-quarter millions to establish an institute offering instruction for boys and girls from kindergarten through high school. The trustees in 1898 decided to develop, in addition to the local schools, a boarding school for boys and erected the present plant which was the most notable in the country. From the beginning it has been unusually well equipped with shops of which increasing use has been made in the last two years. The late J. C. Mackenzie, who had organized Lawrenceville, served for two years as director and was succeeded by Thomas S. Baker, now president of Carnegie Institute. He in turn was followed in 1919 by Murray Peabody Brush whom Mr. Shortlidge succeeded in 1932. The present head master, a pupil of C. St. James, the first church boarding school of the English type in America, is the diocesan school of Maryland. Dr. William Augustus Muhlenberg, who had first introduced the English Episcopal school system at Flushing, L. I., sent his chief assistant, Rev. J. B. Kerfoot, to be the first head master, and here, too, another pupil of Muhlenberg's, Dr. Henry Augustus Coit, taught until he was called to organize St. Paul's at Concord, N H. In 1844 the school was chartered as the "College of St James" Closed during the war, it reopened in 1869 under Henry Onderdonk, who continued as head master until 1896 In 1903 he was succeeded by his son, the present head master, and the name was changed to St James School Mr Onderdonk is a strong and lovable personality, a great teacher and a hero to his boys. The personnel is of the best and "home life" and "individual attention" and the "honor system" in this school are not empty phrases New and well equipped buildings evidence the loyalty of the alumni. See page 842.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Alt 25 ft. Pop 486,869 (1930).

The capital of a great democracy, each change of administration brings a new dominant element. Wilson gave it an academic tinge, and the war, with its dollar-a-year men, an atmosphere of business efficiency. Harding with his 'best minds' and 'Ohio gang' brought quite another flavor. Coolidge imparted something of the coolness of New England. Hoover, great engineer, showed a predilection for public utilities men and those who stood for his type of 'rugged individualism'. Now with the New Deal a smiling aristocrat is in the saddle inspiring brainy little professors and conscripts from the corporations to play their kaleidoscopic parts disclosing hidden rottenness, pointing to new hope, building a better future.

Few call it home except the minor or permanent government officials and employees, though many notable working scientists are permanently located here. Its citizens have no vote and take no part in its government. Even the petty details of its public school system are directed by a board appointed by the Supreme Court.

The atrocious architecture of the past which reflected our former lack of national taste has in the last two decades given place to new and beautiful buildings, the turn coming in the time of Roosevelt the First. During the Hoover administration more than $100,000,000 was put into new governmental offices. Outstanding among the more beautiful of the buildings are the Pan American Union, stimulating and refreshing in its architectural detail and arrangement, the Academy of Arts and Sciences by Bertram Goodhue, a remarkable example of purest Greek architectural design, and the new Folger Shakesperean Library, architecturally chaste. Lincoln Memorial, with its great display of Doric columns reflected in the water, stands almost in the shadow of the great white obelisk; and beyond, the Arlington Memorial Bridge, completed in 1932, leads across to Arlington and the Tomb of the Unknown.

The museum and collections are of growing importance. The Freer is a gem. Saint Gaudens' Grief, in Rock Creek Cemetery, was to Galsworthy the most memorable thing in Washington and perhaps in America.

The attractions of Washington have made it an educational center. The Catholic Church, with characteristic foresight, has taken advantage of this for its higher institutions of learning—the Catholic University, Trinity College and Georgetown University George Washington University falls short of the hope and plan of the Father of his Country

Recent trade invasion of the older residential region from Lafayette Square to Dupont and Thomas Circles has driven the costly new mansions and legations to Sixteenth Street, where they extend for miles to the north. Finishing schools have flourished on this soil and some still remain in the neighborhood of Dupont Circle. The more substantial college preparatory schools are rapidly deserting this region for the hills north and west of the city. Some schools have crossed the line and have such post office addresses as Forest Glen, Garrett Park and Takoma Park. The Chevy Chase Schools and The Washington Country School, although over the Maryland border, use the Washington post office. The Madeira School, long on 19th Street, moved in 1931 to a new plant across the Potomac in Greenway, Fairfax County, Virginia, thirty minutes ride from the city.

Much of the education is 'outside of text books' and there is opportunity for the greatest variety of educational divertissement. Numerous clubhouses in various types of architecture dot the grounds—Japanese, Swiss, Mission. And 'a girl's club is her castle'.

This school was formed by the union of Ward Seminary and Belmont College, under the charter name The Ward-Belmont School. The former institution was founded in 1865 and the latter in 1890. John Deill Blanton, for twenty-one years president of Ward Seminary, continued in nominal control of Ward-Belmont until his death in 1933. But the active management has long been vested in Dr. Barton and A. B. Benedict who own the controlling interest. The entire faculty is college trained. The majority of the high school graduates enter college. More than half the students are enrolled in the accredited junior college and two-thirds of these annually enter four year colleges as juniors. The resident students, though largely from the south and middle west, represent thirty-six states. See page 914.

This growing city of increasing commercial importance lies at the head of the Mississippi delta about a hundred miles from the Gulf of Mexico. New Orleans is one of the world's largest cotton markets and its huge wharves and docks are the scene of enormous traffic. Embankments offer protection from the annual floods, as parts of the city are below the level of the river. Canal Street, the principal business thoroughfare, separates the New City from the older French Quarter whose picturesqueness is much advertised, as is that other survival, the Mardi Gras.

Originally laid out in checkerboard, Cincinnati extends fourteen miles along the Ohio river. To the German population, which settled here in the middle of the nineteenth century, is due much of the cultural development of the city. Socialite Cincinnatians, like Kansas Citizens, win at being called middlewestern, and pride themselves on eastern and southern connections. The city manager plan has made this formerly boss-ridden city one of the best administered in the country.

The University of Cincinnati is in Burnet Woods Park to the north of the city. Just beyond in Avondale is the University School, and still farther north at College Hill is Ohio Military Institute. Fifteen miles northeast on Indian Hill is the Cincinnati Country Day School. In Walnut Hills are the Schuster-Martin School and the Cincinnati Conservatory. South in Eden Park is the Art Academy. Iron, oil and railroads for decades have poured into Cleveland in ceaseless streams of riches. But real estate and banking schemes have taken the savings of the people, reduced the value of real estate and closed the banks. During the Harding-Coolidge-Hoover reign prosperous Cleveland was looted by the Van Sweringens and Eatons and their ilk.

Here are many institutions for higher learning—Western Reserve University, Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland College, John Carroll University, Ursuline College, Notre Dame College, and St Ignatius College. This well equipped and highly organized institution for girls, one of the most vigorous and progressive in the middle west, originated as a day school and the greater part of the enrollment is still in the day department. The small boarding group was established in 1904 when the school came under the management of Alice Gladden who died in 1926, and Grace Latimer Jones, now Mrs McClure. In 1912 the school was incorporated and additions were built. About three-fourths of the graduates enter college. The methods are progressive throughout, the life is vigorous, and the opportunities for extra-curricular interests and outdoor activities are many. Eventually the school will occupy a country day school plant in the outskirts of the city. See page 889.

More in the public eye than any other military school, this institution was established by Henry Harrison Culver. The school has been continued by the Culver estate which has turned back all earnings into the budget for actual operating expenses. General Gignilliat, made commandant in 1896 and superintendent in 1910, is a tactful and capable administrator with advanced ideas on some phases of secondary school education. Culver has won wide publicity for its progressive steps in guidance and measurement, in internal surveys and in carrying university consultants on its staff. Cavalry, artillery, and infantry senior units of the R.O.T.C. have long been maintained. For over a quarter of a century the United States War Department has given the military work of the school the highest rating. See page 850.

G.T.R.R. Motor Route U.S. 10 from Detroit.

In the development of this region of suburban estates, George G. Booth, newspaper publisher and patron of the crafts and arts, was the pioneer a quarter of a century ago. Ten miles north of the city limits of Detroit and five miles south of Pontiac, on the Woodward superhighway, its five square miles were incorporated as a village in 1927 as a step toward the preservation of its rural character. Here are the five educational institutions and the church established by Mr. and Mrs. Booth on the 300 acre tract which was their estate, "Cranbrook," named for Mr. Booth's ancestral village in England. Reserving only their residence, they have given land, buildings, equipment and endowment funds to the development of Christ Church Cranbrook, Brookside School Cranbrook, Cranbrook School, Kingswood School Cranbrook, Cranbrook Academy of Art, and Cranbrook Institute of Science. The Cranbrook Foundation, created in 1926, was the recipient of virtually all of Mr. Booth's fortune, as well as substantial gifts from Mrs. Booth, totaling approximately $17,500,000. Masterpieces of sculpture and the decorative arts adorn all of the institutions, which, with the exception of the church and Brookside, were designed by Eliel Saarinen, distinguished architect and president of the Cranbrook Academy of Art, for whose work here he received the gold medal of the New York Architectural League.

An ancient settlement founded by Cadillac, Detroit had its rebirth with the automobile of which it is now the greatest industrial center. It has had a remarkable growth, risen to the height of prosperity and fallen deepest into the abyss. The home of Henry Ford and Father Coughlin, it was the scene of the wildest orgy of our period of prosperity. Here started the bank holiday which marked our financial and industrial nadir, closed the Hoover career and gave impetus to the Roosevelt revolution.

The motor industry has attracted a large foreign element and the interests of the people at large are indicated in the enrollment of the Cass Technical High School which has reached 16,000. Great wealth, citizens of public spirit and vision have given the city a notable system of parks, boulevards, municipal buildings and art facilities. To the north in beautiful country lie great estates. In Dearborn is Ford's huge trade school. In the Grosse Pointe district are the Grosse Pointe Country Day and Detroit University Schools.

Long one of the most successful and prosperous day schools in the country, this school developed under the management of the Misses Liggett from the Detroit Home and Day School, established by their father, the Rev James D Liggett. An institution of first rank, well organized and equipped, with a large and resourceful faculty, it has been less affected than most Detroit schools by the cataclysm of the city's finances. The pupils represent the best families of Detroit. Over three hundred of its graduates have entered college, and the Alumnæ Association cooperates heartily with the school. A branch school known as "The Eastern Liggett School," 2571 Burns Ave, was opened in the eastern part of the city in 1913, providing for the growing patronage of that section. In 1925 a new addition to this was built and the older school moved over to the east side, the lower school being merged with it, making the new Liggett School. In 1928, Miss Ogden succeeded Jeanette M. Liggett who remains in touch as trustee and principal emerita.

The fourth largest city in the world, the second largest in the United States, Chicago may eventually be the greatest. Here the raw products of the great central agricultural regions and the west meet the coal of the central west, are prepared and interchanged. Long continued corrupt domination by the utilities, of late largely through Insull creatures, has wrecked the city government credit and public school system. But public spirited citizens looking into the future have devised plans for great material and esthetic development. The Lake Front, once a freight yard, has been filled in. It provides for parks, public buildings and the largest stadium in the world, and became the site of the Century of Progress Exposition of 1933-34.

The University of Chicago, established in 1903 on the World's Fair site and enrolling over 12,000 students, is in the South Side section. Here are the Harvard School for Boys, Kenwood-Loring School for Girls, the Starrett, Faulkner and Orthogenic Schools. The North Side, which extends above the Chicago river, is the most fashionable residential section. Here are the Francis W. Parker School, the Latin Schools for Boys and for Girls, and Chicago Teachers College.

The oldest girls school in the west, Monticello was founded by Benjamin Godfrey, an old Cape Cod sea captain who had made a fortune in eastern trade and settled here because of large land holdings. The school was organized by Rev. Theron Baldwin, a friend of Captain Godfrey, who was influenced by the ideas of Mary Lyon. In 1841 the school was incorporated and graduated its first class. In its long history it has played an important part in the education of young women of the section and is appropriately spoken of as the "Mount Holyoke of the West." The large body of loyal alumnæ is organized in many associations throughout the west. The junior college department has been greatly strengthened under Miss Congdon, principal since 1918, who had done graduate work in Michigan, and Oxford, England, and who, before coming to Monticello, was dean in Hillsdale and Wilson Colleges. Three quarters of a century ago public spirited Chicago citizens purchased 1300 acres of land bordering on Lake Michigan and here built the academy whose Diamond Jubilee was celebrated in 1933. "Big Boy" Richards, who came to the school in 1913 from Hotchkiss and Yale, succeeding William Mather Lewis, now president of Lafayette, has greatly increased the importance of the academy among college preparatory schools of the country. Successfully he has maintained a modern attitude against the regional militaristic trend. Under his regime the school has achieved higher standards and has prepared for the great universities sons of western families who would otherwise have been sent to eastern schools. In 1930 Mr Richards procured the necessary funds to put into operation a new plan which has since been adopted by other boys schools and has successfully met the college test. The effect of this plan has been to make the school work more interesting, more individualized, more economical of time and effort. But in addition, it has made education at Lake Forest more actual and more directly applicable to each boy's individual life. The visitor here is impressed with the aliveness, virility, and effectiveness of the educational process. Mr. Richards holds the unswerving devotion of his boys, patrons and trustees, many of whose names are among the most potent in Chicago. See page 849.

Today earnest parents sacrifice other things to live here that their children may benefit from the work of two brilliant educational attractions. A graduate of St John's, long the commandant and a potent influence in the life of the school, Colonel Farrand became superintendent in 1923 on the death of the founder, Rev. Sidney T Smythe. The school, incorporated in 1889, emphasizes its Episcopal influence. The cadets are organized as a battalion of infantry of six companies with a cadet band. Alumni served with distinction in the Spanish-American and World Wars, over five hundred as commissioned officers. This school has long played an important part in the educational life of the region.

Notable among the schools of the west, Shattuck was the conception of the Rt. Rev. Henry B Whipple, the first Bishop of Minnesota, who, familiar with such schools in England as Winchester and Rugby, saw the need of a permanent educational institution in this region. As early as 1858 the Rev James L. Breck had established in Faribault a small day school which was later incorporated by Dr. Whipple as the Bishop Seabury Mission. Out of this have grown the three renowned schools; Seabury Divinity School, merged in 1933 with Western Theological Seminary, St Mary's Hall, and Shattuck. The boys school was named for an early benefactor, Dr George Cheyne Shattuck of Boston. In 1916 the Rt. Rev F. A. McElwain became rector and Dr. Newhall, connected with Shattuck for over twenty years, head master. There is a strong faculty of university graduates. During its long career more than three thousand boys have been trained in its halls. The students are drawn largely from well-to-do families of the great northwest. Classed by the government as 'essentially a military school' the students must always be in uniform and are constantly under military discipline. Military training is required of all, and the students are organized into a battalion of infantry. See page 851.

Blake School was founded by William McK Blake largely as a tutoring school. In 1911 it was taken over and incorporated by leading citizens. Under the supervision of Bertram C Newton, now head master of the Pingry School, Elizabeth, N.J., it became one of the pioneer country day schools and ranks today among the foremost college preparatory schools of the type. There are three closely coordinated departments. The Junior School, in the city, for younger boys, is under the direction of Mary G McDonald. The Senior Country School with its boarding department is seven miles west of the city. The scholastic standards in all departments are high. Mr. Alder, for seventeen years principal of Adelphi Academy and before that an instructor at Exeter and Penn Charter, was elected to the head mastership in 1926 to succeed Raymond B. Johnson. Under his administration plans have been made for the erection of new buildings to accommodate additional boys in both day and resident departments. See page 851.

An outgrowth of a day school conducted for thirteen years in the city, this modern country day school is unique among its kind in that the boys wear uniforms and devote one period a day to military drill. Since 1916 the junior and senior departments have been entirely separate. The Junior School, under the direction of Beulah Brown, in the fall of 1931 moved to a new building at 718 Portland Avenue. Mr Briggs, a son of Dean Briggs of Harvard, had previous experience in the Hill School and in the Kansas City Country Day School, and under his able and scholarly leadership this school has taken front rank in the College Board examinations. Once a frontier fort and still the world's greatest fur market, St. Louis is today the seventh city in population in the country.

It is the most centrally located of our large cities — the center of population, manufacture, and distribution, with untold future possibilities

A notable group of educational buildings has grown up in Forest Park, the site of the Exposition of 1904. To the west in the Wydown section is Washington University with about 7000 students, founded in 1853. Overlooking the University campus is Hosmer Hall St. Louis University, a Catholic institution including some women's colleges dating from 1818, has over 3500 students.

In the northern section of the city is the David Ranken, Jr.,
School of Mechanical Trades. The Principia, long in the northwestern district will move its college section to Elsah, Illinois.
North of Natural Bridge Road, in a remote section, is the fifty acre campus of the St. Louis Country Day School. In the suburb of Clayton are John Burroughs School, Chaminade College and Academy, Taylor School, the new Community School, and Mary Institute which the University controls. To the Florissant Valley, between Ferguson and Kirkwood, The Evans School has recently moved.

The only Christian Science educational institution that has proved successful, The Principia is but one of scores that have been started. Established by Mrs. Mary Kimball Morgan, it has continued under her control as president of the board of trustees and that of her sons. There is no direct connection with or financial support from the Christian Science Church, but Christian Science practices, ideals and standards prevail among faculty and students. In consonance with these standards, team work between trustees, school executives and patrons is played up, and personalities are submerged. However, it is apparent even to some Christian Scientists that the school owes its great success to the organizing genius and vision of the present director, in charge since 1920. Carefully laid plans for an endowment fund for a four year college resulted in the announcement, in 1930, of the raising of two million dollars and the purchase of a four mile tract of land along the Mississippi near the village of Elsah, Ill., where buildings are now under way. The A.B. degree will be conferred in 1934 on the first graduating class. See page 916.

An outgrowth of an Episcopal school established in 1852, this academy is the creation of Dr J W Hill who until his death in 1930 continued in close touch with the school under the direction of his sons. The academy became well known through the national appeal it made for support, and the prominent part it played in opposing the Oregon enactment of 1922 requiring that all parents send their children to public schools beginning September, 1926. The pupils come largely from the Pacific Coast and the Rocky Mountain states. A summer camp is maintained. The school moved to its new site in Rocky Butte in 1931, leaving the original buildings for the use of the separate junior school for boys 6-12, under the direction of Forrest Lunger

During the first decade of its existence, Webb became one of the three California schools for boys with a College Board record comparable to that of eastern schools. Since 1933 it has been the College Board center for the section. On the site of the old Claremont School, in new buildings, the traditions of the Webbs, known in the south as educators for over half a century, are carried on. Mr. Webb is a son of William Robert Webb, founder of the school at Bell Buckle, Tenn., and was for many years a teacher there. His wife plays an important part in the life of the California school.

The largest city on the American side of the Pacific basin, Los Angeles has become a great center of industry and commerce. The original Mexican settlement, midway between the mountains and the sea, centered about Olvera Street Here still stands the Church of Our Lady Queen of the Angels, dating from 1818. The city limits embrace a great area from the San Fernando valley, over the Hollywood hills and the Santa Monica mountains, to the sea. The attractiveness of the climate to the retired farming class of the middle west, the discovery of oil, the development of harbor facilities, the cinematograph, and the airplane are among the factors contributing to the city's growth.

Private schools here spring up like mushrooms. Some of the girls schools have attained unusually high standards, but there have been so many fly-by-nights that in 1932 an Association of Independent Schools of Los Angeles was formed, to protect reputable schools and private school patrons. While the secretarial, trade and industrial schools are still in the business section and mainly on Figueroa Street, preparatory schools are found in all the residential regions. South, in the vicinity of Exposition Park with its new stadium seating 90,000, are the University of Southern California and a few private schools. In the tree lined old residential part to the southwest are many schools of local appeal, among them Miss Thomas', Martha Weaver and Harvard. Near Westlake Park, four miles west of Broadway, is Otis Art Institute. And in an older residential district, Hammond Hall and Miss Fulmer's Schools occupy the former buildings of the Westlake School for Girls. Page, Cumnock and Marlborough Schools, which a decade ago moved into the open country, are now surrounded by city blocks. The Hollywood schools make special appeal to the children of the movie colony. Black-Foxe occupies the former building of the Urban Military Academy.

Two great educational centers have developed hereabouts in the last few years. To the east, centering about Pomona, have moved the Girls' Collegiate School from Los Angeles to Glendora; and the California Preparatory School from Pasadena to Covina. More recently, west of the city, a group of schools has sprung up midway between Los Angeles and Santa Monica Bay. In Westwood are the frowning red brick buildings of the University of California at Los Angeles and the imposing new Catholic institutions, Marymount for girls and St. Mary's College for men; in Beverly Hills, Westlake and its Holmby Junior College which moved from the city in 1929. Further out, on Beverly Boulevard, Urban School is conspicuous. The future homes of the Harvard School, St. John's Academy and the Culver Art Center are to be located here.

The oldest and most widely known of Los Angeles schools, Marlborough is a monument to the administrative genius of Mrs. George A. Caswell, its founder and for thirty-five years its head mistress. Miss Blake, born and educated in the east and with wide experience in girls schools of the east and middle west, took over the school in 1924 after a year as associate principal. She has played a prominent part in school associations of the region and under her energetic and forceful direction the school has shown consistent development and new buildings have been erected. A practical all round education is still given, and a considerable number of the graduates are sent to eastern as well as to western colleges. See page 897.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF. Pop 506,676 (1920) 634,394 (1930).

Time, earthquake, fire, have not destroyed the local flavor of San Francisco. It still remains the quintessence of California and the golden west. Built on the sand dunes at the tip of the peninsula bounded by the Pacific, the Golden Gate and the Bay, its street cars must be hauled up the hill by cable. The Presidio, famous Mexican and United States military headquarters, facing the Golden Gate, is adjacent to the site of the Panama Pacific Exposition grounds, some of the buildings of which, now in appalling disrepair, have been preserved as a permanent memorial. Golden Gate Park, reaching to the Pacific, is unique among parks. The Chinese element, segregated north of Market Street, has made San Francisco's Chinatown famous.

ABBOTSHOLME SCHOOL Boys Ages 8-18 Est 1889.

Colin H. C. Sharp, M.A., Oxon, Head Master.

Enr: 80. Tui: £120-180.

Under Dr. Cecil Reddie, the founder, a notable figure in the school world, Abbotsholme was the first to break away from the conventional and the traditional. Out of it has grown the 'New School' movement of the Continent. The leaders of the Landerziehungsheim and the Ecole Nouvelle of France were trained here. Scores of schools have been directly influenced by Abbotsholme and its indirect influence has been world wide. In 1927 Dr. Reddie handed over the school to a Council largely composed of his Old Boys, and appointed the present head master, late of St Stephen's College, Delhi, and the University of Delhi, who has here developed an education suited to the needs of the twentieth century boy. Academic standards are maintained, together with a wide education through interest, appreciation and achievement. The proportion of staff to boys is exceptionally high.

William B. Curry, M.A., Cambridge, B.Sc., London Univ,

Enr: Bdg 80, Day 30.

This interesting experiment makes an international appeal and welcomes American children under sixteen. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard K. Elmhirst are the donors of the huge estate and of the means wherewith to develop this extensive economic, social, and educational experiment. Its enrollment was restricted to some twenty-five local children up to 1930 when Mr. and Mrs. Curry, long identified with progressive education in England and the United States, returned to England. After four years as head of the science department at Bedales, Mr. Curry came to the United States, took an instructorship at Oak Lane, a progressive country day school in Philadelphia, and the next year, 1927, was appointed head master. He returned to England in 1930 to direct all the educational policies of this foundation with the primary purpose of making education an adventure. The Primary School for children two to eight is under Winifred Harley, an Englishwoman, who returned to England after ten years at the Merrill-Palmer Motherhood and Home Training School in Detroit. The Junior School is for children eight to twelve, and the Senior School for children thirteen to eighteen.

PARIS. Pop 2,871,429 '1930.

The capital of France is the center of the art, financial, and industrial life of the nation. The modern city fills the limestone basin cut across the Seine. Montmartre climbs the northern rim crowned by the aspiring dome of Sacré-Coeur. The earliest settlements were on the islands in the river about which the Roman and medieval cities were built. On the left bank, the Sorbonne has for centuries attracted students from every foreign country and has been the center of the Latin Quarter.

Hausmannized and "mansarded," Paris has long impressed the unsophisticated as the acme of the magnificent and the beautiful, though in city plan and architectural beauty there are things in Houston and Kansas City superior to anything Paris can show. The somewhat artificial atmosphere still known to Americans, reflects, even after centuries, the influence of the frivolous and extravagant Bourbons. Americans on their first visit haunt Cook's and the Place de l'Opéra. Those who have been there before make their headquarters around L'Etoile. Fashionable schools for Americans are found in the Parc Monceau and from L'Etoile north toward the Bois de Boulogne. Schools in surrounding municipalities easily accessible to Paris are generally regarded as Parisian. North of the Bois are schools at Neuilly, and Colombes. South is Boulogne and, across the Seine, Saint-Cloud.

FLORENCE. Alt 180 ft. Pop 316,806 (1930).

Florence, proud mistress of Tuscany, is the quintessence of the Renaissance. Set at the crossing of trade routes, on the Arno, out of its commerce came its arts and wealth. Just as imperial Rome is masculine, Florence, surrounded by almond blossom misted hills, is feminine. Perhaps this is why the pensions and hotels are filled with art mad spinsters. The intellectual, esthetic and spiritual inspiration of the place, its palazzos and villas, formerly to be had for a song, have appealed to numerous resident schools. Ensconced in old villas on the slopes of the hills to the east and north, toward Prato and Fiesole, where Boccaccio told his tales, are a number of schools for American girls. Near San Dominico, in a villa centuries old, surrounded by its dependencies and chapel, is the Villa Collina Ridente. The Florentine School is in San Dominico, Eversholme in Rovezzano.

SUPPLEMENTARY LISTS

Here are listed pp. 621-708, under various classifications, schools from Maine to California, arranged under each state alphabetically by towns.

Schools here included are unimportant schools or those from which we have inadequate information or no up to date statistics.

Requests for information, addressed to each of these schools, brought response after thirty days from only those schools indicated by an asterisk. For the other schools the information given is in many cases several years old and probably out of date. Some are moribund, some have probably passed out of existence. So many schools have closed their doors in the past three years that we can give no guarantee.

Schools in the Classified List of Schools to Meet Special Needs, pp. 709-786, for the most part are included in the main portion of the book in the critical and statistical text, pp. 99-618.

Membership lists of various educational and accrediting associations are given on pp. 787-792.

DETAILED CLASSIFIED LISTS

SCHOOLS TO MEET SPECIAL NEEDS

These lists are intended to be helpful in finding the type of school desired. Occasionally arranged chronologically, the usual arrangement is geographical, enabling one to select immediately schools of the type desired in any particular section of the country. The lists are not intended to be exhaustive, but to include some of the more representative schools under each classification.

BOYS SCHOOLS

PREPARATORY TO THE LARGE EASTERN COLLEGES

Only those schools are listed which sent up at least ten boys from 1929 to 1932. For 1933 figures see statistical notices of the individual schools (pp. 99-578.)

ART SCHOOLS

The study of Art as an accomplishment for young ladies was an early 19th century development. As early as 1791 Charles Willson Peale endeavored to create a school of art in Philadelphia. The attempt, though unsuccessful, led in 1805 to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. Hundreds of art schools in the country now offer courses of from one to four years. Summer art schools are a popular recent development.

KINDERGARTEN TRAINING SCHOOLS

The first kindergarten for English speaking children was started in Boston by Elizabeth P. Peabody in 1860. The first in this country was conducted in German by Mrs. Carl Schurz in her home in Watertown, Wisconsin. The first kindergarten training school was organized in Boston in 1868 by Madame Matilde Kriege and her daughter. Miss Maria Boeltje opened a similar school in New York City four years later.

SCHOOLS OF PHYSICAL EDUCATION

The development of interest in Physical Education in America dates from the middle of the last century. It is true that as early as 1823 Dr Charles Beck introduced German gymnastics at the Round Hill School, Northampton, Massachusetts. But the important influence came twenty-five years later, in the intercollegiate contests in rowing, the calisthenics of Dr Dio Lewis, and the educational journals. The college gymnasium was an immediate result—Harvard and Amherst tying for first place in 1860

There are at present fourteen independent, well established, and reputable schools of Physical Education. In addition practically all the large universities and many of the smaller colleges have well organized departments. These two types of schools supply many of the private and most of the public schools with trained directors.

SCHOOLS OF EXPRESSION

Schools of Speech Arts are developments of and take the place of institutions formerly called Schools of Oratory and Elocution. The modern Schools of Speech avoid these terms and designate themselves variously as Schools of Expression, Schools of Public Speaking, Schools of the Drama, and Schools of the Stage. Under Schools of the Theatre Arts are Schools of Stage Production, Schools of the Little Theatre. Closely affiliated with Schools of Expression and Public Speaking are those remedying defective speech.

SCHOOLS OF THE DANCE

Schools of the Dance are, in America, a recent development Many aim directly for the stage, offering courses in classic, folk, national, interpretive, ballet and general stage dancing Others have their origin in Schools for Physical Education and have as their purpose physical upbuilding and beautifying of the human form. Still others, more modern in tone, are for those seeking relaxation.

SCHOOLS OF THE HOUSEHOLD ARTS

Under this classification are schools of Home Economics which train for institutional management, dietetics, and teaching. Schools of Homemaking prepare for the management of the home, and the one year course for prospective brides in such schools often enrolls the great majority of the students. Schools of the various Household Arts and Crafts and Cooking form a third group. Preparatory schools and junior colleges with special departments for the household arts are not here listed. Schools teaching other feminine crafts will be found under Practical Arts for Women.

BUSINESS AND SECRETARIAL SCHOOLS

The number of schools of this type reported by the United States Bureau of Education in a recent pamphlet was six hundred, a loss of some three hundred since the previous compilation, due to the great increase in the assumption by the public school systems of the functions once performed by private institutions. Of the more ephemeral so-called "business colleges" there are probably upwards of 2000 conducted under private initiative, but these seldom make reports to government questionnaires.

Private business classes existed even in Colonial times. In the '30's and '40's of the last century private classes in bookkeeping increased rapidly, forerunners of the modern business schools. In the '50's and '60's chain schools were established, remnants of which exist today independently in many cities under the old names.

The leading schools here described are also mentioned in the main body of the Handbook. Business departments of standard colleges are not included.

SCHOOLS OF NURSING

Professional nursing is a relatively modern development. It was Florence Nightingale who first uprooted the old notion of nursing as charity work. Nursing education in America had its start in the form of lectures, when Dr. Valentine Seaman introduced a lecture course in obstetrics at the New York Hospital, but no school of nursing existed until 1873. Three schools initiated at this time were independent organizations cooperating with, but not established by, the Bellevue Hospital in New York, the Connecticut Training School in New Haven, and the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

Hospitals immediately recognized the value of these training schools and, though in 1880 there were only fifteen schools, in 1890 there were thirty-five, in 1900, 432; in 1920, 1775, in 1926, 2155 and by the end of 1927, 2286. In 1928 new recruits to the ranks of graduate nurses numbered about 20,000. A committee from the Medical Association of America, the College of Physicians and Surgeons and several other important groups, including professional societies of nurses themselves, in 1928 investigated and reported that "most hospitals with training schools expect and require student nurses to carry the entire nursing load of the hospital." Since 1929 many hospitals have discontinued their training schools. Some of the larger hospitals still maintain a staff of graduate nurses and the nursing education which has found its place on the program of many colleges is of course on a high plane.

Only a few of the older and better established nurses training schools are presented under the following classifications.

FOR DEFICIENTS

Under this classification will be found schools for the mentally, physically and sensorily deficient. Defectives received no scientific care and education in this country until 1820, when idiots were admitted to the deaf and dumb asylum at Hartford, Connecticut. Dr. Edouard Seguin, a young French physician, developed a method of training of the sense organs and in 1850 opened the Seguin Physiological School at Orange, New Jersey. Before that, however, his methods had been used in the first strictly private institution in the country, Elm Hill, Barre, Massachusetts, which dates back to 1848. Latterly schools for the slightly deficient have developed and many of these admit no low grade defectives.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES LIBRARY 1929

CLAUDE M. FUESS, Litt.D , Ph.D., Head Master.

Phillips Academy, founded in 1778 by members of the Phillips family, is the oldest incorporated academy in the U. S.

It is international in its representation and democratic in its life and spirit. Its essential appeal is to students of serious educational purpose and high moral standards.

To be eligible for entrance, candidates must present satisfactory school records and evidence of good character, and must take examinations for assignment to classes.

Dormitory accommodations and supervision enable students to pass by gradual and natural stages from the paternalism of home life to the freedom of college.

Williams Hall, with its close supervision, offers attractive and helpful surroundings to the young boy just leaving home for his school career.

New buildings designed by Charles Platt include an Auditorium, Office Building, Science Building, Dormitories, Dining Hall, Library, and an Art Gallery. A new Chapel was completed in 1932. A new and modern Inn is in operation.

Extensive playgrounds and athletic fields are available for the use of students. All the boys are required to take regular gymnasium work or engage in sports. The Gymnasium, Swimming Pool, and the Case Memorial Building, providing complete facilities for athletic activities during the winter, are in charge of a competent physical director.

Endowments and scholarship funds are available providing pecuniary aid for more than a hundred scholarly and ambitious boys of limited means.

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

WASSOOKEAG SCHOOL, Bryant Hill, Dexter, Me.
LLOYD HARVEY HATCH, Head Master.

The Wassookeag Method has set a new standard — one teacher for every three boys.

Under Wassookeag's tutorial impetus the regular program of two academic years is completed in one calendar year. The SCHOOL and WASSOOKEAG SCHOOL-CAMP, which serves as the summer session, present an unusual record — no graduate has failed to enter College on scheduled time.

Wassookeag "results" have proved the thesis that boys from 14 to 18 are ready for College standards. The Wassookeag Method: The Tutorial System, Acceleration of Individual Progress, University Tutors and Standards, Continuity in the Educational Process, Junior College Transition Study, Orientation, Scholastic Attainment.

For School and Camp Information and Catalogs

THE PHILLIPS EXETER ACADEMY, Exeter, N. H.
LEWIS PERRY, A M , L.H.D., Principal.

The Academy furnishes the elements of a solid education by thorough instruction in all the studies required for admission to the leading Colleges and Scientific Schools Summer session.

Candidates for admission must be at least 13 years old and must satisfy their instructors as to their fitness by certificates from former teachers and by examinations, and must also furnish satisfactory evidence of good moral character.

HOLDERNESS SCHOOL, Plymouth, N. H.

REV. EDRIC AMORY WELD, Rector.

This Episcopal School for boys, on a 200-acre estate in the foothills of the White Mountains, gives College Preparatory and General courses, including Music and Art.

The limited enrollment and small classes furnish an opportunity for thorough instruction in a homelike atmosphere. Provision is made for all sports, including Golf, Riding, and Winter Activities. Each boy has charge of his own room and helps with the care of the buildings, thereby increasing his pride in his School Home and making possible a minimum tuition. The new fireproof building pictured above was completed in 1932.

TILTON SCHOOL, Tilton, New Hampshire.

THOMAS W. WATKINS, A.B., Ed.M., Head Master.

This well equipped, progressive New England school for boys has graduates in fifty-two Colleges and Scientific Schools today, the stronger New England institutions of course being in the lead. There are General and Business Courses for boys not going to College. The classes are small, with ample opportunity for individual instruction.

An excellent Junior School for boys eight to fourteen provides for those who have not completed the Elementary Grades. It is separate from the Senior School, having its own school building and cottage dormitories with experienced and kindly house mothers.

Tilton has a spacious campus and a twenty-five acre athletic field which has ample facilities for every type of outdoor sport—Football, Baseball, Track, Tennis and Soccer. The environment is ideal for winter sports—Skiing, Skating, Tobogganing and Hockey. Golf is available without additional charge. A large Gymnasium provides for indoor exercise and Basketball.

The life at Tilton is happy and wholesome and more like that of a home than of a school.

THE STEARNS SCHOOL, Mont Vernon, N. H.
ARTHUR FRENCH STEARNS, A B , Principal

The Stearns School is located in a beautiful village in the foothills of southern New Hampshire. Mont Vernon has long been noted for its climate and has the endorsement of many eminent Boston physicians.

The boys live in the four houses known as Lincoln Hall, Andover Hall, Mitchell Hall, and The Lodge, which contain large, airy sleeping rooms, and are fitted with all modern improvements. The boys are under careful and sympathetic supervision, as home life is a special feature of Stearns School.

The Upper School prepares boys for any College or University while giving them, at the same time, the best possible all-round education. Its college record is excellent and its certificate admits to practically all Colleges.

The Lower School is under the direct supervision of an experienced teacher who thoroughly understands the preparation and training of younger boys. Lower School boys occupy a dormitory by themselves but enjoy the advantages in their classroom work of the strong teaching force of the regular school.

Each boy in both the Upper and Lower School is required to engage in some healthful recreation, under the supervision of some teacher, during his play hours. The campus affords excellent opportunity for outdoor activities and for all winter sports. It includes a well kept Golf Course, Tennis Courts, Athletic Fields and Skating Pond.

The excellent results attained are due to the intimate contact between teacher and pupil and to a teaching force that is unusually strong in proportion to the number of boys. Rate $1100.

NEW HAMPTON SCHOOL FOR BOYS,
New Hampton, New Hampshire.

FREDERICK SMITH, A.M., Principal.

New Hampton, in the Pemigewasset Valley, is a place where a boy may live a wholesome, normal life much in the out-of-doors and where he will be taught how to study and be trained to think for himself.

Every boy enjoys some form of athletics, and all sports are carefully supervised. Hard work and hard play under careful guidance fit the New Hampton boy to enter College or Business with the mental, moral, and physical equipment to compete successfully and to work harmoniously with others.

EMERSON SCHOOL FOR BOYS, Exeter, N. H.

MRS. MABEL H. EMERSON, A.B., Principal.

EDWARD E. EMERSON, A.B., Head Master.

The Emerson School for Boys 8-16 offers thorough preparation for Exeter, Andover and other leading Secondary Schools, and graduates entering Exeter have had marked success.

The school equipment includes spacious houses of Colonial design, a 12 acre Athletic Field, Tennis Courts, Work Shop and Recreation Hall. Tuition for 1934, $1200.

Next to sound scholarship, comradeship with instructors is emphasized. The faculty has been discriminatingly chosen.

CLIFFORD PEASE CLARK, Ph.D., Founder.

FRANK MILLETT MORGAN, Ph.D., Director.

The purpose of The Clark School is primarily to prepare a boy adequately and thoroughly for College or Business, and to inculcate in him those basic principles and high ideals which tend toward the development of a manly character.

Hanover, the seat of Dartmouth College, within sight of the Green Mountains and forty miles from the southern spur of the White Mountains, is an ideal location for a preparatory school. The proximity to Dartmouth offers many unusual advantages, and a certain inspiration is gained from contact with college men, a strengthening of a boy's purpose to acquire that development which he sees going on all around him.

Four distinct courses of study are offered—a four-year Preparatory Course preparing for the College Entrance Board Examinations and accredited to Colleges admitting by Certificate; a two-year Intensive Course for boys over sixteen who have lost time through sickness or who have attended a school where no emphasis was laid on the exacting details of preparation for College Entrance; a one-year Preparatory Course for high school graduates; and a Junior Business Course.

The enrollment is limited to sixty and, with an average of seven students to a class, much personal attention and direction are possible. Associated with the Director are able instructors, specialists in their subjects, chosen for their fitness to lead young men as well as for their scholastic ability.

The School is represented in Football, Baseball, Basketball, Hockey, Golf, Tennis and Skiing. Hanover is widely known as a home of winter sports. Under the supervision of the Athletic Director every student takes daily exercise. Riding horses are available at a nominal charge.

THE LONGWOOD DAY SCHOOL.

36 Browne Street, Brookline, Mass.

ROBERT LINCOLN CUMMINGS, B.S., A M.,
Head Master.

The Longwood Day School offers young boys an opportunity to work and play under the influence, guidance and supervision of specially trained, sympathetic and understanding men and women teachers. There are men teachers above the Fourth Grade.

There are classes from Kindergarten to three years from College. Boys are thoroughly prepared for the leading College Preparatory Schools and especially for the examinations of the Secondary Examination Board.

The Program includes many self-motivated, purposeful activities that grow naturally from the boys' interests and needs. Playground activities are carefully supervised. A special building is devoted to the Arts and Crafts. Music is included in the program, with opportunity for studying the piano and violin. French is given a prominent place in the curriculum.

Each morning the school meets for Chapel services conducted by a Clergyman who is also a member of the faculty, teaching History and Literature. Religious Education, interdenominational in character, is included in the Program

THE HUNTINGTON SCHOOL FOR BOYS,

CHARLES H. SAMPSON, B.S., Ed M., Head Master.

A well equipped Private Day School of the conservatively progressive type. The student body is divided into five forms. Boys enrolled in the School are preparing for the leading colleges not only in New England but throughout the country. The School has the privilege of entering boys in College by the certificate method. Complete preparation for the College Board Examinations is offered in all courses.

While scholastic attainment is primarily emphasized, the School does not neglect proper attention to the complete development of the individual boy. Every boy is expected to participate daily in some form of physical exercise, including organized play, sports and games.

A coeducational summer session is for those who wish to make up conditions in grammar and high school subjects and for those who wish preparation for the September examinations.

The equipment available includes Classrooms of standard size, Science Laboratories, a complete Gymnasium with three Basketball Courts, Swimming Pool, Running Track, and six acres of Outdoor Playing Fields.

THE FESSENDEN SCHOOL, West Newton, Mass.
FREDERICK J. FESSENDEN, A.M., Head Master.

For over thirty years this School has prepared boys from five to fourteen for leading Secondary Schools. An effort is made to awaken a boy's interest in his own progress and to develop an enthusiasm for his work and to teach him how to study and to think clearly.

Within ten miles of Boston, the School is easily accessible. The property includes forty acres of land on Albemarle Road, overlooking the golf course and surrounding attractive country.

Unusual facilities are available for Golf, Tennis, Baseball, Soccer, and Football as well as Winter Sports. Ample time is devoted to exercise either outdoors or in a large Gymnasium.

The boys receive personal care and individual attention, especially the younger ones. All live in dormitories or cottages with the masters. A sprinkler system has been installed.

All the boys have Music and there is opportunity for Art and Manual Training. The older boys have classes in current events, and Saturday evening there are various entertainments.

The day boy charge varies. The house boy fee, including tuition, residence and laundry, is fourteen hundred dollars.

GOVERNOR DUMMER ACADEMY, South Byfield, Mass.

EDWARD W. EAMES, M.A., Head Master.

In 1761 the Royal Governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony, William Dummer, bequeathed his farm of 360 acres with the income therefrom, to establish a Grammar School for boys. This School, thirty miles from Boston in the beautiful, rolling North Shore country, retains much of the charm and tradition of old New England.

Governor Dummer is a genuinely small School of 100 boys and 16 masters. This makes it possible to give each boy personal attention, and to maintain a friendly, homelike atmosphere. The oil painting of Governor Dummer here reproduced hangs in the hall of the Mansion House, a beautiful and historic dwelling, built by the Governor about 1716 and now occupied by the Head Master.

BEACON SCHOOL, Wellesley Hills, Mass.

WILLIAM V. TREVOY, A.M., Director.

At the Beacon School 75 boys 13-19 live a wholesome, normal life while preparing for College. A general High School Course is offered and special courses in Business Training are available. An intimate home life with one teacher for every ten boys assures a careful study of the problems and progress of each boy. Character building is stressed and student participation in management is encouraged. Special opportunities in Art and Music are offered; the School Orchestra is directed by a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The large country estate, ten miles from Boston, is ideal in location and the city's cultural and recreational advantages are used as a means of educating the boys. All sports featured by secondary schools are given due attention,—Football, Baseball, Basketball, Hockey, and Tennis. Some suitable form of exercise is required of each boy.

Interest in international questions is stimulated by conferences of Foreign Students which have now, in their fifth year, become an important part of the School Life. Every effort is made to broaden the outlook and the contacts of the School Group.

DEERFIELD ACADEMY, Deerfield, Massachusetts.
FRANK L. BOYDEN, Amherst; Ped D , LL D , Director.

Deerfield, founded in 1797, is one of the leading Schools for boys. Several of its buildings date from Pre-Revolutionary days. Its ideals are true to the old traditions of scholarship and moral training, but the Academy of today is thoroughly modernized and completely in touch with the life of the times.

The four year Course of Study corresponds to that of the senior high school, and prepares students for any College or University. The School Certificate is accepted by all Colleges admitting without examination. The Boarding Department is exclusively for boys.

Dormitories are splendidly equipped, as are the recently completed Science and Academy Buildings and the Gymnasium.

Fields, hills, and streams are part of the School Campus, and each student participates in some form of daily athletic exercise and sport,—Baseball, Hockey, Football, Tennis or Basketball.

Glee Club and Dramatics are popular extra-curricular activities. Each year members of the Senior Class present a Shakespearean comedy as part of the regular Commencement exercises.

A Deerfield boy is offered thorough College Preparation and a wholesome social life with his fellows.

BERKSHIRE MEMORIAL BUILDING

BERKSHIRE SCHOOL, Sheffield, Massachusetts.

SEAVER B. BUCK, A.B., Harvard, Head Master.

The School Estate of three hundred fifty acres, four miles from Sheffield, lies at an elevation of nine hundred feet on the eastern slope of Mt. Everett, overlooking the beautiful valley of the Housatonic.

The Five Year Course of Study is designed to fit boys for College or for any of the Scientific Schools. It is the belief of the Head Master that most of the unsatisfactory work in School results not from native stupidity, but from slovenly habits of study. The study hours are treated, therefore, as of first importance, and are directed with the utmost care.

The number of masters is sufficient to give whatever individual assistance may be necessary, and boys whose work is unsatisfactory are required to make up their deficiencies daily under the direction of the master who teaches the subject.

There are unusual opportunities for open air exercise, apart from the organized school athletics. For boys who require it, classes in special gymnastic work are arranged under the supervision of the Physical Director. A resident trained nurse is in attendance.

The School is non-sectarian. On Sunday mornings boys may attend church in Sheffield if their parents desire it, on week-day mornings and on Sunday afternoons there is a simple religious service at the School, conducted by the Head Master or visiting minister.

A Student Council of eleven, chosen each term by the School from among the older Boys, cooperates with the Head Master in matters of discipline where the general interest of the School is concerned.

The School awards scholarships yearly to the amount of twenty-five thousand dollars, which are distributed for the most part in sums from three hundred to five hundred dollars, so as to meet the need of as many boys as possible. This applies to students already in residence and to new applicants.

The charge for Board and Tuition for the school year is $1500.

C. THURSTON CHASE, JR., A.B., Head Master.

Here is a community of interesting youngsters, living and working together, under the friendly guidance of experienced men and women who know and love young boys.

These lads of seven, twelve, or fourteen have fifty acres of wooded hillside over which to roam; the companionship of other desirable boys of similar age, healthy care that exceeds that of the average home, and skilled instruction not merely in studies but in Swimming, Skiing, Skating, Hockey, Baseball, Football, Soccer and countless other accomplishments that will mean so much to him through Preparatory School and College.

Here a boy finds himself one of a large family where to respect the rights of others is the thing to do. He finds some phase of Athletics, Art, or study in which he can achieve success and then develop self-confidence and independence. Here each boy grows to feel not only a pride in his own achievement, but also a responsibility for the success of his group.

But the boy's major job is to become so thoroughly grounded in elementary subjects that he will be a credit to himself and his family at Andover, Exeter, Deerfield, Hotchkiss, St. Mark's, or the score of schools of similar standing.

PORTSMOUTH PRIORY AND SCHOOL,

Portsmouth, Rhode Island.

VERY REV. DOM J. HUGH DIMAN, O.S.B., Prior.

DR. G. C. BATEMAN, Head Master.

Portsmouth Priory School, opened in 1926, is attached to Portsmouth Priory, which is a house of the English Benedictine Congregation.

The School aims both to train boys in the Catholic Faith, and to give them a liberal education for the leading Colleges and Universities. The curriculum covers six years, Grades VII and VIII, and four years of high school. At the end of the sixth year boys take the C. E. B. Examinations under Plan B.

In the organization of instruction, careful attention is paid not only to content but also to such questions as proper methods of study and individual differences in ability. Classes are small, organized in sets which group boys of similar advancement and capacities. Unsupervised study periods are few and short. Hours in class are correspondingly more numerous; it is expected that most of the work will be done there and faulty habits of study eliminated.

Situated in the country on the shore of Narragansett Bay, the campus of 120 acres with its abundant equipment for athletics makes possible a wide variety of outdoor activities—Football, Basketball, Baseball, Ice-skating, Hockey, Tennis, Golf, Swimming, Boating.

In an effort to enrich and develop boys' interests during their leisure hours and to create an agreeable social environment, organized hobbies are pursued under supervision—Art, Music, Dramatics, Natural Science, Photography, Typewriting, and numerous others. Under the "House Plan" the School is divided into two houses, each with its own library and common rooms, and all that provides a natural and pleasant center of daily life.

Canterbury School, founded in 1915, is a College Preparatory Boarding School for Catholic boys. It is conducted by a Corporation composed of prominent Catholic laymen among whom are Henry O. Havemeyer, Clarence H. Mackay, James A. Farrell, and Terence F. Carmody. It maintains the highest standards of discipline and scholarship, and gives a sound training in the doctrines and practices of the Catholic religion.

The Head Master and all the teachers are laymen. The chapel and religious services are under the direction of a diocesan priest appointed by the Bishop. The boys, from eleven to eighteen years old, represent the best type of American youth.

The school grounds, 135 acres at an elevation of 500 feet, are beautifully and healthfully situated, and provide space for Football, Baseball, Hockey, Track, Tennis, and Golf. There are three dormitories: North, built in 1928, Middle, renovated in 1926; South, built in 1927. A Gothic Chapel was finished in 1928. The Gymnasium (1924) contains locker-rooms, basketball floor, squash courts, and a 75 foot swimming pool.

Enrollment is limited to 95 boys. The School is remarkable for its excellent spirit of discipline and study, its pleasant and home-like atmosphere, its fine equipment, the character of its boys and masters, and its success in the College Board examinations.

Established by the Reverend and Mrs. Frank H. Bigelow to give young boys the best Elementary Training for outstanding Preparatory Schools, The Rectory School provides careful supervision and individual attention in an atmosphere free from strain and stress.

Excellent scholastic results are obtained because of small classes, which make possible a close cooperation between the masters and pupils. In addition to the standard subjects much attention is given to Art, Handwork, Music and Dramatics.

The School buildings and dormitories are spacious and home-like. Recently a beautiful Colonial residence adjoining the School was acquired for the home of Father and Mrs. Bigelow.

The health of the boys is regarded as of major importance. Mrs. Bigelow herself, with the School Nurse and House Mothers as assistants, gives constant attention to the physical welfare of each boy. The natural elevation of Pomfret, with its pure air, also contributes to maintaining the excellent health record of the School.

A full afternoon of play in the open is the rule, and there is ample opportunity on the 200 acres of school grounds for all Sports. On rainy days the Gymnasium is used.

THE ROXBURY SCHOOL, Cheshire, Connecticut.

A. N. SHERIFF, Head Master.

Roxbury has attained marked success in College Preparation by emphasizing the individual importance of each student. Following are the salient features.

FLEXIBILITY OF ORGANIZATION.

Instruction is in small classes, usually approximating five students. When advisable, boys may be taught alone or in groups of two or three. Students' Programs are arranged and revised to fit their individual requirements and capacities, as determined by careful study. The aim is thoroughness, and speed, the methods employed, by elimination of aimless effort and by stimulation to intellectual initiative, resourcefulness, and enthusiasm, result in rapidity of progress.

WELL-ROUNDED TRAINING.

Daily supervision of each boy is painstaking, but such as to encourage self-reliance, manliness, and self-respect. Close contact with masters of understanding is used to arouse students to a sense of their own inner power and to a willingness to assume responsibility. An important goal is the development of each boy's potentialities of mind and body.

Although non-sectarian, the School, in cooperation with parents, practices a sympathetic attitude toward the maintenance of each boy's religious observances, whatever his faith.

Physical Training is provided by the use of an adequately equipped Gymnasium and Athletic Fields. Students all participate in healthful recreation, and a great majority engage in Competitive Sports under the instruction of competent coaches.

Extra-curricular activities are maintained for the promotion of a generally healthful spirit.

GEORGE C. ST. JOHN, Head Master

The underlying purpose in the foundation of Choate was the desire to prove that the life of a family and the life of a school may be effectively combined; that a boy, while gaining the benefits that any good school must provide—efficient teaching, manly discipline, systematic exercise, and association with boys of purpose—need not lose the intimate, personal influence that should characterize his home—a genuine interest in his individuality, a friendly and compelling contact with maturer points of view, and an unconscious development in appreciation of all that “culture” stands for. Through the growth and organization of thirty-eight years (twenty-six of them under the present Head Master), this has been the distinguishing ideal of Choate; and the School of today is planned, and the personality and character of its masters hard sought, to give to its larger number of fellows both the same training and the same “atmosphere” that the Founders created for the four boys who made up the original school.

Above all, the School is unsparing in its efforts to strengthen in the boys’ minds high motives which shall control their lives.

THE MAIN BUILDING

THE TAFT SCHOOL, Watertown, Connecticut.HORACE D. TAFT, Head Master.

The object of the School is to give boys a sound training, physical, mental and moral, and to make them strong, manly and healthy men. A thorough preparation is given for any College or Scientific School.

The course of study covers five years, and it is very desirable that a boy enter as early as possible in the course. Twelve is the minimum age for the lowest class. Admission examinations are required in all cases.

The number of masters makes it possible for them to be in close touch with all the boys. A decided difference is made between the discipline of the younger boys and the older.

Religious exercises are held each day in the new Bingham Auditorium. Sunday morning school service is conducted in Christ Church, Watertown.

The School instruction aims at more than thorough College Preparation. Classes are small enough to enable instructors to judge of the thoroughness of each boy's preparation of the day's work, to insist upon his best efforts, and to give him such supervision as is necessary.

Physical development is in charge of a regular master of the School, who has had special training and devotes all his time to it. All boys are expected to take vigorous part in athletics, unless parents request to have them excused. Football, Baseball, Basketball and Hockey, in each of which the boys form three teams, are part of the regular exercise of the School.

Recent endowment has made possible several additions to the school plant. A new Infirmary and Service Building; the Charles Phelps Taft Hall containing Library, Common Room, Upper School Study Hall, Classrooms, and Dormitories; and the Bingham Auditorium have recently been constructed.

Pomfret School holds one of the foremost places in the field of Secondary Education. It furnishes sound learning and Christian education by instruction in all studies required for admission to University or College, but this particular objective is not its sole purpose. It develops throughout its Course thorough training for those planning to enter into active work upon graduation.

The Five Year Course of Study corresponds to the work offered in Junior and Senior High Schools. Applicants to the first form should not be under twelve years of age. Small classes, directed by able instructors who are all specialists in their subjects, make possible a maximum of personal attention and direction.

The extensive School Grounds have an ideal site in the country town of Pomfret. Full athletic and recreational equipment provides for all Sports, Games and Physical Exercise in which each boy takes a vigorous part.

Friends of Pomfret School have recently provided generous means for its growth and equipment, making possible a beautiful Auditorium Building, Chemical and Physical Laboratories, a central Heating Plant and a rehabilitated Gymnasium.

Pomfret continues to carry out the ideal of its founder, that of fitting boys to enter College or Business with the most sound background—mental, moral and physical.

AVON OLD FARMS, Avon, Connecticut.

PERCY GAMBLE KAMMERER, Ph.D., Provost

Avon Old Farms is a Boarding School for boys from twelve to eighteen, founded and built by Theodate Pope, Mrs John Wallace Riddle

Avon is completely equipped not only for College Preparation but also with unique facilities for the all-round development of each boy. The aim of the school is to offer a broad cultural education. In this belief classroom and laboratory work is supplemented by work on the farm, in the forest, and in the shops.

Avon's twenty buildings, already built, include Dormitories, Class Rooms, Masters' Houses, a Refectory, Bank, Post Office, Science Building, Power House, Smithy and Carpenter Shop. The property comprises nearly three thousand acres—woodland, through which two trout streams flow, crossed by several miles of bridle paths, and low land for agricultural purposes. The School offers an unequalled opportunity, through its wide program of activities, for educating the whole boy.

STONY BROOK SCHOOL, Stony Brook, L. I., N. Y.
FRANK E. GAEBELEIN, Litt.D., Head Master.

Less than two hours from New York City and easily accessible to other large centers, the thirty-five acre property of Stony Brook with its rolling woodland, fields, and nearby bathing beach offers excellent opportunities for a Boys' School.

The Course of Study in the Upper School, the first year corresponding to the Eighth Grade, thoroughly prepares for College, Technical School or Business. Small classes permitting much individual attention enable students to advance rapidly.

The separately organized Junior School offers work corresponding to the Fifth through the Seventh Grades.

The work is fully accredited, both by the Middle States Association and the New York State Regents, and during the past ten years the large majority of the graduates have entered more than sixty Colleges and Universities.

Stony Brook aims to develop not only a trained mind, but strength of character, and a sincere Christian spirit. Bible instruction is properly correlated with the usual Secondary School subjects in a manner that stresses the content and teaching of Scripture as a whole rather than any one denominational interpretation.

Every boy physically able is required to participate in some form of Outdoor Sport coached by experienced physical directors. A balance is maintained between the Religious, Academic, and Recreative Activities of the School.

Lawrenceville, N. J.

MATHER A. ABBOTT, M.A., Litt.D., Head Master.

Lawrenceville is an endowed boarding school for boys, originally established in 1810 and reorganized in 1881 on the John C. Green Foundation. Its plan of operation is an American adaption of the English House system. The School is under the control of a Board of Trustees

Lawrenceville is distinctively a College Preparatory School, and its graduates have entered practically all the more important Colleges and Universities in the country. Approximately sixty per cent of each graduating class enters Princeton and Yale.

The strong faculty of fifty-five Masters, graduates of leading universities, endeavor to combine physical, social, moral, and religious training with effective teaching.

The School property comprises more than four hundred acres of ground, with modern buildings and equipment.

There are thirteen Residence Houses, with accommodations for about five hundred boys. Every House is under the supervision of experienced resident masters. The Upper House is reserved for eighty boys of the Fifth (or highest) Form. An Alumni War Memorial Building accommodates the one hundred boys of the Lower School.

Physical training is required of all boys and is supervised by specially trained masters. The Gymnasium is near the Golf Links, the Running Track, the Playing Fields, and the Tennis Courts. In addition to School athletic teams, there are Junior and Senior house teams in all branches of sport.

A number of scholarships are available. Parents and boys should visit the school before making application.

"Pinehurst," School Lane, Germantown.
Philadelphia, Pa.

RICHARD MOTT GUMMERE, Ph.D , M A , Head.

Founded upon the traditions of early Colonial Days, since 1925 this has been operated as a Country Day School. It aims to combine the finish of a Private School with the democracy of a Public Institution, and to satisfy the vocational element needed by the American boy of today without diminishing the standards of a Liberal Arts course. To the Colonial school building were added in 1932 a biological laboratory, an art studio, a spare classroom, a study hall, four squash courts and a Junior School extension to the gymnasium.

Five, four and three years respectively are required to complete the work of Junior, Middle and Senior Schools. The latter prepares for Universities, Colleges, and Scientific and Engineering Schools.

Art, Manual Training, Nature Study, Visual Geography, Museum visits, Music Appreciation, Literary Experimentation, are part of the curriculum.

Two Gymnasiums, Indoor Play Space, Track, Jumping Pits, Football Gridirons, Baseball Diamonds, Soccer Fields, Tennis Courts, Squash Courts, provide for the exercise and training of 600 boys.

THE HARRY ELKINS WIDENER MEMORIAL SCIENCE BUILDING
THE HILL SCHOOL, Pottstown, Pennsylvania.

JAMES I. WENDELL, M.A., Head Master.

The Hill School began its eightieth year in 1930, as an endowed institution, conducted not for profit and administered by a Board of Trustees, composed of alumni and friends, through a Head Master appointed by the Board.

The School aims to combine with scholastic efficiency, consideration of each boy's individual needs, correction and direction of physical tendencies, the formation of right habits of study, and maintenance of social and moral conditions favorable to the development of clean, vigorous character.

Applications for admission must bear the favorable endorsement of, or satisfactory reference to, alumni or parents of present or past members of the School. Generous scholarship aid is available.

Special stress is laid upon the careful direction of extra-curricular activities: Debating, Musical, Dramatic and Literary Clubs, and three School publications.

Physical Training is required of all. Complete equipment, providing unusual opportunities for recreation and physical development, includes a modern Gymnasium and Games Room, two Swimming Pools, a Golf Course, Tennis, Basketball and Squash Courts, Baseball Diamonds and Cage, Football Fields, Cinder and Board Running Tracks, Rifle Range and Traps for clay pigeon shooting. A preventive medicine program instituted in 1922 has produced unparalleled health records.

A new Science Building is now in use. The recently completed Hobbies Building encourages the wise use of leisure time.

THE HAVERFORD SCHOOL, Haverford, Pa.

EDWIN M. WILSON, Sc.D., Head Master.

A Boarding and Day School for boys, nine miles west of Philadelphia, on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Haverford is in an exclusively residential suburb and educational center. The Haverford College campus adjoins the school campus. Bryn Mawr College is a mile distant.

The boarding department is limited to seventy-five, insuring to the pupils the advantages of individual attention and the guarded home life so difficult to secure except in a small school.

While the School aims at thorough general training it is distinctively a College Preparatory School, and practically all its graduates enter College. They have had remarkable success in passing the admission examinations, and in maintaining high standing in the leading Colleges and Universities.

There are Six Forms in the School. The average age for admission to the First Form is twelve years. There is a Junior School of six grades, attended by day pupils.

The classroom instruction is in small groups and is supplemented by individual teaching for those who require it.

The School encourages and requires every pupil to engage systematically in some form of outdoor athletics. The open country about Haverford and the ample grounds afford opportunity for all sports in season: Football, Soccer, Tennis, Swimming, Hockey, Basketball, Squash, Skating, Track and Baseball.

R. J. SHORTLIDGE, A.B., A.M., Head Master.

In 1894 Jacob Tome founded a Day School for boys and girls of the community. Later a non-denominational Boarding School for boys was established on the plateau overlooking the Susquehanna River. Through his gifts, Mr. Tome made possible educational opportunities and ambitions of first rank.

The complete plant and beautiful campus adapt themselves ideally to the harmonious life and activities of 200 boys, the masters and their families. Houses and Dormitories provide large single rooms for nearly all boys. The atmosphere of the School is marked by friendliness among masters and boys.

In the Administration Building are Library; Assembly Hall with pipe organ; Classrooms; four Laboratories for all sciences; and three Woodworking, Lathe, and Machine Shops.

Athletic equipment includes a large Gymnasium which houses a modern talking picture machine; Swimming Pool; ten Tennis Courts; a nine-hole Golf Course; Quarter-mile Track; fields for Football, Baseball, Soccer, Lacrosse, Handball. An Ice Hockey team is developed on the artificial rinks of Baltimore. Health and physical development are the essential objectives of the Athletic Program; corrective exercises and instruction in rest and diet form part of the routine.

The Educational Ideal of Tome is to develop each boy individually, to release his abilities, to help him define his purposes and objectives, to prepare him to make the next step into College or Special School or Business. The educational work is measured by College Entrance Examinations, Aptitude Tests, and the Tests of the Educational Records Bureau.

IN THE CATHEDRAL CLOSE UNDER THE SHADOW OF THE NATIONAL CATHEDRAL

ST. ALBANS SCHOOL, Washington, D. C.

BISHOP OF WASHINGTON, President.

REV. ALBERT HAWLEY LUCAS, B.S., M A , Head

St. Albans, the National Cathedral School for Boys, was established in 1909 by the gift of Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnston, niece of President Buchanan and Mistress of the White House during his administration. It is part of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia.

Four miles northwest of the Capital, in the Close with its 67 acres of meadows and woodland, St. Albans overlooks the City of Washington and beyond to the hills of the Potomac.

College Preparation is stressed in both Lower and Upper Departments,—not by cramming for examinations in the last few years, but by laying a broad and generous foundation in the early Forms and insisting on accuracy and thoroughness.

The Lower School building contains Classrooms, Art, Manual Training, Music and Play Rooms, Lockers and Showers, and Masters' Apartments.

On the 10 acre athletic field are Football and Baseball Fields. In addition to Tennis and Outdoor Basketball Courts, the younger boys have their own Playing Field.

The School aims to turn unintentional boys into intentional men and believes this is best done by giving the spiritual, intellectual, and physical sides of life their proper values.

EDWIN B. KING, M.A., Yale, Head Master.

The outstanding characteristics of Stuyvesant — individual attention in both studies and outdoor activities — create an unusual school.

The six year Course of Study, outlined by the Secondary Education Board, prepares for the College Board Examinations, and a strong General Course fits Boys for Business Life. There are received also a limited number of smaller boys into the Lower School.

Frequent trips are made in the school bus to Washington to visit the Houses of Congress, the government buildings, and the numerous Museums and Galleries for which the Capital is famous; also to Arlington and Mt. Vernon.

Ideal location in Piedmont, Virginia, in the heart of the fox-hunting country, has naturally given Riding and Hunting a foremost place in School athletic activities. Boys who have attained sufficient ability may hunt with the Warrenton Hounds. Team activities include Football, Baseball, Tennis, Boxing and Track. Frequent excursions for weekend trips to places of nearby interest — neighboring battlefields, the Caverns of Luray, peaks of the Blue Ridge, and the Shenandoah River — give an interest and zest for Outdoor Life and Camping.

F. A. M. TABOR, M A , Head Master.

This School prepares young boys for St. Paul's, St Mark's, Groton, Pomfret, and the larger Eastern Preparatory Schools, and offers them unique advantages in a climate singularly healthful and bracing. From October to May there is scarcely a day when the boys cannot be in the open air the whole of their play time; and, in addition, Aiken and its surrounding countryside offer exceptional facilities for all forms of sport and outdoor exercise.

The School Plant is well away from the town and close to Eustis Park. The houses, exceptionally well built and brightly furnished, with spacious rooms, are modern and up to date in every way. Outdoor classrooms, sleeping porches and a separate infirmary are among the features.

A high standard of scholarship is maintained by small classes and individual attention. Pupils may arrange for work in Music, Art, or other special subjects.

Riding, Hunting, Polo, Rifle and Trap Shooting, under careful supervision, and the usual School Games are available.

WILLIAM OLIVER STEVENS, Ph D , Litt.D , Head Master.

Cranbrook, a day and boarding school for boys, endowed by Mr. and Mrs. George G. Booth, is in a northerly suburb of Detroit. It is the largest unit thus far developed in the cultural group consisting of five schools and a church, for which these donors have provided by gifts totaling $17,500,000.

Instruction, which is primarily for college preparation, is offered in all grades from seventh to twelfth. A post graduate course is also given. Teaching is directed toward developing boys individually. Personality has been a basic consideration in the selection of the faculty, which averages one instructor for every ten students.

The school occupies a beautiful, hilly site of 94 acres, containing a small lake. Natural facilities, added to extensive playgrounds, football fields, tennis and handball courts, hockey rinks and track, encourage year round sports. Athletics are planned to reach every boy. Coaching is done by instructors, who work, play and live with their pupils. A resident physician and nurse, with a fully equipped infirmary, and distinguished consultants, take care of the students' health. Design and adornment of all buildings fulfill the donors' ambition to provide for education in an inspiring beautiful environment.

The exceptional resources of Cranbrook Institute of Science and Cranbrook Academy of Art are available to boys especially interested in the sciences, arts, and artistic handicrafts.

Cranbrook School is affiliated with the Episcopal Church but aims at a religious and moral atmosphere in no way sectarian.

LAKE FOREST ACADEMY, Lake Forest, Ill.

JOHN WAYNE RICHARDS, Head Master.

In a beautiful residential suburb of Chicago, this School prepares for leading Universities

The New Plan in Education was put into practice in 1930. The results are amazingly gratifying. Each subject is given ninety minutes in the daily schedule, the first half for class work, the second forty-five minutes for directed preparation of the next day's work.

Each day a new subject comes first on the "staggered, rotating schedule" so that no subject has precedence or preferred position. Every fifth period is given over to independent written review and research on the pupil's own responsibility. The Study Hall Library is equipped to interest boys, who have completed their class work, in good reading outside the curriculum.

Afternoons are spent at Golf or Tennis, on the Athletic Fields or in the Gymnasium with its Swimming Pool. Scientific physical training and opportunity for team competition are offered every boy.

L. R. GIGNILLIAT, Brig. Gen., Reserve, D S.M., Supt.

Culver was founded in 1894 by Henry Harrison Culver. In June 1932 it was transferred by his family from their private ownership to The Culver Educational Foundation in perpetuity.

Without thought of profit, Culver has devoted its energies and resources to the Education of the Whole Boy. Its training is broad enough to prepare a boy for any college or for entrance into the business field upon graduation. Emphasis is placed on the development of the individual and his capacity to think. Each boy's program of studies is designed to meet his individual needs according to his aptitude, interest and future plans. The integrated curriculum gives well rounded development.

The educational features of military training have been utilized at Culver since its beginning in developing character and teaching the value of discipline and cooperation.

The enrollment of the school is national in character. As a result of the flexibility of the curriculum, 494 Culver graduates are enrolled during the current year in 131 colleges and universities in 38 states and two foreign countries.

Culver, located in Northern Indiana, on 1000 acres along Lake Maxinkuckee, has unusually complete facilities for every phase of a boy's growth and happiness through the pre-college years.

The combination of altitude, dry atmosphere and abundant sunshine makes the climate of New Mexico particularly healthful. The School is thirty-five miles northwest of Santa Fé, in the belt of big pine timber in the Jemez Mountains.

The Course of Study covers six years previous to College Entrance. The boys progress by subjects rather than by years and may be retarded or advanced in one subject without affecting other courses. The work is planned to give a background of cultural knowledge and discernment, to develop methods and intellectual interest in further study.

Riding is the chief extra-curricular activity. Each boy is assigned a Saddle Horse and equipment on arrival. On Saturday the boys ride by patrols, each with a master, to some point of interest in the country. Camp May, the School Cabin near the crest of the Jemez, makes a convenient base for weekend trips to higher peaks, to trout streams, to the "Valles".

Athletics are intramural, and suited to the entertainment and development of the boy.

ABBOT ACADEMY, Andover, Massachusetts.

Miss BERTHA BAILEY, Sc.B , Principal.

Abbot Academy is located in one of the oldest and most attractive New England towns. The cultural advantages of Boston are easily available. The well-equipped Buildings include Laboratories, Astronomical Observatory and a Library of 8000 volumes.

There is a strong General Course with Art, Music and Drama. The College Preparation is recommended by all Eastern Colleges.

MIRA B. WILSON, A.B , B.D., Principal.

The purpose of Northfield Seminary is to prepare girls for life. To this end, a broad general curriculum is offered in addition to a thorough College Preparatory course. A modern Studio

Building and other special facilities create exceptional opportunities in Music.

Under trained supervision, girls perform much of their own domestic work. This, with a large income from endowment and annual gifts, makes the rate unusually low.

Northfield was founded in 1879 by D. L. Moody who also founded the nearby Mount Hermon School for Boys. Together, these associated Schools are the largest preparatory institution in the U. S. (See also p. 808).

OAK GROVE, Vassalboro, Maine.

MR. and MRS. ROBERT EVERETT OWEN, Principals.

A Friends' School for Girls

Oak Grove is distinguished for the homelike atmosphere in which each student receives individual thought. The school spirit fosters the development of personality and character.

Essentially a College Preparatory School where scholarship is emphasized under highly trained and devoted teachers, Oak Grove is accredited to the Colleges which admit by Certificate and prepares thoroughly for the C. E. B. examinations.

A General Academic Course offers credit for Music, Art and Expression. A special year of Graduate Work gives intensive training for College, Secretarial Science or a cultural program. The Junior Department admits younger girls to the Seventh and Eighth Grades.

The Buildings crown a sunny hillside near a grove of pines and oaks. The new Dormitory is completely fireproof. A spacious Gymnasium is well equipped with up to date apparatus, and the physical education and recreation are directed by experts who promote outdoor activities and sponsor student leadership.

An attractive campus with new Athletic Fields, and extensive natural groves with Woodland Bridle Paths encourage joyous outdoor life.

LOUISE FAY, B.Ed., Principal

Thorough preparation for College or Professional Schools in a wholesome environment, attention to individual needs of girls from six to eighteen, progressive methods and a faculty of college women chosen for their successful experience and sympathetic understanding, characterize the Waltham School.

The location, in a secluded section of Waltham, makes the Country Day School which supplements the Boarding Department attractive to families within a radius of ten miles. Attractive grounds afford every opportunity for Outdoor Sports.

Emphasis is placed upon character development. The social life is interesting, the school spirit one of friendly cooperation.

THE BEST SCHOOL FOR YOUR GIRL

WHICH IS IT? WHERE IS IT?

It may have been the best school for your neighbor's daughter but perhaps Your Girl is entirely different.

Perhaps it takes a different type of woman to handle Your Girl, to understand her, and to succeed with her.

Does Your Girl need suppression or does she need drawing out, pressure or encouragement, the competition of numbers or individual attention and help?

Does she need snubbing or a dose of hero-worship?

Does she need efficient teaching, individual tutoring, sympathetic encouragement, or hard driving?

Not Any School will supply all these, but there are some that will afford one or the other.

Selecting the Environment in which she is to shape herself, to form her habits, to make her friends, is a portentous task.

Your Wisdom or Your Failure will do much to determine the type of woman she is to be.

Is not the Selection of a School just as deserving of Expert Advice as the Making of a Will?

Miss ELIZA KELLAS, LL.D., Principal.

Emma Willard School, organized 1814, is for girls of High School age. In an outlying residential section, on a plateau 400 feet above sea level, it is insured pure invigorating air and commands an extensive view of the Hudson and Mohawk valleys, the Catskills, and the lower Adirondacks.

About ninety per cent of the girls prepare for College and the majority of the graduates enter College or University either by the College Entrance Board Examinations or by Certificate. The General Course offers a wider choice of studies with special opportunities in Music and Art.

The School Grounds, covering over sixty acres, include Hockey Fields and Tennis and Basketball Courts and make possible free out of door life during the entire school year.

The School Buildings, six in number, are of gray stone and thoroughly fireproof in construction. They are furnished with all provision for the comfort of a well ordered home and a well equipped School. Schoolrooms, Laboratories and Gymnasium have been planned and equipped under the direction of experts. The Residence is separated from the main School Building, thus making it possible to have there a free, natural life and an atmosphere of quiet and rest.

College trained teachers of excellent experience and forceful personality have charge of the work. Each student is considered individually, and when occasion demands, special arrangements are made for her. Emphasis is placed on work well done and the gain in power to think and to do, as well as on ability to meet the requirements of College Preparation.

The government of the School is based on mutual understanding between teacher and pupil, the honor of the students being relied upon rather than arbitrary restrictions.

NICHOLS JUNIOR COLLEGE,Dudley, Massachusetts.*JAMES LAWSON CONRAD, B B A , President

The old Nichols Academy, founded in 1815, but inoperative for the last twenty years, was reopened in September, 1931 as a Junior College of Business Administration and Executive Training. From the start its place in the educational world has been assured.

The first Junior College in the East exclusively for Men, this is also the first in the East to offer Business Administration Courses with full campus and dormitory equipment.

A mid-year course commencing February 1 is especially for mid-year High School graduates and for those Men who are not attracted by the four year courses of the Liberal Arts College. Students entering at this time will continue work at the School through the summer, completing the two year course in one and a half years.

Attractively situated in the Dudley Hills section of Massachusetts, Nichols is readily accessible but apart from the distractions of the large cities. The spacious 75 acre Campus makes possible the full development of college life with every opportunity for Athletics.

The exceedingly practical course, under the direction of men of proven ability, provides the required subjects of the ordinary four year College of Business Administration with a few essential electives and cultural subjects.

Students are fitted for positions of trust and responsibility as Business Executives and yet have a cultural background without the necessity of spending two extra years in the study of unrelated subjects.

THE EXPERIENTIAL GROUPS,

353 West 57th St., New York City.

MRS. MARION COATS GRAVES, Chairman

The Experiential Groups are planned to meet the problems of the girl today, to meet the needs of families who are interested in helping girls from eighteen to twenty-five to stand on their own feet. The Groups offer a new type of education, a flexible curriculum.

New York is used by the Groups as their laboratory. Here are being worked out daily problems in industry, in merchandising, in government, in social welfare, in the fine arts with which young women should be familiar.

The girls who share the work of the Groups feel a pride, an independence. They know that they are working in a real world—that they are sharing in discovery and adventure. They live at the Clubhouse of the American Woman's Association, in contact with older women who are doing the world's work.

The name "Experiential" is used, meaning that the curriculum grows out of everyday experience and is not merely a matter of theory as to what a student ought to know. Girls, in the interim between school and the making of their own home, crave experience. The answer lies in introducing them to the growing world in which they must live.

CHICAGO TEACHERS COLLEGE,

504 Wrightwood Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MABELLE BABCOCK BLAKE, B.A., Ed.D., President.

Opportunities are offered here for young women, graduates of high schools and preparatory schools, whose needs are not met by the regular four year academic college course.

Four year Teacher Training courses prepare for Pre-Kindergarten, Kindergarten and Primary grade work. There is a two year course for Teacher Assistants.

In 1934 an Exploratory Year with opportunities to discover interests and capacities will be offered to secondary school graduates. The second year may include specialized training along the line of greatest appeal, conducted in connection with various vocational institutions in Chicago.

For college graduates there are courses in Education, Research Projects in the Elementary Day School, and Homemaking courses in the Project House, the latter open to undergraduates and young married women, giving training in all factors of Homemaking, Food Values, Housing, Budgets, Clothing, Management and esthetic values of family life.

A Dormitory, College House, well organized and supervised, is an integral part of the College.

WARD-BELMONT, Nashville, Tennessee

JOHN W. BARTON, A.B., LL.D., M.A., President

JUNIOR COLLEGE Ward-Belmont is one of the outstanding Junior Colleges for Girls of the South and Middle West. For the past five years more than 70% of the Junior College graduates have entered institutions of higher learning, including the leading Women's Colleges in the East. In 1932, 99 out of 142 Junior College graduates received advanced college credit.

In addition to the Liberal Arts work, special opportunities are offered to girls who wish to specialize in Home Economics, Physical Education, Secretarial Work, Expression, Art and Music.

The equipment is unusually complete. Eleven buildings, combining the best in modern school architecture, stand on a 40 acre estate in Nashville, the center of southern education and culture.

The School has an unsurpassed health record. The campus has facilities for many outdoor activities, with its Riding Ring, two Athletic Fields, Archery Range, four Tennis Courts and Basketball Court.

PREPARATORY SCHOOL, on the same Campus, has separate buildings of its own, but uses much of the Junior College equipment. Accredited to leading Colleges and Universities.

PERRY KINDERGARTEN NORMAL SCHOOL,
 25 Huntington Ave., Boston, Mass.
Mrs. HARRIOT HAMBLÉN JONES, Principal.

Since 1898 this School has prepared young women to become efficient Kindergarten and Primary Grade teachers. Nursery School training and preparation for Playground Game positions are now offered. Purposely a small school, with classes limited in numbers, it stresses character building through intimate, personal contact between instructors and pupils.

For the 3 year intensive course of training a student must have a diploma from an accredited high school or the equivalent training in a preparatory school of equal standing. Students with some normal school training may apply for special courses to complete the requirements for the Perry School diploma.

In the 3rd year Curriculum, through a cooperative arrangement with the Nursery Training Center of Boston, additional courses in theory and practice of Nursery Schools are offered under Miss Abigail Eliot to those specializing in Pre-School Education. Advanced work in the correction of reading disabilities is offered to selected Primary Grade student-teachers.

Through arrangements with Boston University, credit is given toward a degree.

THE WRIGHT ORAL SCHOOL,
1 Mount Morris Park, West, New York City.
JOHN DUTTON WRIGHT, Founder.
M. E. WINSTON, Principal.

Established 1894

The Wright Oral School, by the Speech Method, offers a complete education to boys and girls with varying degrees of impaired hearing. A large staff and a limited enrollment provides for careful and individual attention.

The Curriculum extends from the Nursery age to College entrance. A Correspondence Course, prepared by John Dutton Wright, founder of the School, enables parents to begin at home the training of their very young deaf children. Specialized work is given for the remnant of hearing and hearing aids are used in the training.

The atmosphere of the School is homelike and opportunities are available for indoor and outdoor sports.

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

THE PERKINS SCHOOL OF ADJUSTMENT,

ST. HUBERT'S. The Riviera School, Mouans-Sartoux, France.

E. W. HUCKEL, A B., Ed.M } Principals.
Mrs. HUCKEL

This Progressive Boarding and Day School gives to English Speaking Children resident in France an opportunity to learn the usual English subjects and to acquire an oral and written command of French under ideal conditions

Upper School provides regular English and French academic subjects. Lower School, for young children, is directed by Mrs. Huckel. The classes are small thus enabling each pupil to have individual attention and giving the teachers an opportunity to cope with their individual problems

The School Home, the historic Château de Mouans, is on a hill 500 feet above sea level, from which there are beautiful views of the Alps and the Esterel. It has central heating, and all modern conveniences

Everything is done to create an atmosphere of happy good fellowship and keenness for work. Classes are held out of doors during the greater part of the year.

On the 20 acre Grounds the Children have their own Gardens and play Baseball, Basketball and Football.

CHATEAU DE BURES, Bures par Orgeval,
S. et O., France.

ERIC M STEEL, M A., Lcs-L., Head Master.

PRYNS HOPKINS, Ph.B, Yale, M A., Columbia,
Ph D., London Univ., Chairman Board of Advisers.

An old Chateau situated in the Seine Valley only 17 miles from Paris is the home of this Modern Progressive School, organized to accommodate boys 7-18 and girls 7-13.

Its original suitability as a school site has been enhanced by the addition of modern buildings, including Dormitories with Sleeping Porches, Science Laboratories, Theatre Auditorium, Gymnasium, Manual Training Shop and Laundry.

Students are given intensive training in oral and written French and German while preparing for C E. B. Examinations. The School has won important academic successes — notably the Trinity Scholarship, Cambridge, 1931.

Fresh air, regular habits, wholesome food from the school farm and daily participation in sports solve the health problem.

Among the extra curricular activities practised are Music, Dramatics, Scouting, Magazine editing, Printing, Manual Work of all kinds.

A Summer School is held at the Chateau in July. At Christmas and Easter, trips are conducted to Switzerland and the Riviera.

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

INSTITUTION SILLIG, Bellerive, La Tour de Peilz, near Vevey, Switzerland.
MAX SILLIG, Principal.

Bellerive, on the northern shore of Lake Geneva, has acquired international fame since its founding in 1836. The winter term, December to March, is spent in a modern building at Villars-sur-Bex, a winter resort of French Switzerland.

Excepting special preparatory classes, tuition is in French. Boys are prepared for the American C. E. B. Examinations held annually in Geneva.

Pupils admitted from 9 years of age, but Day Pupils over 13 are not accepted. A few American boys are enrolled. Excellent references in the United States

POLYGALA, Gstaad sur Montreux, Switz.
MME I. DE BONSTETTEN, Principal.

This Alpine Home School for girls and little boys emphasizes health and physical development under medical supervision and experienced, fully trained nurses.

Gstaad, 3600 feet above sea level, is dry, sunny, free from mist, and an ideal spot for delicate children.

Daily gymnastics, mountain excursions, sunbathing, air-rest cures, winter and summer outdoor life are features.

English, French and German are taught by University trained resident teachers and an English curriculum is followed according to the P.N.E.U. Method.

A homelike atmosphere and individual attention are assured and entire charge is taken of children whose parents are abroad.

For illustrated prospectus, list of references, and full particulars, address the Principal.

LA PELOUSE, Bex, Switzerland.

Mlle. LYDIE HEMMERLIN, Principal.

This coeducational school for girls from 5 years up to college entrance, and boys to 13 years, emphasizes creative work in all activities. Individual attention is given each pupil to develop independence and expression. French and Modern Languages are thoroughly studied and boys and girls are prepared for College Entrance.

In a beautiful and healthy situation, the School overlooks the Rhone Valley. Careful consideration is given to physical development and to outdoor sports. Vacation trips are featured.

COLLEGE MONTMORENCY, Paris, France.

15 Rue Henri Heine and 24 Rue Jasmin.

MME. D. A. PERRIER, Principal.

MME DE TRENQUALYE, Vice-Principal.

Established in 1920, this is a Finishing School and Junior College for a select and limited number of girls. The modern building is close to Bois de Boulogne.

The College maintains high scholastic standards and prepares for 'Civilisation Française' at the Sorbonne, the College Board Examinations and the French Baccalaureat. Sixty students have already graduated from the Sorbonne.

Twenty-five girls are enrolled in the Boarding Department. The Day School is for French girls. Weekends are free from studies and girls may arrange to spend them with their parents or join weekend trips.

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

BEDALES, Petersfield, Hants, England.

J. H. BADLEY, M.A., Head Master.

Established in 1893, this coeducational school — the first in England—receives American boys and girls. Conducted on modern lines, it stresses the individual development of each student.

The JUNIOR SCHOOL housing 50, in a separate building, takes children 4-12. Here the aim is to develop the child's powers in a healthy and organic manner, with special attention to hand-work, laying a sound basis for more academic courses later.

The MAIN SCHOOL has accommodation for 180, ranging in age from 11-19. Here a wide General Course of training is given, leading up to the School Certificate Examination or Matriculation (usually taken at the age of about 16) after which pupils may specialize in accordance with their individual bent and the requirements of the career they are to follow.

The estate of 150 acres comprises Playing Fields, large open air Swimming Pool, Gardens, and a Farm with opportunities for practical work and study.

Mr. Badley's book, "Bedales, a Pioneer School", gives a full account of the history and aims of the School.

Wrong, then, means self-deceit, "the turning away from life's imperatives, and the vain justifying of our desertion." The whole duty of man is "to do faithfully what life exacts in terms of the social bond which holds us together." In his discussion of honesty he discusses all the difficulties that lie in wait for those who tell a lie, arriving at shrewd old Ben Franklin's conclusion that honesty is the best policy.

To some this will seem a rather superficial treatment of the world of lies among which we live. Dr. Cabot's conception of honesty will be helpful to some, but he strikes no new foundations. A study of the mores and systems of morality of other peoples in other times and other climes would have made this a very different book.

But Dr. Cabot has been working with the people about him, his mind intent on a place and a time and the practical problems of morality which he meets daily. And to those of such restricted vision this will again prove an inspirational and helpful book with a decided trend toward the philosophical and with a little of the old Puritanical austerity.

OUR FUTURE

If John Dewey and practising medical men and neurologists of three continents are to be believed, the teaching of Alexander these past forty years holds more for the future of education and the future of the race than any other.

In the 1918 edition of this Handbook we reviewed his "Man's Supreme Inheritance" to learn "that man has only slowly and gradually attained consciousness and conscious control, that the ills which have developed with civilization, nervous disorders and increasing insanity, are due to dissociation of the higher nervous structures and functions, which are the basis of our conscious life, from the lower which are involved in the execution of bodily postures and movements; that the potentialities of the human being, physical, mental and spiritual, are vastly greater than has ever been realized or than the human mind in its present evolutionary stage is capable of realizing."

Mr. Alexander in a second book reviewed in the ninth edition of the Handbook explained the technique for extending conscious control of the individual. The Use of the Self, Dutton, 1932, by F. Matthias Alexander carries the subtitle "Its Conscious Direction in Relation to Diagnosis, Functioning and the Control of Reaction". An introduction by John Dewey reiterates his confidence and faith held for twenty years in the great importance of Mr. Alexander's researches and the technique he has developed to enable individuals to more fully gain conscious control over all the factors that make up self and personality. Dr. Dewey maintains that with the control we have gained over physical forces of the external world we have brought ourselves to a parlous state unless we gain further control over the use of ourselves. He again asserts that Mr. Alexander's methods, researches and discoveries correct and carry further the conception of the conditioned reflex.

"The technique of Mr. Alexander," he says, "gives to the educator a standard of psycho-physical health — in which what we call morality is included. It supplies also the 'means whereby' this standard may be progressively and endlessly achieved, becoming a conscious possession of the one educated. It provides therefore the conditions for the central direction of all special educational processes. It bears the same relation to education that education itself bears to all other human activities."

This third volume of Mr. Alexander tells us more in detail of how through his own disabilities he discovered and developed his new technique for gaining conscious control of that central control which involves the whole organism, mental and physical. He demonstrates more clearly that the so-called 'mental and physical' are not separate entities and that all training "must be based upon the indivisible unity of the human organism". To explain in detail the development of his technique, he applies it to the golfer who won't "keep his eyes on the ball", to the stutterer, to medical diagnosis.

Finally, he tells us of the training school he has established where teachers working with his pupils may acquire mastery of the technique he has developed. That Mr. Alexander's methods have not become more widely used must be in part due to his own excessive modesty. But for the assertions of John Dewey and foremost medical men in England and elsewhere and a very few educators, the far-reaching promise of his technique would remain unknown.

INDEX OF SCHOOLS

Here are indexed all schools described or listed in this 18th edition of the Handbook, with page reference to the Critical Text, the Supplementary Lists and the Illustrated Announcements.

The names of the directors and the post office addresses of those schools on which we have authoritative and up to date information make this a complete mailing list.

Names of directors and complete addresses, so far as we know them, of schools in the Supplementary Lists will be found by referring to the page indicated. In this Index will be found the names of directors and addresses received too late for inclusion in the body of the book.

No page reference is given for the schools as they appear in the Classified Lists of Schools to Meet Special Needs, pp. 709-786. The various classifications of these Lists will be found by referring to the Table of Contents, pp. 7-10.

A HANDBOOK OF SUMMER CAMPS

11th Edition, 1934

800 pages, 3500 Summer Camps Listed and Described. Over 200 illustrations, 9 maps, Round Corners, Crimson Silk Cloth, Gold Stamped, $6.00. Published May, 1934.

A Guide Book and Annual Survey for parents and others interested in summer camps, this book provides definite information about the summer camps individually and about the whole camping movement in its most significant phases and with consideration of its origins and influences.

Over 1200 Private Camps are described. The arrangement is geographical with brief description of the locality, supplemented by statistical information for each camp, giving the names and winter addresses of directors.

Organization Camps, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Camp Fire Girls, Y. M. H. A. and Y. W. H. A. Camps, Church Camps, Red Cross, Salvation Army Camps and Boy Rangers of America are given some 110 pages.

Classified Lists of Camps to Fill Special Needs will aid in finding any particular kind of camp.

Who's Who of directors whose camps are described in the critical text section is an alphabetical list of directors with names and addresses of camps.

Illustrated Announcements cross referenced from the critical text set forth the camps' own statements of their opportunities and features.

Classified Directories give particulars of Firms, Agencies and Periodicals serving the Summer Camps.

Nine Maps locate the camps specifically.

EDUCATIONAL COUNSEL FOR PARENTS

What School? What Camp?

1200 parents annually call on Mr. Sargent for help in solving their educational problems.

Five members of staff assist, each in his own field,—Boys, Girls, Special Schools, Summer Camps; etc.

Private Schools for Boys and Girls — information and catalogs supplied.

Summer Camps for Boys and Girls—those who run them and the ideals that actuate them are equally well known to Mr. Sargent.

Inquiries by mail which do not entail extensive investigation, can usually be answered gratis.

To facilitate complete understanding of the case, and make possible diagnosis and helpful advice, a blank form will be sent on request.

For consultation or extended correspondence and investigation, a suitable professional fee is charged those who are able to pay.

No Fee or Commission is ever accepted from a School or a Camp for any boy or girl registered through the influence of this office. Consequently we are free to render unprejudiced advice.

Porter Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.
